THE BEGONIAS.

A Most Interesting Family.

There is no more interesting class of plants, either for the amateur or professional florist, than this large genus. It embraces hundreds of species, besides thousands of varieties. Begonias are roughly divided into four sections as follows: Fibrous rooted or shrubby, old Fuchsioides being a good type of these; semi-tuberous, of which the now famous Gloire de Lorraine is an example; the true tuberous-rooted, summer flowering, and the well known Rex section, which is grown almost solely as an ornamental foliage plant. The writer can well remember, about 1857, a small plant of the Rex begonia being purchased in London with two leaves. The price was about $5 per leaf. We have since sold thousands at 10 cents a plant. The above division is quite rough, for there have been such innumerable crosses between the many species that it would be difficult to determine to which section many belong. Semperflorens is classed with the shrubby, but is very different from, sav. incarnata, for it flowers more precociously and freely as a summer bedding plant.

The Foliage Section.

The Rex species, containing hundreds of varieties, is little grown by commercial florists, although some years ago we used it largely in veranda boxes, where little sun reached them, and few plants that thrive in the shade made a finer or more refined appearance. Propagated by the leaf or section of the leaf in early fall, good plants in 4-inch or 5-inch pots can be obtained by the following May. It is, however, in the private conservatory or hothouse where large plants show their value and beauty. We have also noticed in the window of many a cottage a fine thrifty plant of Rex begonia.

The Bedding Begonias.

The tuberous-rooted begonias are not used as generally as a bedding plant, as they deserve in our northern states. It may be true that in the hot summers of the middle and southern states they are a failure, but in the northern Atlantic states they make a glorious show. Careful and frequent watering of the bed is the great requisite. Grown in 6-inch or 7-inch pots, they make most beautiful flowering plants, but unfortunately they are in their glory at a season (July, August and September) when the conservatory is little appreciated and they cannot be recommended as good window plants, for they soon drop their flowers. For bedding plants we start the one-year-old bulbs about April.

Winter-Flowering Section.

The semi-tuberous section is best known by the species Socotrana. These form a scaly bulb, but do not lose all their fibrous roots when resting, which is in summer, flowering in winter. Socotrana is one of the parents of Gloire de Lorraine. Several experts have recently written on the cultivation of this splendid begonia. Although many have failed with it, its requirements are simple when well understood. At the St. Louis convention Mr. Peterson read a paper on our popular flowering plants and his directions for growing Lorraine were most simple and explicit and from his success it may be concluded that his methods are up-to-date and correct. There was scarcely ever a plant which rose so quickly and universally into popular favor as Gloire de Lorraine and its waning is not likely to be soon. And who can foretell what wonderful varieties are yet in store for us, to be given us by the skillful and enthusiastic specialists? They will be sure to come, if some have not already arrived.

The Semperflorens Type.

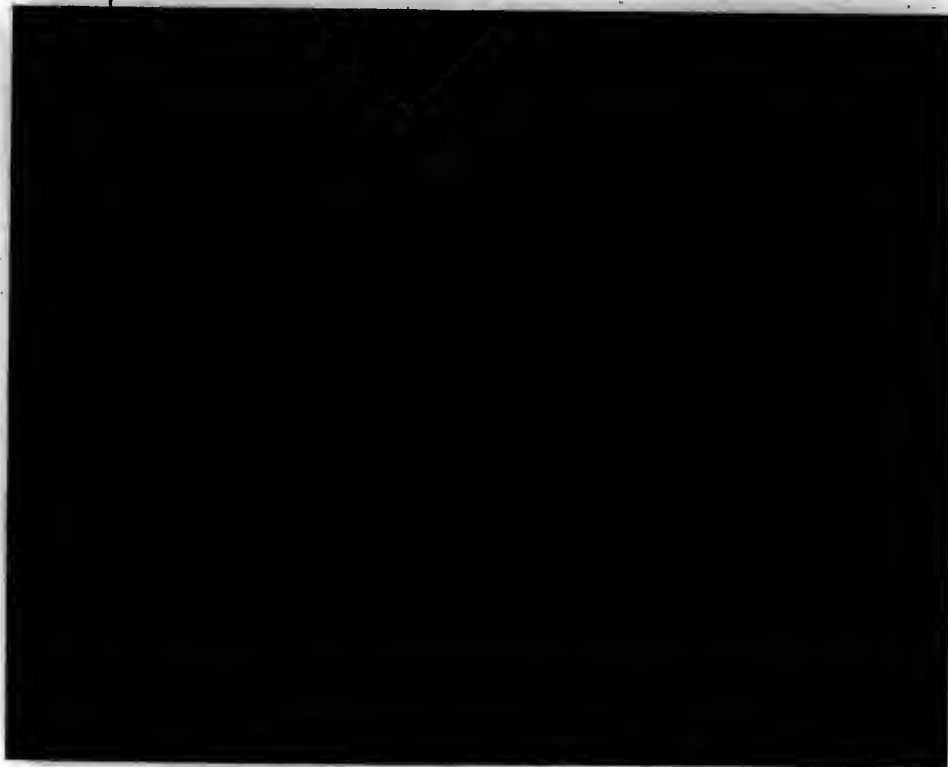

The semperflorens type, which I called a sub-section of the shrubby, are most useful plants for the flower garden. They are wonderfully free flowered. This class includes Vernon and Erfordii. The latter makes a most beautiful flower bed, even in the broad sun. There are noticed in a window. They are successful plants and thrive, or most of them do, in the dry atmosphere of a living room. They root at almost any season of the year, but the florist will find March and April a good time to root the cuttings, which are the ends of shoots not too soft. We never found bottom heat in the sand an essential in rooting these shrubby begonias and they do not need to be kept more than just moist.

In this section there is a most diversified form of flower, foliage and habit. The greatest curse to the winter-flowering begonia is too much shade during summer. It is true they won't flourish under glass in the broiling sun, especially if they are cramped for pot room, but on the other hand, too much shade and humidity is the chief cause of the rust which ruins such sorts as incarnata. I recently recommended that this useful plant be plunged outdoors during the summer months and a private gardener showed me fine plants of it a few days ago and said he planted them out in the open ground in June and lifted them in September. A deep frame, where they could be plunged and shaded with cheese-cloth during the hottest hours, would be my ideal for many of the shrubby begonias during summer.

Some Desirable Flowering Sorts.

The few desirable varieties mentioned below have no pretense to be the latest or even the best, for the writer, like many another florist, has grown but a many other varieties of this type, useful for garden and greenhouse. They root readily from cuttings, but for bedding purposes sow the seed in December and transplant as they need the room.

Good Subjects for Dwellings.

The section that the commercial florist most neglects is the shrubby or winter-flowering varieties. Too many of them you don't want but they sell readily in late fall and winter as good-sized single plants, and they are undoubtedly good plants for the dwelling house. Many a fine plant of manicata we have few kinds of late. I found growing recently at the greenhouses of Mr. George Urban, of Pine Ridge, near Buffalo, the following and in most attractive state:

Incarnata Sandersii, a great improvement on incarnata grandiflora, large panicles and stout growth, abundant flowers of a coral pink; Haageana, very large, rosy pink flowers, handsome foliage; Nightingale, large pink panicles, green foliage; Thurstoni, handsome foliage, rich purple red beneath, flowers not conspicuous; Mme. de Lesseps, strong grower with large clusters of white flowers; metallica, most distinct and at-ractive foliage from their dark metallic shading, flowers bluish white; manicata aureo-maculata, mostly grown for its striking foliage; semperflorens gigantea rosea, green foliage with large deep pink flowers; argenteo-guttata, shining green foliage, flowers pinkish white. Then there was old Sandersoni x Fuchsoides, which we used so much for cutting twenty-five years ago. Several fine flowering varieties had no name, as they were grown from seed imported from France. For a long continued season of flowering and beautiful in both flower and foliage the shrubby begonias have few equals, especially for the decoration of the amateur's conservatory.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

WINTER-FLOWERING BEGONIAS.

With the original of the semperflorens class as the oldest in my memory and the brilliant acquisition of yesterday, the widely grown Gloire de Lorraine, begin and end the long list of winter-flowering begonias which have come under my one was a world conqueror. And yet I do not hesitate to say that we have quite a number among shrubby begonias which merit more general cultivation by florists, especially as they are of easy culture and therefore well adapted to thrive under the care of the amateur grower and cheer up the homes of people in moderate circumstances.

To commence with the semperflorens class, of which we have the gigantea, or tall growing, and the dwarfish gracilis, or Vernon types, the first is best known in our country. Begonia semperflorens gigantea rosea, as the botanical name reads, has a tall fleshy trunk with a natural habit of branching out. Its flowers are borne on strong, erect or gracefully bending axillary stems, extending over the smooth glossy green foliage. They are in evidence practically all the year around but are most abundant during the winter months. The carmine and deep rose hues of the cymes throughout the season materially add to the brightness of greenhouse and window.

age and pure white cymes, appearing from December up to May. Larger in size is the individual flower of B. nitida, a robust but lower growing variety. Its waxy petals are of a very delicate and glossy pink. B. incarnata, a species from Mexico, is known as one of the most prolific to flower. The color of its countless nodding peduncles is a soft rose, which gains in vividness as the days pass. Of drooping habit are the axillary coral-red male flowers of the tall growing B. rubra. Here the female flowers, as a striking feature, form tassels of a wonderfully rich hue. Two-year-old specimens of this plant sometimes throw up erect shoots from five to six feet in height. I therefore recommend the planting of from three to four rooted cuttings together in a 6-inch pot in May. The result will be a shapely specimen by November. With me B. President Carnot has always been rather tardy in flowering; nevertheless its handsome foliage, which assumes a bright reddish color when exposed to the full sun, makes it worth having. Likewise would the old B. Sandersoni, of low bushy growth and very rarely without its profusion of little red blossoms, be the last to part with. Begonia metallica combines ornamental foliage with a strikingly admirable floral display. Its growth is erect and tall. Its hirsute leaves are of a peculiar purplish bronze color, with metallic lustre, contrasting well with the pink hue of its axillary cymes.

There are quite a number of short-growing varieties with thick, fleshy trunks and more or less ornamental foliage which are classed as winter-flowering. They include Begonia Verschaffeltii, B. ricinifolia, B. heracleirolia, B. Reichenheimi and B. manicata. Of the last mentioned we have a sport with variegated leaves, named B. manicata aureo-maculata. Best known, however, is the original form, distinguished by its wealth of pink blossoms borne on strong, erect stems above the handsome leaves.

Begonia Feastii is named after the late Samuel Feast, of Baltimore, with whom it originated. The dark purple of its glossy foliage is most agreeably matched with the delicate rose color of its erect cymes. Another distinct American representative in this class is B. Gilsoni. So far as my knowledge goes it is the only double flowered shrubby variety in existence. Attractive specimens are best obtained by planting a number of rooted cuttings into a deep seed pan, where they have ample space to develop their foliage in all directions. Bushy plants never fail to be admired when, in February and March, their pale pink cymes begin to show above the leaves.

We fill our hanging baskets with variegated periwinkles or ivy geraniums. There was a time when Saxifraga sarmantosa and the running tradescantias were in vogue. Of late we have occasionally availed ourselves of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, but we usually forget entirely that we have among winter-flowering begonias genuine creepers which are just the thing for our purpose. There is hardly a rambling plant that excels in attractive beauty as well grown Begonia glaucophylla scandens. Long suspending vines, are thickly set with oval, at their ends pointed, leaves, and during February and March enlivened by masses of bright red clusters of blossoms. In fact, I doubt if there is a care. The former variety, of strong growth, dark green, glossy foliage and a never failing willingness to produce its modest white or pinkish flowers was the favorite of housewives half a century ago, while the latter, when in good form, literally covered with its wealth of pink bloom, is at present the pride of the skillful florist and gardener. Of the many varieties which, during the last fifty years, have been introduced, few have aroused general interest, fewer still are holding their own permanently in our list of greenhouse plants and only gracilis and their offspring of dwarfish strain we have seen little so far. We know they are favorite bedders in Europe, where for this purpose they are grown from seed sown under glass in early spring. Their floral effectiveness within the formal line of design is surprising, but whether they prove equally free flowering in our summer climate is a question I am not fully prepared to answer.

Among the shrubby winter-blooming varieties I mention as good, B. suaveolens, a tall species, with dark green foligenuine creeper which proves a more showy basket plant than this begonia.

It is said that begonias are not suitable for house plants because they drop their flowers in a few days. May I ask what plant does not do the same thing in a, let us say, comfortably heated room, with the usual dry atmosphere? I have kept a number of Begonia manicata for two weeks in a window box under just such conditions and they came out none the worse and continued flowering for two months afterward. I have had similar experiences with B. Gilsoni and B. glaucophylla scandens.

Propagating of begonias is done by cuttings in spring. With the exception of Gloire de Lorraine all the species mentioned in this article, when inserted in moist sand or light sandy soil, will, at a temperature from 60 to 65 degrees, strike roots within two or three weeks' time. Potted up they thrive best in light, rich garden soil with the addition of one-third Jersey peat. During summer they may be kept outdoors but should be somewhat protected from the hot sun. In winter they want all the light they can get and a night temperature from 50 to 60 degrees.

The illustrations accompanying these notes are from photographs of plants grown and flowered by the writer.

ROSES.

Propagating.

Those who have not already finished their propagating should lose no time in putting in all the cuttings they will require, for the present favorable conditions will disappear as soon as the spring commences.

To enable us to secure good-sized plants for benching in June the work of propagating should be practically over by the middle of March, as after that time conditions for securing a uniform root formation are not so easily created as now and there is less chance for success, even for young stock fresh from the sand. To secure success after that time entails greater care, attention from one-quarter to half an inch in length they should be removed from the sand and potted, as the young roots spread very rapidly and become too large for successful handling. If they are allowed to remain too long in the sand and begin to make wood this has a very bad effect, as the sand contains no nutritive properties to support such growth and the young stock receives a check from which it never truly recovers.

With the other spring work demanding attention these matters are frequently overlooked or delayed, but the grower who neglects his young stock at this stage is laying up a store of trouble for himself in the future. RIBES.

GRAFTING ROSES.

The call for back numbers of the REVIEW containing Mr. Montgomery's very able article on "The History and Culture of Grafted Roses," has been so great that we are reprinting it in pamphlet form, thirty-two pages and cover, fully illustrated and nicely printed, so that those who wish may have it in the most readily accessible form. Copies of the pamphlet will be sent postpaid to any address if 25 cents accompanies the request.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Complete schedules for the approaching rose exhibition at Horticultural Hall, Boston, have been mailed to all members of the American Rose Society, and inclosed with each schedule an entry card. All others not members of the society can have copies on application to the secretary. The number of special premiums is large and an exhibition of unprecedented diversity and beauty is assured. M. H. Walsh's display of Rambler roses alone will be worth crossing the continent to see, and every one interested in the rose, com-mercially or otherwise, should take advantage of this opportunity to see a superb exhibition and meet the foremost rosarians of America. Come yourself and bring an exhibit with you.

Exhibits may be sent, prepaid, care of Wm. Nicholson, Horticultural Hall, Boston. For the convenience of exhibitors at a distance Welch Bros., 15 Province street, Boston, have generously placed their refrigerators and other conveniences of their establishment at the disposal of exhibitors who may, if they so desire, ship their boxes in advance to Welch Bros.' care, giving explicit instructions by mail as to what disposition they wish made of them, whether the boxes are to be kept unopened or whether the flowers are to be taken out and placed in jars of water until required. Instructions will be carefully complied with. W. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

I beg to say that of these 40,000 or 50,000 cuttings and at least twenty varieties, I could not discover one unhealthy cutting. John H. Dunlop may well be proud of his propagating house, for he has the process reduced to an exact science.

The Propagating Season.

There will be with the general florist a great amount of propagating from now on to the end of April and still on during summer with begonias, chrysanthemums, poinsettias and others. I never was a believer in a north-side propagating house during the darkest winter months, but from now on their good points are evident, chief of which is low temperature. In the absence of such a house a north and south house does very well. Ideal propagating conditions, the sand a few degrees higher than the temperature of the atmosphere, can be controlled about right during December, January and February, but from now on they cannot. The reverse will be the case. The temperature of the house will be higher and, with less need of firing, the sand will be cooler. To compensate for the evaporation, which will occur in warmer weather, we must shade and keep the cutting bed saturated. This treatment will root all our soft-wooded plants and the tender growths of many that can be classed as woody. The great object is to keep down the temperature.

Cutting Bench Fungus.

It is many years since we have been

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Temporary Shading.

The sun, so welcome and inspiring to man and daisy alike, now rises higher and higher each succeeding day and its rays are getting powerful. Many days in March the temperature outside will be too sharp to admit of liberal ventilation, but the sun will raise the heat under glass much higher than we desire and shading some things will become a necessity. Under poor glass, and all our greenhouse glass is more or less poor, unless it be plate, the young growth of plants will burn and should be protected in some way. It is, of course, many weeks too soon to put on any permanent shade and the very great majority of our soft-wooded plants will just delight in the bright sun.

Palms, it seems, will burn more easily in March than they do two months later. Palms, particularly latanias and kentias, will endure the full blaze of the sun outdoors during the summer without harm, but may quickly be disfigured during March or April.

We believe the prevalent idea that leaves burn readily when drops of water are left on them from syringing is a complete fallacy. Water would be more a protection than a means of injury. Dryness at the root, which means dryness of the whole tissue of the plant, is the cause of almost all the burning and bleaching of our plants of any kind, either under glass or outside. One more point. Our plants have been growing all winter under conditions which make them soft. Dark days, with little ventilation, is more the rule than the exception since the middle of December and our plants are in a very different condition from the same plants in October, after a summer of sunshine and fresh, free air.

Cheese-Cloth Best.

Tack up to the roof, or better still, roll up on a small light rod, some cheese-cloth that can be spread over your batch of young palms. Carnation growers by this time use cheese-cloth to shade their colored varieties, particularly Lawson, which bleaches badly under the bright sun. This material subdues the sun's rays but does not darken a house and the higher it is above the plants, so much the better. In case of colored carnations the cheese-cloth tacked permanently to the sash-bars is good enough. It will do no harm until August.

Excuse me for "butting in," but I cannot but admire William Weber's remarks against newspapers for shading propagating beds. I have for years believed that was the most hideous and fungus breeding method you could devise. On February 17 I saw a house about 18x80 running north and south. From end to end it was filled with carnation cuttings in all stages of advancement, how many thousand cuttings I don't know. There was no newspaper in sight, but four or five feet above the cuttings was cheese-cloth ready to unroll if necessary. You will term me "Mr. Ananias Windy" doubtless, but at the risk of that vile name troubled with the fungus of the carnation cutting bed, because we have learned to root them in a cool house, but in the beds where we root coleus and other bedding plants we have met many losses just because the house was warm and close. The spores of this minute fungus may not be ever-present, but I think the chances are it is like the spores of the common mildew and when conditions are favorable it puts in an appearance. It is so minute that looking down on the sand you cannot discern it, but stoop down and glance over the surface of the bed and you can see a greenish appearance on the sand. You may remove the sand and renew it after scrubbing the edge boards, but this is only a temporary relief. In a few days the fungus is again creeping over the surface of the new bed, and it will be there just as long as the warm close atmosphere is kept up. In my opinion, and on good evidence, the fungus is confined entirely to the surface of the sand. It just rots or ruptures the tissue of the cuttings at the surface.

Begonia Glaucophylla Scandens.

Where we could not find a cooler bench, or perhaps the fungus made its appearance when the bed was full of cuttings, we have held this fungus in check by the use of a copper solution. I don't know where we picked up this formula, but I do know it answers the purpose and with cuttings that root quickly you can keep the fungus down long enough. Dissolve one pound of sulphide of copper in two quarts of liquid ammonia and when dissolved put in an earthenware jar and cork. One quarter pint of this in twenty-five gallons of water will hurt no cuttings if watered in the sand, but if for watering the sand between crops of cuttings, or just before you put in a crop, then one-half pint in twenty-five gallons will not be too strong. This will keep the fungus away at least two or three weeks.

In these remarks about the cutting bed none of it is meant to allude to the carnation for, with a cool house, shade from direct sun and ventilation whenever called for, there is no excuse for fungus on them and their propagation is largely over before the fungus should be troublesome.

Shade for the Cuttings.

It is only specialists who use a whole house for propagation. The great army of florists simply use a side bench in one of their plant houses. Now if it is the south bench of a house running east and west you can tack up cheese-cloth from the plate to four or five feet up the glass. This will effectually shade every cutting. If the bed is on the north side of the house, then use a curtain dropping from the roof to the edge of the path. This will shade all the cuttings and is very easily folded up on dull days. As the sun gets higher and stronger add the cheese-cloth to the roof over the beds. If the house runs north and south, the same arrangement of cloth can be used, tacked up to the roof and the curtains dropping.

Many of our soft-wooded plants root so quickly that there is little time for any drawing up, yet, broadly, it is well known that the more daylight without direct sun that the cuttings receive, the stronger and more vigorous they will be. Forty years ago the commonest cuttings, such as verbenas, were protected from evaporation and wilting by bell glasses. Water was given sparingly, because it would have bathed the plants in excessive moisture. Nowadays we prevent wilting by keeping the sand saturated and the atmosphere as cool as we can. We used to fail on chrysanthemums in June and July and thought a hotbed was necessary. The failure was nothing but too little water on the cuttings.

Faithful attention to shading, watering and ventilation is a far greater factor toward success than any ideal houses or quality of sand. For the coming months the propagating bench or house needs brains and attention.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Seasonable Care.

The sun is gaining a good deal of strength and on very bright days your carnation houses will need a good deal of attention. To keep the temperature down you will be obliged to open the ventilators rather wide and this in return will cause more or less draught in the houses. Have just as little of this as possible, as it will cause the plants to flag, which is not good for them.

During such days the plants should not be dry at the roots, but do not soak them to keep them from wilting; at the root is not where the water is needed to stop wilting. Spray them lightly overhead and wet down the walks to moisten the atmosphere. Do this before noon, so the plants can dry off before night. In opening the ventilators don't let the temperature run away up before you raise them, but start early and put on just a crack of air and every hour in the day raise or lower the ventilators as may be needed. The same way in the evening, don't close them down when the thermometer stands at 65 degrees, but let it go down to 55 degrees by five o'clock and have your steam ready to turn into the houses when they reach the proper temperature.

Your cuttings in the propagating bench will also need extra care. Shade them closely and when the ventilators are raised make sure no draughts of air can strike them. A badly wilted carnation cutting might as well be thrown out and a strong draught of air will wilt them as much as the sun will. Like the plants, they will need an extra spraying or two, and the walks and boards should be dampened to keep the atmosphere moist.

In my notes on varieties shown at Chicago January 25 and 26 I mentioned the ill luck J. E. Haines had with his fine scarlet carnation. I was very sorry to see it, as I know he has a fine variety. Last Friday I received from him a box containing a dozen fine blooms the smallest of which was over three inches. They carried well and today (Sunday) they are as fine a dozen carnations as one could well imagine. One would hardly suppose they had been shipped about 700 miles. The color, form, calyx and stem are all good and I predict that if this variety is at all prolific it will be widely grown. I want to congratulate Mr. Haines on his good fortune in possessing such a grand variety.

BUFFALO CARNATION SHOW.

Our exhibition of carnations on February 22 was a most gratifying success, and we appreciate sincerely the trouble and expense that those firms went to in sending us samples of their choice products. We are well aware that these firms have been kept busy sending flowers to the many club shows. Most surely the larger cities have had larger exhibits, but for our town we are quite proud of the result. A most cordial vote of thanks was "resolved" to all those contributing an exhibit, and they will be thanked individually. We were blessed with mild weather and no railroad blockade interfered with arrivals except in one instance, which was greatly regretted, viz., a very fine lot of White Lawson and Lady Bountiful arrived after the meeting had dispersed, but many saw them, and they were fine. With only one exception the entire lot of flowers arrived in most perfect condition. The attendance was good. Country members were in strong evidence, and they are the backbone of our club. Henry J. Wise, of East Aurora; Charles T. Guenther, of Hamburg, and W. S. were chosen a committee to score the varieties coming out this spring, and some that will make their debut in 1906.

A business meeting of the club was held, at which the nomination of officers to be elected in March was the important item. Louis Ludwig Neubeck was nominated for president; for vice-president, C. T. Guenther; for recording secretary, Daniel B. Long and W. J. Peake; for financial secretary, Emile Brucker, and for treasurer, the veteran Charles H. Keitsch. A. J. Guttman, of Guttman & Weber, came all the way from New York city with his scarlet, Victory, and gave us a little talk, and so did Mr. Beerhorst, of Sassenheim, Holland. Mr. Beerhorst is no novice at talking before a little crowd, and said, although he admired greatly the beautiful and fragrant carnation, he hoped there would be always a place left for the handsome tulip. George Urban was present and had to introduce his usual jokes, which strike the auditory nerves with more propriety than they would in cold type. The vase of thirty-five blooms containing thirty-five varieties, shown by Mr. Urban's gardener, Theodore Venenan, was most interesting, as it embraced the latest varieties as well as some of those grown thirty years ago, and was an excellent illustration of the evolution of the divine flower. It was the pickaninny and Hottentot, or something lower, of Africa, side by side with Chauncey M. Depew or Mr. Urban himself.

Beside the new varieties, local growers exhibited as follows: Lady Bountiful, The Belle and a pink sport, by W. J. Palmer & Son; Enchantress, Flamingo and Harlowarden, by the William Scott Co.; White Lawson and Enchantress, from F. R. Pierson Co. This vase of White Lawson was grand, and would about convince you that it was all the white you needed. Fred B. Lewis, of Lockport, sent vases of Red Lawson and Enchantress. Mr. Witterstaetter sent a few flowers of several beautiful varieties, besides a grand vase of Aristocrat, and it is an aristocrat among carnations, from almost every point of view. There was seedling 1021 B, a finely formed, pleasing shade of the Scott pink, and a very large, well shaped scarlet without name or number. H. Weber & Sons sent My Maryland, which to us appeared a grand white in size, form and stem, but showed the effects of such a long journey and the judges thought it unfair to score it. The writer has been through this scoring business a good many times and, while we can see no other way to convey the apparent qualities of the exhibits before the judges, yet how far short it comes of giving all the desirable qualities of the new varieties! The judges are not supposed to take into consideration what they know personally of the habit or free flowering qualities of the variety, whether it has suffered on the journey, whether it is just unpacked or has had a few hours in a cool room to straighten out, whether the grower had a thousand blooms to select fifty from, or fifty was about all he could pick. When it comes to awarding a premium for the best fifty white or scarlet, then it is quite different. It is partly to variety, but mostly to high culture that the premium rightly goes, and much could be said on this point. Yet, as there is nothing better in sight, this fallacious plan of scoring is the best we can do, and here is the result of our humble efforts:

VEGETABLES UNDER GLASS.

[A paper by W. W. Rawson, read before the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club, February 21, 1905.]

Increase in Glass.

In looking back over a period of twenty-five years we can see many changes that have taken place, not only in business, but in the growing of crops and the quantity grown; also in the manner of selling them. The idea has been and is growing more so, of concentration; that is, growing more and larger crops on smaller area. In order to do so the use of greenhouses has become more and more extended and today no one in the vicinity of large markets can afford to be without a number of houses. There are today fully twenty times as many as there were twenty-five years ago; then I had three, today thirty-six. Not only has the number increased, but also the knowledge of the management of them has become more universal.

Number of Crops.

In most houses today three crops are grown and in some cases four; the first is lettuce, the second either lettuce or radishes and the third cucumbers. When four are grown, three are lettuce and the fourth cucumbers, but the crop is somewhat later than when only two crops of lettuce are grown before the cucumbers; that is, the first crop of lettuce is pulled for market about November 1, the second about the middle of January, then the crop of cucumbers is set out and they will begin to bear about March 1. Where three crops of lettuce are grown, the first cucumbers will not be picked before April 10. When there are but few houses, two crops of lettuce is the better plan, but if there are a number of houses both ways are adopted.

The consumption of these two vegetables has increased many fold within the past twenty-five years and the quality has also improved. So it has with many of our popular flowers. It is very difficult to grow good headed lettuce in the months of December and January because the weather is very cold and stormy and the nights are long and dark. We try to off-set some of this by the use of electric light, but it is not quite equal to the sun. The crop will grow as much in one day in March as two days in December and January.

The crops of lettuce and cucumbers are very unlike; one requires a low temperature, the other a high temperature, and for that reason very few houses are run to cucumbers in the months of December and January. It would require double glass to do so because a much more steady heat could be maintained. The difference between lettuce and cucumbers is much like that between carnations and roses, only the cucumber is much more tender and more difficult to grow.

Construction of Houses.

The construction of greenhouses has improved very much; that is, they are built much more substantially now than formerly and those of recent construction will last much longer. They are now built with cement foundation and some with iron frames, where formerly they were set on wooden posts and were not as durable. The houses I built twenty-five years ago lasted about twenty years and have been replaced with houses of modern construction.

Most houses today are heated by steam where twenty-five years ago they used hot water. The cost of hot water heating is much more than steam and not so easy to control, especially with a large plant. It takes more pipes and larger ones and a larger boiler for water than for steam to produce the same amount of heat. I do not think there is much difference in the cost of fuel. Soft coal is mostly used for steam heat while many use hard coal for hot water and the cost is fully one-third more for hard coal than for soft.

The crops grown in houses today include many and they are constantly increasing. They are lettuce, cucumbers, radishes, parsley, beets, spinach, rhubarb, asparagus, tomatoes, beans, melons and mushrooms. The time has come when all delicate crops must be grown inside. The climate has so much changed the past twenty-five years that delicate crops cannot be grown as well now as formerly and they can be grown to greater perfection under glass, where every element is under the control of the grower, and if he is familiar with the crop and all its requirements, there is no reason why a perfect crop cannot be produced. But in the field the grower has not the control and at times it is entirely out of his hands, so that it is much surer to grow crops in the houses than in the field. Some time ago the houses were very low near the ground, but at the present time they are built much higher, finding that it costs no more to heat a high house than a low one.

The Best House.

I like a house four feet high in front, six feet at the back and eighteen feet in the center, fifty feet wide, and my houses of these dimensions grow the best crops. They get more light and better circulation of air. The requirements to grow a perfect crop are air, light, heat, moisture and the necessary fertilizers that the crop requires and if the grower understands the crop he can grow a perfect one under glass with all the necessary materials. The soil acts as the machine and the materials to be used put into the soil, or machine, properly managed will produce a crop the same as putting into any machinery the proper materials to produce any manufactured product; the better the materials used the better the product.

Sterilizing Soil.

It is well known that nearly every plant has some injurious insect that seems to delight in devouring the plants and therefore some means must be resorted to to destroy them. We are obliged to fumigate in various ways and also to spray with different materials, most of which are very effective. I think sterilization of the soil eradicates them as thoroughly as any one thing. They cannot live in a temperature of 212 degrees and all germs and insects are completely removed from the soil and they do not appear until new ones are formed. This method of sterilizing the soil renews it so that it is like virgin soil and will produce much better crops than before the process was applied. It is done to a large extent and the result has been wonderful in most cases. After the soil has grown three or four crops the process is repeated. It not only destroys all insects but all weed seeds and none will grow for some time after the soil is sterilized. It works as well with potted plants as otherwise.

I will now say a few words about the various crops grown in greenhouses.

Parsley.

Parsley is quite hardy and will grow under almost any conditions. It does not do as well in a high temperature, but answers for places in the house where other plants will not grow. It is sown in the spring in the field and grown all season, until a large root is obtained, and then taken up in September and set into the houses where it is to grow. A continuous crop, or picking, can be kept up all winter and can be taken out any time in spring to make room for more desirable crops.

Lettuce.

Lettuce is one of the largest and best crops grown in greenhouses and requires a low temperature to be grown successfully, about 40 degrees by night and from 60 to 70 degrees by day. It requires much light and grows better and more quickly in spring than in the long nights and short days of winter. It will grow to more perfection with light than without. It has been proven that the use of electric arc lights hastened the growth fifteen per cent and when the crop grown in the months of December and January would bring a good price, it was a paying investment, but the past winter has been an exception, prices ruling very low on account of the large quantities grown in the south, where it can remain in the field all winter and is sent to our markets in heated cars, keeping the market supplied at very low prices and our crop grown in houses being of inferior size and not well headed, will not pay for growing. No one can grow lettuce in houses and sell it for 25 cents per dozen and get the cost of growing, but if it will bring 50 cents it will pay expenses.

Cucumbers.

The cucumber is a vegetable that is very extensively grown and is one of the most difficult to grow and requires more care and attention than any other. The temperature should be kept very high, at least 60 degrees by night and nearly 100 degrees by day, that is, if produced by the sun. In order to keep the crop to this temperature it requires very much attention. The increased production in the past twenty-five years is very great, perhaps more so than with any other vegetable grown, especially under glass. There are large quantities produced in the south and shipped north, which helps to keep down the prices at certain seasons.

The seed is sown and in three or four days the plants are up and fit to transplant. This should be done in very warm soil and after about ten days they are again transplanted into pots or hills, so that they can be removed, when they have attained the proper size, to where they are to grow. They are set about three and a half feet apart in rows, allowing eight feet for each row. After they begin to run they are trained up on wires running lengthwise of the house on trellises arranged for the purpose. After they begin to blossom we expect to pick in two weeks and continue picking every two days. The picking continues for some months, according to the life of the vine, which varies very much; that is, some will last three months and some as long as five. I have known instances where they continued bearing for a year.

The blossoms should be fertilized by bees or by using a brush, but bees are the best and surest. The profit in growing cucumbers is not always when they bring the largest price, because that is always at a time of year when the production is very small, or in the month of February these vines have been growing all winter and therefore do not at first produce but a very few, so the price must necessarily be high, but when the vines get stronger and bear heavily the price is lower, but they produce so much more that the total is very much larger. I have known vines to produce in a season over 100 good cucumbers.

Beets.

Beets have for the past few years been grown quite extensively under glass. They will grow in high or low temperature. They are mostly transplanted and set about six inches apart. They require considerable water when maturing. They are sold by the bunch, four beets in a bunch. The Egyptian variety is mostly used, being a quick grower and quite small top.

Rhubarb.

Rhubarb is forced by taking up the roots in the field in the fall, letting them freeze for a month or two, then placing them in the house where they are to grow, or putting them in the house in the fall and freezing the roots there. They can be forced by running a high temperature and pulled when they attain a proper height. Large quantities can be taken from a small space. The roots should be at least two years old, so that they will be of good size. The roots are of no use after forcing.

Asparagus.

Asparagus can be forced by digging the roots in the fall, the same as rhubarb, and forcing the same way, and continuous cutting can be kept up. This is usually done when an old bed is dug up. The roots should be large to obtain the best results.

Tomatoes.

Tomatoes are now grown quite extensively under glass, because the climate is such out-of-doors that, being of a tropical nature and growing best under high temperature, the season is not long enough to grow some of our best varieties and being a crop that likes an even temperature, they sometimes blight badly out-of-doors and some of the most delicate grow best and produce much more in houses.

Radishes.

Radishes can be grown at all seasons and at different temperatures; that is, they will allow to be frozen and certain kinds will grow at a high temperature; these we call the forcing varieties. Not long ago the long radish was the most extensively grown, but at present the globe or conical is mostly used. They can be grown quite close and by so doing they will last a long time and make a continuous crop. They are grown very extensively out-of-doors, in hot beds and in various ways. They can be transplanted to fill up all the spare space in a house of lettuce or cucumbers. They sell at quite low prices and sometimes the market gets bare and a good price is obtained by those who have them in the market at that time. The average price is 2 cents per bunch. For an outdoor crop this will do very well, but inside it is not very remunerative. The foreign population use large quantities of them and they are also used in hotels, at banquets to help adorn the table if they are properly prepared.

Beans.

I have seen beans grow with great success in greenhouses and very productive, and before they were grown so extensively in the south they brought as high as $10 per bushel. They would come to quite a good sum if that price could be obtained now. They are sown in rows about two feet apart and when grown will entirely cover the ground and produce a large amount from a small area.

Spinach.

Spinach is sown in houses, the same as in the field, and cut when needed at almost any size. I have known it to do well and be quite profitable.

Melons.

Melons have been grown in greenhouses but not to any great extent. I have seen good crops, but they are not a very reliable one.

Mushrooms.

Mushrooms may not be called a greenhouse crop, but they are sometimes grown under benches, or on the backsides of houses in beds prepared for the purpose, but a cellar that can be kept at an even temperature is preferable. It is quite an uncertain crop and depends upon care and management.

It has become necessary for those who grow vegetables or flowers and plants in greenhouses to confine themselves to a few varieties and study these and perfect them as far as possible. Great improvements have been made in that direction and there is room for more.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Death of Farquhar Macrae.

The craft lost one of its pioneers on February 21 in the sudden death of Farquhar Macrae. He had been ill only two days, with peritonitis. Mr. Macrae entered the florists' business in 1880, when the industry was in its infancy. In fact, he built up the first successful wholesale cut flower growing establishment in this part of New England.

Mr. Macrae was born in Scotland, in 1843. He served his time in Conon Gardens, on the estate of Sir Kenneth McKenzie and afterward following his trade on several prominent places in England and Scotland before coming to this country. He arrived at Providence July 4, 1870. The first nine or ten years of his career here were spent as expert grape grower on Willard Whitcomb's place, now owned by Warren Fales. Here he developed the industry of grape growing under glass, and the products of the Whitcomb place became famous in the New York market.

About the year 1880 Mr. Macrae embarked in the wholesale florists' business, locating on the old G. W. Chapin place at Fruit Hill, making a success of it from the start. In a few years he purchased a piece of land on Smith street. Here he built a model greenhouse plant for those times, growing successfully for the wholesale market of Providence and vicinity. The business succeeded to such an extent that he soon outgrew his plant, and, disposing of the same to his brother, John A. Macrae, he purchased a tract of twenty acres in the vicinity, where he established the plant which he conducted up to the time of his death. It comprised about 75,000 feet, growing roses, carnations, violets and chrysanthemums, all of high quality, especially the mums.

Mr. Macrae was for some years an active participant in the affairs of the S. A. F., being vice-president the year of the Providence meeting, 1897, but he was not a member in 1904. He was a worker for the Rhode Island Gardeners' and Florists' Club and for the Rhode Island Horticultural Society, at the exhibitions of which he was a frequent premium winner.

Besides his brother, Mr. Macrae is survived by a widow and eight children, three sons and five daughters. His sons Alexander and Walter were his associates in business.

At the funeral of Mr. Macrae on February 24 there was a large attendance of those in the trade and a great many sent flowers. The bearers were Alexander Rennie, W. E. Chappell, T. J. Johnston and Michael Sweeney. Interment was at Swan Point cemetery.

NEW LONDON, CONN.

Death of John Spaulding.

In the death of John Spaulding on February 17, this city lost one of her oldest citizens and the craft one of its staunchest members. Mr. Spaulding was born in Scotland, December 25, 1813, and was therefore in his ninety-second year. He came of a gardening family and was brought up in his father's profession, following it for many years on leading estates in England and Ireland. Arrived in this country he located at Poughkeepsie, soon removing to Saybrook, Conn., and later to New London, where he went into the florists' business at a time when it had little promise for other than one who loved and cherished his productions. By dint of hard work he prospered and established a prosperous business, wholly local, but he became known far and wide in the trade and graduated a number of well known men from his place. W. H. Elliott had his schooling here. About four years ago failing health necessitated giving up business and the place was leased to S. J. Reuter, of Westerly, who conducts it as a branch of his own large place. Two years ago Mr. Spaulding became blind but his mind continued active and he maintained his interest in trade affairs until the day of his death. He leaves a widow.

DEERFIELD, ILL.—Fred Haggie has let the contract for a new greenhouse.

HUGHSONVILLE, N. Y.—Adam Laub & Son report a very good business in carnation cuttings.

MILWAUKEE.

On March 1 the sheriff took possession of the store of B. C. Lambros to satisfy a judgment of John Lambros, of Chicago, for $1,600.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

There is a noticeable increase in the quantity of flowers coming into the market. Especially is this true of carnations and bulbous flowers. Prices on these two lines of stock have weakened. The fancy carnations are averaging at least $1 lower, while large orders for daffodils or tulips of good quality are accepted at special 1,000 rates. Many other kinds of stock have felt this competition, noticeably Brides, Maids and violets. Sweet peas of good quality are more plentiful and sell pretty well. There are a few nice double tulips about, principally Coronne d'Or, quite popular in limited quantities. Beauties continue scarce. There are many very heavy shipping orders.

A New Departure.

Through the courtesy of John McIntyre, the representative of the REVIEW, was given an opportunity of seeing the object lesson prepared by H. H. Battles for his customers. The second story front room over the Century Flower Shop has been fitted up as a handsome dining-room, where a table is set, with all its elegant appointments ready for the floral decorations, which may be chosen. The sideboard is graced with choice and unique silverware. Many pretty vases and other objects of interest may be seen about the room, which is brilliantly lighted by electricity. Behind a railing at one end of the room the "votaries of the system" carry out the latest ideas in bookkeeping.

Dreer's Place at Riverton.

The REVIEW, realizing with true progressive instinct that the florists of America want to know at the very beginning of the spring season what some of the leaders in the profession are doing, sent Phil down to Riverton to have a peep at Dreer's. It was literally a peep, for the place is entirely too big for more in a short stay. Even in a brief visit one can gain ideas and see enough to think about during spare moments. There was no sign of the big men at first. The REVIEW men are apt to be a little ahead, you know! So by way of pastime a dozen or so houses of spring plants were examined. All were clean, neat as wax and full of thrifty soft-wooded plants preparing for May sales. Thoughts will center on these after Easter, so it won't do to anticipate beyond saying that the double petunias, about which we have heard so much, were very promising young stock.

By this time the leaders of this great place had begun to gather for a leisure hour together—rare and much prized luxury—the brains and force that plan and execute the thousand and one details that make up the success of a large place, J. D. Eisele, George A. Stroblein, George D. and James T. Clark. By the generous freemasonry of the craft Phil was encouraged to share in the talk that followed.

Ferns were first examined and discussed. Not the little pterises and adiantums so much in vogue just now, but the varieties of nephrolepis. It is evident that the "big four" believe in John Scott's find. There are several tables of it planted out for stock last May that have produced a nice lot of rooted runners. Some of these runners are transplanted into the bench to gain strength and await room, but the larger number are in 2-inch pots, while some have advanced to threes, nice compact little stock. The older or stock plants have been thinned for light and air and are at it again, producing more runners. It is right and natural for Mr. Scott to wish to perpetuate his name in this promising variety, but it does seem that N. Bostoniensis compacta (N. B., compacta!) would describe it with exceptional clearness.

Two English varieties, N. Hestoni and N. Westoni, are on trial, planted out for stock beside the beautiful N. elegantissima (Tarrytown). The good old Boston fern is still seen in large numbers, well done in sixes, and near them some Scottii in the same size pots, clearly showing the difference in types.

The range formerly filled with azaleas is entirely filled with as pretty a lot of dormant roses just starting as one could wish to see. Placed on the ashed floor in regular blocks all labeled, this great field of roses under glass reminds one somewhat of a bird's eye view of an army of soldiers drawn up in companies, regiments and battalions, awaiting orders. Here is Killarney 4,000 strong, a coming favorite. There the Baby Rambler is a child of promise. Over yonder are the Dickson roses, with their green labels from the Emerald Isle. Quite a demand has sprung up for these Dickson roses, thanks to the enthusiastic support given them by Dr. Huey and his friends, all amateur rosarians, who believe in the grafted rose for outdoors.

Commenting on this fact, Mr. Eisele remarked that the propagating of roses from hard-wood cuttings seemed almost a lost art. It was almost impossible for an amateur to get results from soft-wooded cuttings grown for forcing under glass that would compare with those obtained from grafted roses of the tea and hybrid tea classes.

Various Notes.

J. Henry Bartram, of Lansdowne, Pa., has ordered roofing material for two houses, 35x200, from D. T. Conner, of Lord & Burnham.

The Leo Niessen Co. is receiving some very choice white carnations. Lady Bountiful is superb, very large, full and perfect in form. Merrion, a fine white of the Scott type, is a good keeper and said to be a free bloomer. They have the only pansies in the market and find them good sellers.

Fred Ehret is handling a nice lot of Maids and Brides.

R. C. Hayden is well again and at the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co., planning ways and means for pushing the business.

John E. Haines, of Bethlehem, Pa., is sending fine flowers of his namesake scarlet carnation and other varieties to the Flower Market.

P. J. Lynch, of the Dingee & Conard Co., West Grove, Pa., will give his ideas on the newer roses before the Florists' Club next Tuesday evening. Mr. Lynch has had much experience and his paper will be well worth hearing.

M. Rice visited the Andre place at Doylestown this week. He found the Brides and Maids in splendid condition. Two houses have been bearing continuously all winter.

Wm. J. Baker is receiving a full line of choice bulbous flowers.

The Leo Niessen Co. is receiving as high as 15,000 freesias daily, chiefly from Leikens, of Burlington.

Edwin Lonsdale returned to his post at Girard College on Monday, after a five weeks' absence on account of illness.

The Brides and Maids at the Fould's place at Gwynedd are showing improved form under the skillful hands of John Savage.

The Henry F. Michell Co. reports that florists, appreciating that the price of asparagus seed has reached the very bottom, are now buying.

Joseph Black & Son Co., of Hightstown, N. J., is sending some fine Enchantress and other carnations to the Flower Market.

William K. Harris is quite ill in bed. His friends, they are legion, hope he will soon be well again.

John Burton has begun work for his new houses.

The Flower Market has just issued the following notice to stockholders: "You are hereby notified that at the meeting of the board of directors of the Philadelphia Wholesale Flower Market, held this day, it was resolved that an assessment of twenty-five per cent on the capital stock, or $5 per share, be called, same to be payable on or before May 1, 1905, at the office of the company, 1235-37 Filbert street. The Market is now on a paying basis, but has been at considerable disadvantage and expense on account of working on a limited capital, and this assessment is needed for a working capital."

Answers to Correspondents.

Review readers are invited to send any questions relating to culture or marketing of plants and flowers in Philadelphia, to Phil in care of the leading seed or commission houses or the Flower Market. Each question will be submitted to a competent person and answered under number. Correct name and address must always accompany inquiry, but will not be published.

34.—What is the best size of box for shipping cut blooms of gladioli? Opinions differ. Sometimes large crates are used, in which 1,000 spikes of undeveloped blooms are stood on end. It is better, however, to use trays, say 4x12 x48 inches. Four or six of these trays might be set in crates, as is done with dahlias.

35.—How should gladioli blooms be packed for shipping? Lay closely together in rows in shallow box. Use a bolster of soft paper between each row in such a way as to prevent pressure from coming on the flowers. Pack from each end toward the middle and use two braces to hold firmly. The size box given above will hold about six dozen spikes. Some varieties may be cut before the flowers are developed, others when they are partially developed. PHIL.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The weather has become almost spring-like; the sidewalk merchants are doing a rushing business and stock no longer remains in the ice boxes of the wholesalers, even though the cleaning up process is sometimes heartbreaking, and the discounts necessary to unload would bring the blush to the cheek of Baxter street.

Every kind of stock is abundant, and most of it is sold at a sacrifice. The very highest quality, as usual, can afford to be independent. There is always a market for the best. The finest Beauties brought 60 cents each at times. Some grand Liberties have commanded 50 cents and Killarney of the best grade sold at 25 cents each. This fine rose is very popular this season and much favored for table decorations. There is never a surplus of it and orders for the young stock are coming from the growers in all parts of the country. One of the leading rose growers will have ten houses of Killarney next season for the New York market.

There seems no prospect of improvement in the carnation demand and prices are unsatisfactory, though the superb quality of the winter supply is maintained. Every wholesaler's window and bench is an Easter premonition, with its stock of lilies. Thousands are sold at from 6 cents to 8 cents each and, still they come!

The best violets, those in bunches of 100 and selected, seldom go above 50 cents. Thousands go daily to the Greeks at as low as $2 per thousand. This is "the season of their discontent." There is little hope this year for resurrection. Easter comes so late they are even expected to be done for and unable to compete in the final bulge of the year. The abnormal shipments of all kinds of bulbous stock continue.

Various Notes.

Flowering plants, azaleas, rhododendrons, acacias and even roses are in the windows and are selling about as freely as in the Easter season. One prominent retailer thinks the lateness of Easter will greatly lessen the plant demand and that the sales of palms and ferns and blooming stock will be encouragingly large a full month before the holiday arrives.

Buyers are already selecting their Easter stock and the growers report numerous visits daily. Scott, of Flatbush, is greatly enthused by the reception of his fern in the bon-ton stores of New York, where, with hardly an exception, the demand has been continuous throughout the season. He has some fine stock of it prepared for the Easter trade and is shipping it in all directions.

March 13 will be rose night at the New York Florists' Club and some fine exhibits have been promised. A practical rose grower will deliver an address and the commissary general, Mr. Nugent, is already planning for the entertainment.

Mr. Roosevelt will not be the only president at the inauguration next Saturday. Pres. Traendly and Mrs. Traendly will be there, and several prominent wholesalers and others are planning to enjoy the festivities.

Consignments of roses and other hardy stock from Europe are beginning to arrive. The auctions begin in two weeks and Elliott and Cleary will monopolize the field.

Last week a big fire on Greenwich street crept up to within a door of the warehouse and offices of the Lucas & Boddington Co. Fortunately the firm escaped damage and is none the worse for the closeness of the call, the nerve supply for such emergencies being abundant.

J. W. Reimels, Jr., is confined to his home, the effects of a severe accident a week ago at Woodhaven. This is his second experience of a similar character within a year.

John Gunther, whose illness from la grippe was announced last week, is now in the hospital and very low with typhoid. His recovery is sincerely hoped for. He has been associated with his brother, Wm. H. Gunther, in the wholesale business for many years, and is a general favorite.

Geo. Saltford has completed another edition of his book, "How to Grow Violets." He has so thoroughly revealed the secrets of success as to make every amateur violet grower on the Hudson an expert and fostered the building of violet houses beyond his wildest dreams.

The plant center for the convenience of city retailers, at Chas. Millang's, is proving very popular. His facilities for caring for the fine assortment of palms and flowering plants in his conservatory are ample and the supply is constantly replenished. He will have a great display for Easter.

Small & Sons are preparing for the inaugural ball on Saturday evening at Washington, where they will, as usual, have charge of the elaborate decorations.

Bowe, who is a musician of no mean ability, has six employes capable of assisting him and is forming a "band," the music of which may possibly be secured for one of the special nights of the Florists' Club.

Theo. Lang was burglarized last week, but the thief was detected and vanished before the veteran bowler could get a shot at him. Between hold-ups, burglaries and grippe it has been a strenuous winter for the trade. Spring will never again have so cordial a welcome.

Anton Schultheis says the florists at College Point and Whitestone would be glad to see the New York and College Point Ferry Co. show some intention to reopen the ferry between College Point and Ninety-ninth street. Of course there has been a little ice, but still it looks all right to those whose teams have to make the twelve-mile drive to town every day.

A few days ago J. M. King and C. Socelaris became involved in an altercation at the flower market. The latter has been sent to jail for six months for assault. Each keeps a flower stand.

John Crocombe, one of the pioneer florists in Queens county, died February 24. He was 96 years of age and had retired from business a number of years ago.

A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Sigmund Geller by Koscherak Brothers, $1,071; A. H. Ringk & Co., $242, and Harry H. Keitner, $10. It was alleged that he is insolvent and committed an act of bankruptcy by making a payment of $108 on January 10 to the Starr Ribbon Co. It was alleged that the assets are probably $3,000. He has been in this business seven years. Judge Holt of the United States District Court appointed George S. Kebabian receiver of the assets, fixing his bond at $1,500.

Bowling.

The club met as usual Monday evening and will bowl from 7:30 to 11:30 hereafter. Arrangements were made for the match with Hoboken on Saturday evening, at the Hoboken alleys at 7 o'clock. The scores Monday night were:

Flatbush did some wonderful bowling two weeks ago. Zeller 204, Wocker 205, and H. Dailedouze 225. Last Thursday the usual weekly enthusiasm prevailed. The scores of the two best games follow:

Mellis	138	108
Morrison	80	93

Flatbush has a challenge for the New York Club "up its sleeve" after Hoboken and Madison have had another session with the "uneatables."

CHICAGO.The Market.

Continued warm weather with bright sun has brought a still further increase in receipts. Carnations may be said to be in full crop and the cuts of tea roses are now quite large and fully equal to requirements. However, the demand is active for the better grades and the many choice Brides and Maids are bringing good returns. The short-stemmed material constitutes a considerable part of the receipts and this is sold cheaply. There has been no change in the Beauty situation, crops being pretty well off with most of the growers, but receipts are equal to the demand.

Carnations were never better in quality. The demand continues to be first for white, but there are enough of all colors. So large a proportion of this season's planting was Lawson that pinks are in oversupply and the Greeks are able to buy job lots at the close of the day's business at very reasonable prices. The principal streets are lined with flower stands and the town has a spring-like appearance.

Since the cold weather departed the shipments of New York violets have increased very greatly. There is seldom a time but what the wholesalers have unbroken boxes of the Hudson River goods in stock, but there is a larger outlet for the violet now that it can be worn on the street and, by comparison with what we hear from New York, returns to the growers should be satisfactory.

The receipts of bulbous flowers continue to increase. The quality is excellent. There is a big surplus of daffodils and jonquils. The growers say tulips in pans sell fairly well. Harrisii and callas are so abundant that prices are on the downward grade. Freesia is not so often seen this season. Considerable quantities of valley are about.

Shasta daisies and marguerites are received but move slowly. The call for "green goods" shows something of an improvement.

The shipping trade the beginning of this week was very active and helped materially to clean up the large receipts. Next week much stock will be needed at New Orleans for the Mardi Gras, shipments going out Saturday and Sunday night. Local trade is improving and the prospects would be quite encouraging but for the prospect of a big glut of stuff with continued bright weather.

Club Meeting.

At the Florists' Club's meeting February 23 there was a good attendance, but the majority missed a treat in not hearing E. G. Rutzahn's lecture on beautifying Chicago. His address was full of interest and well delivered. If every florist could show his customers the pictures thrown on the screen it would result in a general cleaning up and in a lot of planting of trees, shrubs and bedding plants. The pictures proved that a very little work will add vastly to the attractiveness of a neighborhood.

The club voted to have a business exhibition of Easter stock and florists' supplies at the second March meeting. No premiums are to be awarded but every exhibitor is expected to book some orders. A supper is planned for an early date. A smoker is announced for March 9.

Various Notes.

There was a gathering of the florists of the state at Springfield yesterday to urge upon the appropriations committee the necessity for the provisions asked for floricultural work at the Experiment Station at Urbana. Most of the delegation represented Cook county, which pays forty per cent of the taxes that support the station's work for the farmers, but has never had any share in the direct benefit. There was a meeting of a dozen or more at the Benthley-Coatsworth office last Saturday to plan the work of getting the appropriation through the legislature. Those appointed to go to Springfield were P. J. Foley, W. N. Rudd, James Hartshorne and Leonard Kill.

Just as we go to press Mr. Rudd telegraphs from Springfield as follows:

Florists' bill introduced in house and senate. Our committee had a hearing before the appropriation committees of both houses and feels much encouraged. We have received good support.

Charles Penshorn, who is one of the veterans of the trade, is engaged in suing the city for damage done his property at Sixty-first and Throop streets by opening a street which took off about ten feet of his greenhouses. The city allowed him a little over $1,700 damages but assessed most of it back to him for benefit to his remaining property. The case is up this week and Mr. Penshorn has subpoenaed J. F. Kidwell, L. Coatsworth and Sam Pearce as experts to show the extent of the damage done him.

George W. Caldwell, the Woodsman, at Evergreen, Ala., reports to Kennicott Bros. Co. that long continued rains have made it impossible for the wild smilax gatherers to get into the woods. Consequently shipments are much delayed. Kennicotts have worked up a big busi-

F. F. Benthley says that he believes nearly all classes of bulbous stock, particularly Paper Whites and tulips, to have brought better returns so far this season than for several years. He says Sam Pearce reports very good returns on daffodils.

A. L. Randall has been on the sick list this week and Carl Thomas has been holding the fort alone in spite of a boil and a very bad cold.

Henry Payne, at Hinsdale, will throw out a lot of Sprengeri and plant his plumosus closer together, so that he will have room to bench something like 15,000 carnations.

Howe & Taylor, 140 West Lake street, have opened a stand at the Growers' Market for the sale of wire work.

C. M. Dickinson is on a trip south for his health.

A. G. Prince is in town for a few days. He has been out in Iowa in a brokerage business for a couple of years but is thinking of going back into the flower trade.

Arthur Ellison, of St. Louis, called on the trade on his way home from Milwaukee, where he participated in last week's national bowling congress.

One of the Ristow brothers on North Western avenue, who has had eight or nine houses in roses, will plant them all to carnations next year. He has bought the stock at J. A. Budlong's.

A. Stolper, of Winnipeg, was a visitor this week.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Milder weather aids in increasing transient trade. Business in general, though, is reported rather dull; but in the few days left for the social season before Lent no doubt some of us will be busy with decorative work. Quite a number of weddings are booked for this week. With the west end florists, one noticeable feature of the cut flower market the past week was the drop in prices on roses, which have been scarce and high right along. The production in all kinds of stock is very much greater than the demand and the troublesome glut is on at the commission houses. The wholesalers report a fair trade in all lines, but stock is so plentiful that it is impossible to sell half the stock that comes in every day to the local and shipping trade. Street fakirs are out selling violets, but are being run from corner to corner by the police on complaint of the downtown florists.

Roses in all classes are plentiful, also of improved quality. There is no apparent glut in any one variety, still more than the demand calls for. Brides have been very scarce, but this week there are enough. This stock must be of extra fine quality to sell well. Enough Beauties in all grades are in the market at $4 per dozen for long stems. Meteor is of much better color, but small in flower. Extra fancy Bridesmaids are to be had, also extra fine Gen. MacArthur. Carnations can now be called a glut and thousands unsold can be seen fast asleep. Fancies are now down as low as $3 per hundred. In this class are Enchantress, Prosperity and Lawson.

Bulbous stock of all kinds is a drag, especially tulips. Along with them are daffodils, freesias, Romans, Paper Whites and almost everything in the bulb line can be bought for little or nothing. Violets are received in great quantities and have to suffer along with the rest. As to price, in large lots they go for $2 to $2.50 per thousand. It was said that no less than 100,000 were handled by the wholesalers last Saturday. Harrisii and callas are also in the market in large quantities. These are selling as low as $1 per dozen. Mignonette and sweet peas are selling slowly. In greens there is little change. Plenty of everything is to be had at usual prices.

Various Notes.

On next Thursday afternoon the St. Louis Florists' Club will hold its March meeting. The annual rose exhibition will be held that afternoon. The committee in charge of the exhibition reports that a large display is promised and that the club's most entertaining speakers will address the members on rose subjects. The business session will be cut short, so as to give the members an opportunity for social intercourse as well as for the other attractions which will draw an audience worthy of the occasion. The committee has arranged for a banquet at the Missouri Athletic Club at which all visitors will be entertained. Every branch of the trade is invited to attend this meeting.

Mr. Barnett, traveler for Reed & Keller, of New York, who made many friends in the local trade during the last convention, called on the trade last week.

The local growers are busy preparing stock for Easter. Among those who have fine looking stock are Chas. Beyer, C. C. Sander, Wm. Schray & Sons, Geo. Windler, Henry Felter, C. Young & Sons, J. F. Windt, A. G. Bentzen and A. Jablonsky. These find ready sales to the local retail trade.

The Plant and Cut Flower Growers' Association, which was recently organized, meets every third Wednesday at 3 p. m. Their constitution and by-laws have been mailed to all growers. They are also out with a statement that their association is not in conflict with the St. Louis Florists' Club and that they do not intend to supplant the parent body.

Nick Himmer, at Meramec Highlands, reports that he will build four new houses this summer for carnations. He has had great success this season with carnations, violets and smilax. The brothers say, "watch us next season."

Henry Aul and Max Herzog, neighbors out at Gratiot, are sending in good stock to this market.

Jos. Hauser, at Webster Groves, who lost his plant by fire recently, will just as soon as the weather permits start to build a new range of houses on the old site.

Martin Renkauf, of H. Bayersdorfer, Philadelphia, is a caller this week.

BOSTON.The Market.

The past week can be classed as a very satisfactory one all around. The weather has been less severe. Street salesmen have been able to ply their vocation and there has been little surplus of anything. Roses continue in rather short supply and command good prices, still much the same as a week ago. Liberties are selling well and are not plentiful, select stock fetching $30 to $35 per hundred. Carnations clean out remarkably well without any particular change in prices. Violets are coming in very abundantly. About 50 cents is top price, poorer grades bringing 25 and 30 cents. The size of the foliage on the bunches would indicate that the single varieties will soon run out in the houses except where kept very cold.

Bulbous stock has not sold so well for years. There appears to be just about enough to go around. Yellow Trumpet narcissi are a trifle lower. Tulips remain about the same, the variety La Reine being especially popular. Callas are quite abundant and lilies more plentiful. Prices on these remain about the same. Ten-week stocks in several colors, Spiraea Japonica and antirrhinums come from some growers but do not seem to sell especially well.

Horticultural Society.

On February 25 J. Woodward Manning opened a general discussion on flowers in lieu of the regular lecture, dealing principally with perennial flowering plants and ornamental trees and shrubs. Asked for a selection of twelve first-class perennials to grow Mr. Manning named the following: Primula vulgaris, Veronica rupestris, Convallaria majalis, Iris Germanica, Hemerocallis flava, Delphinium hybridum, Phlox paniculata, Paeonias officinalis, and Festiva maxima, Lupinus polyphyllus, Helianthus decapetalus, Pyrethrum uliginosum, Asters Novae-Angliae, William Bowman and Lady Trevellyn, Veronica longifolia subsessilis and Anemone Japonica as among the best subjects to choose from. His selection of a dozen flowering shrubs would comprise: Prunus triloba, Forsythia Fortunei, Spiraea Thunbergi, Philadelphus coronarius, Viburnum plicatum, Pavia macrostachya, Lonicera Morrowi, Rosa rugosa, Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora, Berberis Thunbergi, Desmodium penduliflorum and Syringa Rothomagensis. Messrs. A. A. Hixon, E. O. Orpet, R. Cameron, D. Finlayson and K. Finlayson took part in the discussion which followed. About 200 persons listened attentively to the various speakers.

On March 4 A. Herrington lectures on "Some Aspects of Hardy Flower Gardening," which will undoubtedly draw a large audience. Peter Murray will stage a splendid collection of dendrobium plants in some thirty varieties and species at this meeting. W. N. Craig will show a group of phalaenopsis.

At the lecture on February 11, when Dr. Geo. D. Moore lectured on "Bacteria as Fertilizers" the audience numbered 446.

Gardeners' and Florists' Club.

The meeting on February 21, already briefly referred to, was a very successful one. Sixty-seven members were present and seven were elected to membership during the evening. Ex-president Pettigrew sent a letter resigning the presidency of the reception committee, which, however, he was induced to retain ere the meeting closed. An amendment to the by-laws relating to the election of officers was defeated. A committee of five was appointed to report on the form of awards to be given by the club. The committee consists of Messrs. Farquhar, Stewart, Craig, Peter Fisher and Merton.

W. W. Rawson's lecture on the culture of vegetables under glass as compared with twenty-five years ago was very interesting and led to a lively discussion. Mr. Rawson said when he started in business twenty-five years ago with 200 sash, everyone predicted the poorhouse for him. However, he now has thirty-six large houses. At least twenty times as many vegetables were grown under glass as compared with a quarter of a century earlier. No vegetable growing plant is up-to-date which does not use steam heat. He has no use for hot water, classing hot water boilers as mere tea kettles. He has for years done all his own building and piping. His largest house, covering half an acre, has a 3-inch main and ten returns with five pounds pressure. It cost about $150 to sterilize this house. He sterilizes all his compost and it well repays for the labor incurred. He considers that sterilization gives him practically virgin soil. Speaking of cucumber prices, he said they paid best at $7 to $8 per hundred, rather than the higher prices, where you can pick from 10,000 to 15,000 daily. He considers 40x250 a good size for a vegetable house and a man with several of that size ought to have no trouble in succeeding.

Quite a number of members joined in the discussion. Alexander Montgomery said John N. May sterilizes all his rose soil for best results. He advocated high, roomy houses as being more economical to build and best as compared with an equal area of smaller ones. Messrs. Finlayson, Peter Fisher, Duncan, Craig, Cole and others also discussed the subject and a cordial vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Rawson.

Exhibits on the table included Rosalind Orr English rose and Cardinal carnation from E. G. Hill Co. These arrived in splendid condition and the former especially was greatly admired. Each was awarded a certificate of merit. A. Roper had a nice vase of Carnation Chester Roper, a good striped variety, which received honorable mention. Geo. M. Anderson had some promising carnation seedlings and cineraria flowers and H. A. Stevens Co. had a vase of fine Flamingo. Alexander Ogg showed cut blooms of some very superior seedling amaryllises, also sprays of Jasminum primulinum. T. H. Westwood had a plant of Canna Admiral Dewey.

At the next club meeting, on March 21, which comes two days prior to the opening of the spring show and Rose Society's exhibition, roses will be discussed. Several notable rose growers from a distance will be present.

Various Notes.

Alexander Montgomery is visiting prominent rose growers in New York and New Jersey this week to interest them in the coming meeting of the American Rose Society. M. H. Walsh's exhibit of his seedling Rambler roses at the coming exhibition will be a notable one, far surpassing his collection shown in 1904. He will forward two car-loads of plants. On every hand great interest is being felt in the coming show.

E. O. Orpet spoke on some horticultural specialties before the Worcester Horticultural Society on February 23.

J. W. Duncan will lecture before the Houghton Horticultural Society of Lynn on March 6 on "Ornamental Shrubs for Late Summer."

H. F. Woods, of Brookline, has extra fine houses of Princess of Wales and Campbell violets from which he picked some prize winners at the late show. He grows sweet peas to follow the violets, the varieties being Mont Blanc, Countess of Radnor and Blanche Ferry.

Henry Wild, for the past eight years superintendent on the A. W. Blake estate, Brookline, leaves on March 12 to take charge of the new and extensive Converse estate at Greenwich, Conn. Mr. Wild is one of our best known and most esteemed practitioners. He has been an active member of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club and is at present one of the executive committee. His many friends are sorry to lose him, but wish him much success in his new sphere of labor.

A. H. Hews & Co., the well known Cambridge pot manufacturers, have just completed some attractive show cases at each of the flower markets for displaying their wares.

G. E. Fisher, who has been salesman for the Worcester Conservatories at the Park street market, is now selling for Patten & Co.

W. C. Ward and Mann Bros. are forwarding quantities of fine pansies to the markets. Tailby & Son, J. T. Butterworth, John J. Fee, E. Sutermeister and Mann Bros. are all sending in very fine lots of bulbous stock.

Welch Bros. are receiving large quantities of extra fine bulbous stock from Carl Jurgens, Newport, R. I.

C. E. Richardson, the treasurer of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, has been quite seriously ill with la grippe but is now improving.

Cards are out for the marriage in March of W. E. Glidden, one of the popular salesmen at the Park street market.

Thomas Pegler is handling over 10,000 extra fine Campbell violets daily for O. L. Door, of East Foxboro.

placed on exhibition at the Park street-market and was closely scrutinized by the growers.

William Nicholson has sold a large quantity of pans of Primula obconica at the market this season. A number of small plants were used in each pan, which made very pretty and salable stock.

The recent death of Farquhar Macrae, of Providence, R. I., is much regretted here, where he was well known, being a visitor at all our important shows.

John Walsh, manager of the Park street market, has been quite badly crippled with rheumatism the past week.

Ranunculi and anemones are now seen in a number of the stores. Pots of the Buttercup primrose are displayed in several. It does not appear to be a great seller, however.

F. E. Palmer, of Brookline, is one of the most successful of our local bulb growers. He handles some 4,000 pans of tulips alone each year and he knows how to grow them well, too.

Doyle had the decorations for the Andrew ball at the Somerset the past week. Everything was in his best style.

The Market.

A week of bright sunshine has produced a great difference in greenhouse crops. Roses are coming in plentifully now, and some fine Brides, Chatenay and Gates are to be seen. Prices as yet have not dropped appreciably. Bridesmaids have not yet reached the market in good shape, but a visit among the growers shows some of good quality coming on. Beauties are off crop and what few there are, are of poor substance. Carnations are arriving in large quantities and are showing better than they have in weeks. Prices have dropped fully one-third, with the department stores in competition with the regular florists. Some fine La Reine and Keizerskroon tulips are displayed and some fancy prices are paid. Valley, Dutch and Roman hyacinths are not as plentiful as a week ago and what are offered are quickly taken. A number of small receptions during the week have kept some of the stores very busy.

Various Notes.

250 acres laid out in natural parks, with a chain of lakes full of fish and through his greenhouses full of good stock. Mr. Kellogg has about 325,000 feet of glass, over 175,000 feet in roses, about 38,000 in carnations under the care of Mr. Tatro. The rose houses are divided into three sections, with Mr. Johnson over the Beauties, Mr. Larson the Brides, Maids and Chatenays and with M. F. Parker general manager. Glenn Parker has charge of the shipping department. Mr. Kellogg will commence as soon as the ground can be worked to grade enough to add another 75,000 feet, which will be used exclusively for carnations. In addition to this an up-to-date dairy will be started this spring, with a large herd of Jersey cows, which will employ a large number of men in addition to the thirty-five already employed.

Perry Finn, proprietor of the Carthage Greenhouses, Carthage, Mo., was a visitor last week, buying up a new stock of plants to replace those that were destroyed by fire the first of February. Mr. Finn was unable to save much and suffered almost a total loss, having no insurance.

The Alpha Floral Co. has increased its facilities for handling its increasing business. Mr. Ebberfield has charge of the receiving and shipping department. The local business is under the efficient charge of Mrs. Lena Harvey. They report excellent business.

Miss Dalley reports excellent trade having all the force can do.

D. Freudenthal reports business as good locally and is rapidly increasing his wholesale line.

J. F. Vesey, who has been east to attend the funeral of a relative, is back at his business again.

Lawrence Schwager is placing a large stock in his place and reports business first-class. NARCISSUS.

HUGHSONVILLE, N. Y.—A. Laub & Son have a seedling carnation of which they think highly. It is a cross between Prosperity and Lawson and very spicy.

JOHN T. WITHERS has become manager of the Shatemuc Nurseries, Barrytown, N. Y.

THE western trade growers are offering considerable quantities of two-year-old cherry trees and large lots of one-year-old stock.

KILLARNEY rose is being widely advertised this season, some nurserymen going so far as to state that it is the "best bedder."

THE Pennsylvania Nurserymen's Association has prepared a new inspection bill, which will shortly be presented to the state legislature.

ONE of the scarce items is Tea's weeping mulberry. One-year-old stock is worth several times as much as it was three years ago. Quantities of older stock are reported as not to be had.

NURSERYMEN are beginning to appreciate the peril in indiscriminate propagation of fruiting stock and the value of a careful selection as parents, trees or plants of the best type of the variety wanted.

It was once the practice to trench in sand all nursery stock in winter storage, but under the conditions of modern storage it has been found that stock may as well be corded, and with great economy of space. Excelsior is usually used about the roots.

A NEW hybrid tea rose is to bear the name of Frau Peter Lambert and it is one of a number of seedlings raised by Herr Eric Wilter, in 1902. So much is thought of it abroad that it is favored by having a full page colored illustration in Rosen-Zeitung, for December; it is a beautiful salmon-rose color, the buds long, full and of large size, and the habit excellent. The advent in this country of this new rose will be looked forward to with much interest.

JAMES WORDEN, the well-known nurseryman of Wellington, Kan., died February 22, of paralysis. He was 70 years of age and removed to Wellington from Bloomington, Ill., many years ago, building up a large business.

THE contract for furnishing trees and shrubs to the Department of Parks, New York, was last week awarded to Fred'k W. Kelsey. The contract is for a general assortment of trees, conifers, and hardy shrubs, to be delivered during the planting season of 1905.

CHARLES CITY, IA.

The Sherman Nursery here becomes of age this season, for, started in 1884, it is twenty-one years of age in 1905. In 1884 there were but a few acres of land in use and less than half a dozen employes, but by 1888 the growth of the business demanded outside capital and incorporation. E. M. Sherman, the founder of the business, has been continuously the president of the company. There are now 300 acres in nursery stock and 800,000 apple grafts and a million grape cuttings were part of the 1904 plant. A specialty is made of ever-green seedlings, five acres under shade being devoted to them last season and two acres more will be needed in 1905. During the growing season as high as 125 hands are employed, not to speak of one of the largest forces of agents in the country.

The Sherman Nursery Co. also has a good sized greenhouse department, two houses 34x250 being devoted to cut flowers, mostly roses, which are sold at wholesale. They also have a stock of palms and ferns.

SEED PACKING.

The following note is sent to The Gardeners' Chronicle by W. Watson, of the Royal Botanic Garden, Kew, England:

The experience of Kew in the distribution of seeds to all parts of the world may be termed exceptionally successful, and it is often achieved without much trouble. Indeed, it is too often the case that seeds received at Kew are rendered worthless by the special methods of preparation and packing adopted by the senders. There are, however, certain kinds of seeds which soon lose their vitality if kept dry, and among these are all kinds of oak-acorns. For the last twenty-five years, at least, consignments of acorns have been sent annually from Kew to South Africa. They used to be packed in beer casks, the acorns being put in through the bung-hole, and the casks filled up with water; but an experiment made about fifteen years ago proved that this method was less successful than that of packing the acorns in a wooden case in layers with moist cocoa-nut fibre between each layer. The report was—"Acorns sent in water a failure, those sent in cocoa-nut fibre have germinated on the way, and we have now 1,200 strong seedlings from them." Last October we had an application for a quantity of acorns of Quercus pedunculata, Q. sessiliflora, and Q. Cerris, for St. Vincent. They were packed in damp cocoa-nut fibre in wooden boxes, beginning with a layer of fibre at the bottom, then a layer of acorns, and so on till the boxes were filled. They were labeled "To be placed in a cool place in the hold." The report just received states that "The acorns of Quercus pedunculata have germinated well; Q. sessiliflora are not quite so forward; and Q. Cerris still less so." I can strongly recommend damp cocoa-nut fibre and wooden boxes for all seeds that perish easily, and that can be conveniently packed in them; for instance, seeds of Para-rubber, Ceara rubber, and Brazil nuts. For seeds generally I know of nothing better than paper packets and calico bags, and the more moisture there is in the seeds themselves when thus packed the better. Hermetically sealed tins or bottles should never be used.

VISITED CHICAGO.—Chas. P. Braslan, of Braslan Seed Growers Co., San Jose, Cal.

If the weather of the past week is not bringing in seed orders, something is wrong with the price list.

It seems that Champion, Chicago Market and Perry Hybrid are among the scarce varieties of sweet corn.

LOUISVILLE reports its stock of onion sets well cleaned up, the remnant going briskly on a rising market.

SEED potatoes are selling slow, according to reports, with little prospect of any great demand for them later on.

A NOTE on another action for damages under a seed warranty appears on the Pacific Coast page of this issue of the REVIEW.

THE seed clerk, who offered a 14-inch lawn mower to the lady who asked for a premium with her pound of lawn grass, is still holding a job.

It is true enough, as the hustler below stairs casually remarked, that the taking of a seed order requires less brains than the filling of it.

RETURNING from a contracting trip for the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, John F. Geary reports good business. S. F. Leonard has recovered from his somewhat protracted illness.

It is reported that onion seed is in good demand. The growers are satisfied with the prices onions are now bringing and this has the effect of inducing them to buy seed freely.

THE postoffice has withdrawn its offer to supply special applications for money orders to go out with catalogues but permits the advertiser to print his own special application blanks under certain restrictions, first of which is that a permit be obtained from the department.

SOME of the growers are inclined to shorten plantings of peas the coming year, and increase the acreage of beans. This brings to mind a Chicago gardener named Callahan, who for many years failed in his endeavor to have an abundance of the vegetable that scarcity made high. It is hard to strike it right.

EVERY seedsman sends his catalogue to last year's customers, no matter the size of the order. Practically all houses mail the new book to customers not heard from for two years and most of them send it to names not heard from for three years, while some keep every name on their list indefinitely. Five years ago a woman in a city where there are good seed stores, for the sake of convenience sent an order for a ten-cent packet of lantana to an eastern seed house whose advertisement chanced to fall under her eye. Then and each year since she has received their catalogue under a three-cent stamp. The first was the only order. Evidently that house makes no effort to determine the value of a name. But when the 1905 catalogue came to hand the woman sent a postal card asking them to make better use of the book in 1906.

THERE are many ways of adding new names to a mailing list, but the means of disposing of dead names are far less numerous. The most general one, that of advising the postmaster to send for return postage on undeliverable pieces, is rendered of little value by the failure of the great majority, it must be, of postmasters to comply with the law. It is sometimes argued that with general seed catalogues there is a recompense in that few such books are destroyed; that they find their way to someone who is as likely to order as would be the addressee. But how about the next season, when the "someone" gets both the other fellow's and his own book?

The daily papers have for weeks been full of the struggle for the control of the great Equitable Life Assurance Society. Hundreds of those in the trade are policy-holders and as such are vitally interested in the integrity of the surplus of $81,000,000 out of which one faction of the board of directors proposes to reimburse James H. Hyde for the surrender of the shares of stock which enable him to control the company.

court. According to a New York dispatch papers were drawn February 25 in a suit to prevent the expenditure of any part of the society's surplus to acquire Mr. Hyde's interest. Mr. Tull holds a twenty-year endowment policy of the Equitable Society. He has associated with him many others who hold large policies in the company. In his complaint Mr. Tull asks the court for relief for nearly 400,000 policy-holders from the present condition in the company's affairs. He alleges that the charter of the Equitable Society states it shall be a mutual organization and that all profit of more than 7 per cent on the company's stock shall go to the policy-holders. He states the policy-holders have paid in large sums of money and that under the charter the surplus of $81,000,000 belongs wholly to them.

LONDON WHOLESALE SEEDSMEN.

Jacob Wrench & Sons.

It is said this firm dates back to 1750. That it has carried on business at the northern approach to London Bridge for a great number of years there can be no doubt. The late Robert Wrench was at the head of the firm for a considerable time. The present head of the firm is Arnold Moss.

Carter, Dunnett & Beale.

I have one of James Carter's modest seed catalogues, bearing date 1842, before me, but I am unable to state the year of the foundation of the house; but it was probably previous to the accession of Queen Victoria. On the death of James Carter, three of his assistants, Messrs. Ainsworth, Beale and White, took over the business under the designation of Carter & Co. Eventually Mr. Beale became sole partner, and he took into partnership the late W. H. Dunnett, of Dedham, Essex, who had extensive seed grounds there, and the firm became known as above. Mr. Beale, whose death occurred a few years ago, was succeeded by his son, Gilbert Beale and probably younger members of the family, says Richard Dean in the Horticultural Trade Journal.

The Plant and Cut Flower Growers' Association of St. Louis was duly organized on a permanent basis on February 9. Its object is to benefit in every way possible the growers of plants and cut flowers. Those who have originated this movement have already been amply repaid by the interest manifested. We are desirous of enlisting the support and co-operation of every grower in the vicinity of the St. Louis market. We are determined to use whatever revenue we may acquire in the preparation of instructive entertainment for those who attend our meetings.

We desire to have it definitely understood that the object of this association is not in conflict with the St. Louis Florists' Club. We

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Introducers of new varieties of plants, home-raised or imported, whether members of the society or not, are earnestly requested to send to the secretary a list giving name, origin and description of such new plants, to be disseminated during 1905, for the purpose of record in the annual report of the society.

Register your new plants. As soon as you have ascertained that a seedling has the requisite merit to entitle it to a permanent existence and have given it a name, register name and description with the secretary of the national society. The record will then be published and your plant will be protected in its right to the exclusive use of the name you have bestowed on it. PITTSBURG.

The Market.

We have had a sample of all kinds of weather the past week and business has been much in keeping with it. There have been several large decorations, but on the whole it has been what one would call a quiet week. However, home stock has not been too plentiful.

Various Notes.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club will be held March 7. The subject for discussion will be roses. President Langhans is arranging for a fine display of home-grown stock, as well as samples of the new roses. An interesting meeting is assured.

The home of Wm. Flemm, of Breitenstein & Flemm, was destroyed by fire about a week ago. The house was entirely destroyed, although about everything of value on the first floor was saved. It was the old family homestead at Freeport, Pa.

Dave Geddis expects to go east this week, stopping at Washington, with the Americus Club, for the inauguration.

Business was good in the Allegheny market last week. E. C. Ludwig reports last week as good as Christmas week.

John Bader proved his popularity by being elected to the council by a large majority, notwithstanding the city ring and some other factions were working against him. His record is too clean to suit the ringsters.

W. A. Clark has been returned to the school board in his town.

L. I. Neff took possession of the B. L. Elliott place March 1.

J. B. Murdoch celebrated his wedding anniversary last Saturday night with a theater party and luncheon.

Hoo-Hoo.

NEW HAMBURG, N. Y.—James Duncan has invested $500 or more in a stock of orchids. Business is good with him.

FORT SCOTT, KAS.—E. H. Smith has had a good run of business. For one recent funeral he made fifty designs, taking continuous work from Saturday noon until Sunday noon.

Cattleyas, per dozen $5.00 to $7.50
 Cypripediums, per dozen 1.50 to 2.00

CLEVELAND.

The severe weather has eased up a trifle and has had its effect on business which is in a normal and healthy condition despite the great influx of bulbous stock of all varieties. Roses are cleaning up nicely at a fair price. Brides and Maids are coming in more plentifully, of good quality and superb color. Long Beauties are scarce. Short-stemmed are abundant. One store has a sale on at 75 cents per dozen. Meteor is not selling nearly as well as in previous years. It is hoped the Richmond will prove to be its successor, as it is a beautiful rose with a remarkable fragrance. Gen MacArthur is gaining more friends every day and has come to stay.

Carnations are in heavy demand. Prices are not what they ought to be, considering the fine quality. Is the carnation being overdone? This serious question has been in my mind for some time. High grade blooms should bring double the present price. Sweet peas are more plentiful, with demand fair. Mignonette, valley and violets can be had at a reasonable figure.

Washington's birthday called for a few decorations for balls and parties, which assisted in cleaning up the market last week.

Various Notes.

A new flower shop will be opened March 4 by the enterprising firm of Collins & Harrison, of 146 Euclid avenue. It is to be located in the lobby of the magnificent Hollenden Hotel. The store is to be fitted up in a very elaborate style. Plate glass mirrors will play a very prominent part and finished off with Italian marble and white enamel. The very best grade of flowers will be handled and a large stock will always be on hand to cater to this swell trade. Mr. Collins has something more up his sleeve which he will spring on the florists later in the season.

The Gasser Co. is making a large display of azaleas and bulbous stock in pans and boxes.

Smith & Fettes' window display of bulbs in boxes and pans makes a nice showing. About April 1 this firm will vacate the present store and locate in a more commodious store on the opposite side of the avenue.

James Eadie is making a fine show of lilies, azaleas and bulbous stock at his Erie street store.

Pete, better known as the Greek hustler, is doing a large trade in the Colonial Arcade and the Euclid Arcade. He disposes of carnations and roses by the thousand, which he buys mostly in Chicago.

Milton Parks, of the Citizen's building, says business is picking up finely since the weather has moderated.

William Smith, of West Madison avenue, has completed his two new houses. One is a propagating house. The other will be planted to Kaiserin and Meteor for summer blooms.

We are pleased to report that Mrs. A. Graham and son, Edward, who are at Hot Springs, were not in the terrible conflagration. Mr. Graham is convalescing nicely.

The Cleveland Floral Co., on Euclid avenue, is in the hands of a receiver, having gone into voluntary bankruptcy.

OXFORD, PA.

J. H. A. Hutchison says that this has been a hard winter on the coal pile, but that prospects are very good for trade. His carnations never looked better and the houses are literally seas of buds. He is having a very successful season in propagating, the young stock being perfect. He has five houses, new and up-to-date in every particular. His varieties are the old standbys, they having done well enough in quantity to make up for what they lack in size. He has a new red seedling of Roney Bros., West Grove, Pa., that he likes and will plant in some quantity next season. It is an easy grower, large plant, good color and good producer.

ST. PAUL.

Trade was very good despite the cold weather. It is much warmer now and flowers are abundant. Beauties are about the only item not in over-supply. Notwithstanding the immense cut, there is but little going to waste and prices have not changed appreciably.

Travelers have been coming for two months or more and the great army from Holland still to follow. We recall the following recent arrivals: C. W. Scott, August Rhotert, Wm. Hagemann, Chas. Schwake, W. Creighton, W.

CARNATIONS

We offer first-class stock of the finest varieties.

Strong Rooted Cuttings

Variegated Lawson This variety which we are introducing this season we are sure will prove to be the very best variegated sort. Pure ivory white with delicate carmine pencilings. Mr. W. N. Craig, an authority on everything pertaining to horticulture, says that he knows that this variety will out-bloom the favorite, Mrs. M. A. Patten, three to one. It has the Lawson habit and stem, and is bound to give satisfaction. $12 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Red Lawson A bright red sport of Lawson that is bound to be popular, and will be grown where Lawson is popular. $10.00 per 100; $75 per 1000.

Cardinal Bright cardinal, or crimson-scarlet. Won first prize for best 100 scarlet, first prize for best 50 carnations any color, first prize for best 50 scarlet seedlings, Chicago. $12.00 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Fiancee The queen of pink carnations; in a class by itself. Magnificent flowers, strictly fancy in every respect. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

White Lawson We consider this variety, which we introduced last season, the most profitable white carnation ever sent out. We think it will outbloom any other white two to one. It has given great satisfaction. When the flowers are left on the plants until fully developed they are much larger than Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson. We believe this will occupy among white carnations the same place that Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson does among pink carnations. Remember that we are headquarters for it. Splendid stock ready for immediate delivery. $7.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

Fred Burki Recommended as an extra free-blooming white variety and a claimant for popular favor. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Lady Bountiful A magnificent white of last season's introduction. $8.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Daheim Dark crimson. Grand stiff stem. Calyx never bursts. Free and abundant bloomer, developing very quickly. We consider this the best all-round crimson carnation. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Mrs. M. A. Patten This grand variegated carnation has given splendid satisfaction. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Enchantress Freest blooming, bringing highest market prices. In great demand. $4.00 per 100; $30.00 per 1000.

Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

Prosperity A magnificent fancy carnation. $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

We are now prepared to book orders for 1906 for the Coming Scarlet Victory. This is a real bread and butter variety. An early, free and abundant bloomer, with good stem; a magnificent keeper and shipper; flowers of the largest size, commanding the very highest price. This is going to be a money-maker. Orders will be filled in rotation, as received. Delivery beginning December next. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

ILLINOIS FLORISTS MEET.

At a meeting of the trade in Chicago on Saturday, February 25, the Illinois State Florists' Association was organized. There were present representatives of many departments of the trade, including the builder, the grower, the wholesaler, the retailer, the cemetery, the park, the professor and the press. W. N. Rudd was made temporary chairman and H. Haselbring temporary secretary. It was the sense of the meeting that the already great and rapidly growing interests of the trade demand an organization which shall be representative of the whole state. The name was adopted, each one present enrolled his name, and it was voted to place the matter of organization and incorporation in the hands of a committee of three, composed of James Hartshorne, Joliet, Ill., president of the American Carnation Society; P. J. Hauswirth, Chicago, vice-president of the S. A. F. for northern Illinois, and John Willius, Danville, Ill., vice-president of the S. A. F. for southern Illinois. They will report at an early date. The name of every man in the trade is wanted on the roll of members.

In case the state legislature appropriates a sum of money to be used for floricultural work at the State Experiment Station, a committee from the State Florists' Association will act in an advisory capacity and direct the work along proper channels.

SUPPORT THE BILL.

Every florist in Illinois should sit down right now, not tomorrow or some other day, and write to his representatives in the state legislature urging them to support the bill introduced February 22 by Representative Gibbons for an appropriation for greenhouses and the study of florists' problems at the State Experiment Station. The bill provides for $20,000 in 1905 and $10,000 in 1906 and will make possible the erection of a range of greenhouses at the Experiment Station and the study of many plant diseases which are causing loss to the trade.

The bill has met with some little ridicule at the hands of the daily press, which does not understand the nature of the proposal. The state has for years appropriated hundreds of thousands of dollars for experimental work on behalf of cattle interests, agriculture, pomology, etc., but not one penny has been expended on behalf of florists, who have, however, paid their due proportion of the taxes from which the funds have come. When you write to your representatives tell them that by the census of 1900 the greenhouses of Illinois were said to represent an investment of $4,648,056, with an annual production of $1,867,805. The increase since then has been fully fifty and probably seventy-five per cent. The industry is entitled, on the face of its value for taxation, to the consideration which it asks of the legislature.

PACIFIC COAST.

THE following information was sent out from Los Angeles, Cal., February 25, by the Associated Press: "A. C. Stillson of this city has produced the long sought green carnation after six years of experiment. The petals are tinged with vivid green, radiating from center to edge in deep stripes. He refuses to explain how he did it, except that prepared soil is used."

PLANTS FOR SHADY PLACES.

Florists are often asked to recommend plants that will do well in a shady situation and we have a few good articles that thrive in such locations. Fuchsias are very satisfactory, both when planted against a wall and when trimmed as standards. Phenomenal, Storm King, Mrs. E. G. Hill, White Phenomenal and Black Prince I have found to be the best suited to this climate and they can be recommended without any fear as to their adaptability.

Roses are not satisfactory in the shade, although the Banksias, both white and yellow, and the double Cherokee grow the best of any I have tried. They do not produce many flowers, but will make considerable foliage.

Climanthus Dampieri I consider the best of the climbing vines that will grow in a very shady place and when in blossom it is a very desirable plant. It is an evergreen and will stand considerable drought without any loss of foliage.

Calla lilies can always be recommended where hardly anything else will thrive on account of a surplus of moisture and hydrangeas are also valuable for the same reason. Cinerarias are perennials with us and in a shady, moist place show to the best advantage. They flower all the year and seed the entire neighborhood when they are planted for a season.

Ferns, especially the native woodwardia, can be recommended highly for planting in moist, shady places. They grow to a height of seven feet and are very ornamental. Adiantum pedatum, Aspidium cristatum, A. marginale and Asplenium thelypteroides, I have found to thrive especially well here and they will grow where many other varieties of ferns I have tried do not succeed. Polypodium vulgare and Asplenium ebeneum are the best of the low-growing ferns. Asplenium Trichomanes is also very effective when a border fern is desired.

There are some other plants and ferns I might name but the above list can all be relied on to give satisfaction in almost any shady situation if there is not too much moisture in the soil, although in California we are not troubled that way to any extent. G.

SEED WARRANTY CASE.

Frank Koch, of Spokane, Wash., by his attorney, A. H. Kenyon, has commenced an action in the superior court against John Anderson, in which he asks for damages amounting to $900. He alleges in the complaint, which was filed in court February 20, that the plaintiff is engaged in operating a greenhouse in Spokane and the defendant has conducted a seed store. That in August, 1904, the defendant sold to plaintiff one half pound of lettuce seed, for which the plaintiff was to pay 50 cents, the defendant warranting it to be Grand Rapids lettuce seed and suitable for raising lettuce in greenhouses.

That after planting and caring for it plaintiff found that it was not Grand Rapids seed and was of no value for greenhouse purposes, or for any other purpose. He alleges that on account of the fact he was prevented from raising any crop of marketable lettuce, and was thereby damaged to the amount of $900.

RHUBARB CULTURE.

The following note is from the Enterprise, of Riverside, Cal., for February 20.

Mrs. Theodosia Shepherd, of Ventura, has developed a big business in the culture of rhubarb. She has leased vacant lots about town aggregating about an acre, and has planted rhubarb plants thereon. So well has she succeeded that she is now shipping to outside points from twelve to fifteen tons a week. Some of these shipments are consigned to Ogden, San Francisco, Fresno and Los Angeles. The rhubarb plant grows with little attention. It is perennial and the price received for it enables the grower to make a big profit.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We are having beautiful spring weather but flowers are rather scarce, with the exception of violets and daffodils. Roses, except the short-stemmed stock, seem to be out of business. I made a tour of the principal stores in town this week and was surprised to see such a poor showing of first-class roses. Carnations are in sufficient supply to cover the demand. The price remains the same as it has for the past month but from what I hear from the growers it will drop considerably in the next two weeks, as the period of resting is getting over and with favorable weather an avalanche of flowers can be expected very soon. Paper White narcissi are gone but daffodils are now in full crop. Princeps and Sir Watkin are the best selling sorts and are selling at from 75 cents to $1 per hundred blooms. Roman hyacinths are gone. Dutch hyacinths are used for window decorating and some late blooming azaleas and cyclamens make the windows showy.

Quantities of almond and plum blossoms are brought in and are very popular for decorative purposes. Smilax and maidenhair are scarce and the florists have to rely to a great extent on wild ferns of various kinds. Business is rather quiet, although I think it is better than it was last year at this time. Funeral work seems to furnish most of the demand.

Various Notes.

Arnold Ringier, representing W. W. Barnard & Co., of Chicago, is in town. Mr. Ringier came by the way of Oregon and Washington and reports everything flourishing in the northwest.

J. H. Sievers & Co. are ready to send out their light pink Lawson. It is a grand acquisition to our list. It is about the color of Enchantress, with a very large flower and long, heavy stem. Mr. Sievers considers it one of his finest seedlings.

Chas. Stapenbach reports a heavy month's business. He has had considerable trouble during the past few weeks to get enough fancy stock to fill his orders. American Beauty has been scarce and with the larger dealers con-

LILIES FOR EASTER.

When should Harrisii lilies show buds to be in bloom for Easter at a temperature of 55 degrees at night and 75 degrees in the daytime? F. A. H.

If Easter were two weeks earlier than it is this spring, then we would allow seven weeks. But, as we will have three full weeks in April, and that should include many bright days, then if you can count the buds six weeks before Easter you will be all right. Japan longiflorums are often forced in a high temperature in less time than six weeks, from the visible buds, but at the temperature you quote and the lateness of Easter, Harrisii will be sure to be in time if you see the buds six weeks before the day of demand. Don't be at all afraid, however, of being a week too early. Lilies when open will keep in a cool, dark shed for a good week and more in perfect condition.

HARRISII LILIES.

Can I bloom Harrisii lilies in 4-inch pots? I had no other size pot when I put them in. They are looking fine now. Had I better, or can I change them safely? C. P. N.

If they are "5 to 7s" then they can be flowered in 4-inch pots, although it is not the way to do it, and the foliage will have a starved appearance, and if you expect to sell any in pots they will not be very attractive. If these plants are "7 to 9s" and not over twelve to eighteen inches in height just now and are intended for Easter, you can shift them into 6-inch with ease and safety. See that the soil is evenly distributed around the old ball of roots and pot firmly, also don't be deceived by the moist appearance of the new soil. It may look moist while the 4-inch ball of roots may be dry. You could shift into a 5-inch but if they are 7 to 9-inch bulbs they should have a 6-inch pot.

W. S.

LILY DISEASE.

I enclose a few leaves of Lilium Harrisii. Please tell me what is the matter with them. They are in 6-inch pots, about five inches above the pots, but do not seem to grow. They are in a night temperature of about 56 degrees and in daytime about 70 degrees or more on sunny days. Please tell me what to do with them. The longiflorum stand alongside of them and they are doing well. They are about fourteen to eighteen inches above the pots and look fine.

P. J. K.

The leaves enclosed were quite small and diseased. Your temperatures are all right and if the longiflorum in the same house and soil are in perfect health, then the trouble is no fault of yours. It is simply a bad case of lily disease, which was in the bulbs when you received them and nothing you can do will restore health to the plants. Throw them out and endeavor to purchase better bulbs next fall. Unless they are guaranteed to you as free from disease, which is not likely, you can scarcely blame the dealer you bought from, for he in turn was deceived. It is the man in Bermuda who is guilty.

W. S.

J. J. Beck, of New Castle, was a visitor here the other day. He has been coming over periodically for two years and has visited John Murchie's for the purpose of admiring Carnation Fred Burki. It looked better than ever to him the last trip. He reports the stems two and a half to three feet and the flowers three and a half inches. He will discard other whites to make room for Burki next season. It is an early bloomer, upright grower and does not burst; as Mr. Beck expresses it, "it is a bread and butter variety with a little molasses on top." While Burki is the pride of the Murchie establishment, there are a number of promising seedlings, including a red which Mr. Beck thinks may make the other reds "go away back and sit down."

RED SPORT (Of Maceo.)

Red Sport has proved the greatest money-maker we ever grew, producing more good blooms to the square foot of bench room than any other variety on the place. During the first part of January we could only get four cents for fancy Lawson and sold every Red Sport we had at five cents. Every grower who was here in December was carried away with its possibilities, as a future supply of a "holly berry red" for Xmas. There is no pick in the blooms. They are all a uniform size and color. There are 40,000 or 50,000 buds showing in different stages of development at this time and there is not a split or off color bloom in the lot and every plant is the picture of health. We will plant 20,000 plants of Red Sport for next season's bloom and the cut is already engaged by two of Washington's leading retailers. Red Sport is an easy doer and everyone can grow it as successfully as we can. Price for Feb. 20th delivery—12 for $1.50; 25 for $2.50; 50 for $4.00 post paid; $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000. ATLANTA, GA.

Concerning the recent bad weather, it was general in most all the southern states, but seemed to be central over this section. It began February 3 with a downfall of rain which froze as it fell; then turning very cold it began sleeting and the thermometer went down to the zero mark. This lasted one solid week and by the heavy weight of the ice all varieties of trees were broken down very badly. Some were entirely destroyed. The ice also weighted down all the trolley, telephone and telegraph wires, so that traffic was impossible. We florists had to get our cut flowers from the greenhouses in automobiles or on foot, as it was impossible to drive horses over the slippery streets and all trolley cars were at a standstill.

One of our local florists was a victim of the severe storm. A large telegraph pole, weighted down by the ice, fell across one of the greenhouses, breaking about 125 lights and also damaging a few pot plants on the inside. The quick work of the greenhouse hands, by covering up the broken-in place, prevented a greater loss, which would have been caused by the cold. The actual loss was not over $100.

There were no funerals taking place for several days on account of the freeze up. Business was at a standstill. Such winters as this is an unusual thing for us florists in the "Sunny South," and to recover without a greater loss we all are certainly thankful.

Reports from all the local florists are that business is at present very good and prices in accordance. W. J. L.

JOHN N. MAY, - - SUMMIT, NEW JERSEY.

FAIRHAVEN, MASS.

The greenhouses of Walter P. Winsor were thrown open to the public from February 22 to 26 and were visited by several thousand people, including many prominent florists and gardeners. As Mr. Winsor is disposing of all his orchids and turning over his houses to his gardener, Peter Murray, to be run by him commercially in the future, this is the last year this interesting show will be seen, a fact which the public in Fairhaven, New Bedford and other towns and cities near by keenly regret.

As usual, all the houses were a blaze of bloom. The Winsor carnation was a prime attraction and showed up finely. It is almost identical with Lawson, but of about the same shade of color as Marquis. Dutch bulbous stock in quantity, amaryllises, cinerarias, cyclamens, azaleas, eupatoriums, genistas, lily of the valley and other seasonable plants were flowering in quantity. Large numbers of fine Gloire de Lorraine begonias hung from the roofs of the various houses.

Orchids are a great feature here, dozens of beautifully flowered baskets of Dendrobium nobile in variety and many choice hybrids being included, also quantities of cœlogynes, lyeastes, odontoglossums, cymbidiums, phalœnopsis, cattleyas and lœlias. All the houses were beautifully arranged and the condition of everything reflected the greatest credit on Mr. Murray, the skillful gardener in charge. W. N. CRAIG.

HUNTINGTON, N. Y.

The annual carnation exhibition of the local society took place February 21. It was a fine show and well attended. The exhibitors and prize winners were: R. T. Hilloek, F. Boulon & Son, J. N. May, F. R. Pierson Co., H. T. & A. H. Funnell, J. D. Coekeroft, Thos. Eccles, Wm. O'Hara, Walter Shaw, Fred Keiffer and Geo. Ashworth.

Certificates were awarded to the Cottage Gardens for Lieut. Peary and Robt. Craig, also specials for Octoroon, Ethel Ward and Enehantrass. A certificate was awarded Jas. D. Coekeroft for a seedling crimson carnation, an immense flower of fine form on a good stem.

A vase of White Lawson, not for competition, was exhibited by Chas. H. Allen. This attracted much notice.

The Market.

Business is very good and the supply of stock is moving out very nicely at good prices. There is nothing special going on but the general run of decorations and funeral work create the demand. Roses continue rather scarce, Brides and Maids especially so. Beauties are coming in fair quantities and of good quality. They sell well.

Carnations are plentiful one day and the next day there will not be nearly enough to fill orders. The quality is fine. Bulbous stock is coming in in fairly large quantities. Dutch hyacinths sell well. Violets, though they sell pretty well, do not bring a very good price. This seems to have been a good year for violets in this vicinity and great quantities are being picked. Green goods are scarce.

The Rose Show.

This is a somewhat belated report of the rose show of the Florists' Society, due to the writer's illness, but the exhibits were so good that the facts are entitled to go on record.

W. K. Partridge put up the finest display of roses ever seen in the club rooms. He was, of course, awarded the prize for best general display, also first on Golden Gate, Ivory and Liberty and second on Meteor and Maid.

George & Allan also made a fine showing. They were first on Meteor, second on Beauty and Perle and third on Maid.

Albert Sunderbruch brought some fine stuff and received first on Maid and second on Bride.

Peter Weiland staged some well grown stock and received third on Bride.

J. W. Rodgers was awarded the prize for best display of violets.

J. A. Peterson staged his white begonia in good shape.

W. K. Partridge showed some especially well grown carnations and George & Allan bought a nice lot of bulbous stock.

J. W. Rodgers was officer of the day and Theo. Bock was judge.

Various Notes.

H. D. Edwards is confined to his bed and is very sick.

J. T. Conger and wife spent Sunday in Indiana.

The work on the new retail store of Julius Baer is progressing nicely and when finished it will be a model establishment.

Chas. Pommert, of Amelia, O., is sending in some fine Sprengeri which sells on sight.

Visitors: Will Reeser, Urbana; H. H. Ritter, Dayton, and Chas. Weltz, Wilmington. C. J. OHMER.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

Death of P. T. Huddart.

Peter T. Huddart, the well known florist, died February 20 at the Turkish bath parlors in the Kenyon. He had been at the institution for a week, undergoing treatment for a nervous disorder, and seemed to be on the road to recovery. About 1 o'clock, after having partaken of a light meal, in attempting to walk across the room he was seized with a fainting spell and before medical assistance could be had he was dead.

Mr. Huddart was born in England in 1864. From his childhood he had worked in and about a greenhouse for his father, who was a florist. At an early age he came to America and worked at the business in New York city for two or three years. Some nine years ago he came to Salt Lake, where he set up an establishment of his own, and this city has since been his home. He leaves a wife and one daughter, the latter four years old.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

Death of Charles E. Vesey.

Charles E. Vesey died February 18, of lockjaw, after a brief but terrible illness. The fatal termination followed stepping on a nail, which penetrated the foot. Mr. Vesey was 37 years of age, a man of brilliant attainments and exemplary character. He was a brother of the popular Judge Vesey, of W. J. & M. S. Vesey. He was shortly to have married Miss Tillie Meinhardt, of St. Louis, who was summoned to Fort Wayne when it was seen that his injury was of a serious character. Her brother, Fred Meinhardt, was also present at the funeral February 20.

MARYVILLE, MO.—In the recent cold weather the water main supplying C. H. Hollied's place was frozen up. The water company kept him supplied by wagon and the old-time hand force pump was again brought into use.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—At the greenhouses of the C. C. Pollworth Co. they caught a muskrat the other night while watching for the thief who was despoiling the carnations. They estimate that the muskrat had eaten off 1,000 carnation blooms in thirty nights.

TO-BAK-INE PRODUCTS THEY KILL BUGS

The great popularity of TO-BAK-INE FUMIGATING PAPER, TO-BAK-INE LIQUID and TO-BAK-INE FUMIGATING POWDER has resulted in a call for a Fourth Product described below:

TO-BAK-INE DUSTING POWDER

ANY TOBACCO OR TOBACCO ODOR and in ALWAYS CONTAINING A DEFINITE AMOUNT of FREE PURE NICOTINE, which is added to a specially prepared powder. The nicotine being in a free form, is gradually given off, killing all insects on flowers, plants and vegetables, leaving a perfectly ODORLESS POWDER OR RESIDUE, which is readily shaken or washed off, and SHOULD any remain it will NOT DECAY or ROT, thus differing from tobacco dust, etc. The advantage of this Powder should strongly appeal to Greenhouse Vegetable Growers, whose products must be free from foreign or objectionable tastes.

SALVIAS.

SALVIA MRS. C. N. PAGE.

New scarlet salvia of great merit. This grand variety originated at our greenhouses and is named in honor of the wife of the President of the American Seed Trade Association.

It is undoubtedly the dwarfest grower, most profuse and early bloomer and most intensely bright scarlet salvia yet introduced; therefore the best bedding variety.

A NEW FEATURE—It can be had in bloom in 5-in. pots or larger for Thanksgiving or Christmas decorations. This in itself should be enough to recommend it to the retail florist.

A number of the leading plantmen of the country have already placed their orders. Ready to ship now—2-in. pots, $1.00 per doz.; $6.00 per 100; 4-in. pots, $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

BUILDING QUERIES.

Please inform me through the REVIEW whether or not the roof bars of a greenhouse are better with caps or without. What size pipe do you recommend for hot water heating, and how many for a house 20x50 feet standing east and west for carnations? The coldest weather outside is about 20 degrees below zero. Would solid beds be better than raised benches? This house will stand on a high ground with good drainage. The side walls are of wood and one partly glass, namely the south side. Is it better to have the pipes under the beds or on the side walls? E. A. M.

While there are some who use butted glass and caps on the sash-bars they are greatly in the minority. My personal preference is for lapped glass, no caps. The glass should be lapped from one-eighth to three-sixteenths of an inch and bedded in good putty.

Heating pipes for hot water range in size from 1 1/4-inch to 4-inches in diameter. If cast-iron pipes are to be used 3-inch or 4-inch is the size usually employed. With hot water under pressure, which is undoubtedly the most satisfactory, the pipes range from 1 1/4-inch to 2-inch. The 2-inch pipe is a good size but a little more difficult to install than the smaller sizes. Your house 20x50 feet will require sixteen runs of pipe to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees during severe weather. A good plan would be to run three 2-inch risers, one under each bench, to return in four 1 1/2-inch pipes to the boiler, i. e., three 2-inch flows and twelve 1 1/2-inch returns.

The question of the position of the heating pipes is simply a question of bottom heat or no bottom heat. Some carnation growers prefer solid benches and no bottom heat, while others prefer bottom heat, i. e., raised benches with the pipes beneath them. Bottom heat is not so essential for carnations as for some other crops, but when it is desirable to force the crop, bottom heat is an advantage. L. C. C.

IS LAWSON "RUNNING OUT?"

At the recent carnation convention at Chicago it was stated that Lawson is "running out." This was permitted to go uncontradicted and, if it is true, it is important that the trade should be made to recognize the fact in time to take up the search for and find its successor before Lawson shall cease to be profitable. The average grower in past seasons found Lawson his best paying variety, partly because all have succeeded with it, and it may be true, as has been stated, that half the carnations grown today are Lawson.

For the purpose of ascertaining if the speaker at the convention voiced the general opinion, the views of a number of leading growers were sought. They do not fully bear out the contention, but they are, nevertheless, very interesting reading. Several of the replies follow:

E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind.

It would be passing strange if the Lawson carnation did not lose its constitutional vigor, considering the abuses to which the variety, in common with other sorts, has been subjected. In some places the Lawson still shows its old time health and freedom of bloom, but this is becoming the exception and not the rule: Where the Lawson still maintains its strength and beauty, it does so because the culture and treatment have been characterized by a careful consideration of its requirements.

The wonderful productiveness of the variety tends to drain the strength from the plant and if indifferent care is given to the selection and the rooting of the variety, deterioration is sure to follow, and it is not to be wondered at when every known rule is violated in the growth, selection and handling of the stock. This deterioration shows in the white streaks or discoloration of the flowers as well as in a less vigorous growth of the plant.

The reversal under our method of culture of the usual time of growth and flowering of the carnation has more to do, perhaps, with the quick giving down of our American varieties of carnations than any one other cause and when to this is added that greatest of all evils, the use of excessive heat and foul air in the propagating house, it is no wonder that even so sturdy a variety as Lawson may show signs of failing health.

That the variety is breaking down to some extent is conceded by most growers, but that it will continue to be grown profitably for some years by those who carefully select their cuttings and exercise judgment in its growth and culture goes without the saying.

Methods are improving in general and we look for a greater period of longevity for our carnations than has prevailed. As mentioned above, it is largely a question whether sane methods shall rule, or whether known laws shall continue to be violated, as to whether Lawson and other fine varieties last only six years or for a much longer period.

Geny Bros., Nashville, Tenn.

We offer as evidence in the matter of Lawson not "running out" the accompanying photograph of one of our houses of Lawson, photographed February 12, 1905. We think nothing more need be said as to our views.

W. N. Rudd, Mt. Greenwood, Ill.

It is certainly true with us that Lawson is neither so vigorous nor so productive as formerly. Under present methods of culture—early planting indoors, high feeding, and intensive culture generally—it is to be expected that all varieties will rapidly deteriorate; while, no doubt, if the plants propagated from were left out late in the fall, grown cool and without feeding, and propagated after they had received the benefits of the increasing sunlight of approaching spring, and not over propagated, they would retain their vigor and productiveness indefinitely. The faster a horse trots the more he sweats. It does not matter much, however, as the improvements made in the flower compel us to continually discard former favorites. There are a number of varieties now in sight which should put Lawson out of the running.

J. H. Dunlop, Toronto.

I may say that our experience has not borne out this statement. While Lawson, with us, is not quite as large in size of flower as in past seasons, there is good reason for it other than lack of vitality. I think one reason of Lawson showing signs of wear is the high temperature at which the variety is grown in some sections in order to obviate having burst calyxes. I have never run this variety above 54 degrees, our average being 52 degrees, and while there are some burst calyxes yet we have Lawson in as good condition as when first introduced. With the white, red, variegated and light pink sports, it is destined, in this section at least, to furnish a large proportion of the plants grown for cut flowers.

S. J. Goddard, Framingham, Mass.

Regarding reports of Lawson "running out," I am of the opinion that this is so. In some establishments we see Lawson as good as ever, but in the majority it is quite the reverse and very inferior. Lawson has been the hardest seller of any variety of carnation on the Boston market the past winter. This no doubt is easily accounted for by the large quantities of that variety grown in New England.

Dale Estate, Brampton, Ont.

We do not believe that Lawson is "running out," or will run out in a hurry. There have been times this season when we have found that it was not as good a shipper as usual for long distances, but we are not certain of the cause. In its own particular shade Lawson still holds its place, and is in good demand.

C. L. Washburn, Chicago.

We find Lawson just as productive and fully up in quality to the first year we had it. We attribute this to the fact that we take a large part of our Lawson cuttings from field plants as late as possible before they freeze up. This gives us very fine, strong plants each year. There are too many Lawson grown, as it is such an easy "doer" that everybody succeeds with it. The same can be said of Enchantress. We need more variety of color, as people are getting tired of seeing the same shades of color all the time.

E. A. Stroud, Overbrook, Pa.

Lawson, to my mind, is not "running out." The man who grows it well will find a market. This carnation no longer has the field to itself, but is competing with newer varieties.

August Poehlmann, Morton Grove, Ill.

If we had an axe to grind we might possibly condemn Lawson. (The man old-time vigor. Judging by results we are justified in growing the variety extensively and we doubt whether Nelson Fisher will knock it out.

C. W. Reimers, Louisville, Ky.

Lawson is increasing in vigor and profit, and surpassing all other carnations for me.

W. K. Partridge, Lockland, Ohio.

Lawson is showing no sign of "running out" with me. I intend planting more of it next season.

Wm. Scott, Buffalo, N. Y.

The opinion is widely expressed that this greatest of all carnations is showing several signs of deterioration. Doubtless with many growers this is true, and we have noticed the fact this winter in more than one place, but we have also seen it recently as good as ever. If some men can grow it as healthy and perfect as it was four years ago, so can others. It is too early in its existence for this fine variety to be "running out." It was such a grand acquisition that everybody for the first two years propagated any and every part of the plant. It has also received by nearly every grower a strong heat, too strong to keep up a vigorous and healthy growth, and when it is grown in a night temperature of 50 degrees it will produce more perfect flowers, if not quite so many of them.

In the writer's humble opinion Lawson can be grown as fine in every respect as it ever was with proper selection of cuttings and a lower temperature. Bursting and off color are great complaints. Don't take cuttings from a notice is a dismal failure. They are planted in six inches of soil on the greenhouse floor, which is naturally dry, but this is not the way to treat Lawson. It must have perfect drainage.

To conclude, in February, 1903, we saw at the Cottage Gardens a magnificent bench of Lawson which were planted on the bench from pots the previous May. The following December we saw a house of Lawson at Trenton Falls, N. Y., equally as fine. They were lifted from the field in early July. Either method is all right. Take nothing but medium sized shoots from the flowering stems, and those only from free flowering plants with perfect calyxes, and plant in a raised bench or most thoroughly drained semi-solid bed and the good Mrs. Lawson is yet indispensable.

M. A. Patten, Tewksbury, Mass.

Yes, it seems to be the nature of all carnations, as we grow them in this country, to run out in a few years, some varieties quicker than others. I think the free flowering varieties, the continued growing without rest, and the indiscriminate taking of cuttings probably have something to do with it. Also the too free use in some cases of chemical fertilizers. Lack of ventilation also has considerable to do with it.

J. F. Wilcox, Council Bluffs, Ia.

As regards Lawson "running out," I think if a person is careful in selecting stock, that Lawson is as good as it ever was, at least it does as well with us.

Wm. Weber, Oakland, Md.

I am not a believer in the theory that varieties "run out" or exhaust themselves after a certain period of time. The variety Mrs. Thomas W. Lawson, or any other variety in fact, will retain its vitality for ages providing a rigid compliance with the demands of nature and the variety are adhered to.

This is scarcely possible in the average commercial establishment of today, and so, when a variety has been over propagated or has had several hard knocks in successive years, the grower begins to look around for something better of like color.

Personally, I do not believe that Lawson is "running out," and while it is not as good as it was the first year we grew it, it is much better than it was for us the second year, and has improved ever since. The temporary set-back it sustained during the second year we grew it was largely the fault of the house. It requires much less light than the average carnation.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Precautions.

Not only must one be critical in the selection of cuttings and give the young plants the best of culture, but at all times every precaution must be taken to ward off disease. If you were careful to choose none but cuttings from vigorous plants the battle is half won. Still there are many chances of loss between propagation and planting out, especially from fungous troubles.

In a batch of young plants it is not unusual to find a small number that are decidedly lacking in vigor. Instead of nursing these along any length of time, it would be economy to destroy them at once. In all probability you will lose who made the statement, at the convention, that Lawson is "running out" is not an introducer of novelties and appears free from bias.—Ed.) We find our stock, however, to be as good as ever, probably due to change of soil in field and benches. This may help to retain its plant that has burst flowers. Usually you will find one plant bearing all burst calyxes, which are almost globular and early show that they are going to split. Another plant will bear flowers of perfect form. You know which to choose. A bed that frequently comes under our them, anyway; if not, you will wish you had, for it is such as these that offer a shining mark for stem-rot in the field or soon after housing. The dormant spores of this dread disease float about in the air and, like all, or most, diseases of a parasitic nature, these spores, to become active, must lodge in a place suited to their requirements; also there must be necessary heat and moisture for development. Shade conditions are also favorable to their growth.

Plants in the strong vigor of health offer no chance for fungus spores to obtain a foothold, and, if kept steadily growing, escape any attack.

You have no doubt observed that some varieties are more liable to be affected than others, also that this difference is sometimes not universal, as varieties affected with you may be wholly free from it at another place, showing the need of studying the peculiarities of each variety in order that vitality be not in any degree lessened.

I will not say that stem-rot cannot be produced in the cutting bench, but do not believe that it has its origin here, as a rule. On the other hand, cuttings may be so weakened when in the sand by adverse conditions as to materially lower their vitality, thus becoming an easy prey. The prime cause of all disease, whether in animals or plants, can be traced to violation of nature's law whereby conditions are created favorable to the development and increase of disease germs.

In addition to good culture, it is well to use means to reduce the number of spores present to the lowest possible point. For this, sulphur applied to the heating pipes at intervals is advised, also dusting the plants with grape dust, at the same time allowing it to settle on all parts of the house. Never allow the atmosphere to become stagnant or heavily impregnated with moisture.

While there are other troubles than stem-rot, it is the most dreaded, and if means are taken to keep clear of this, there need be little fear of others.

SAMPLE OF SOIL.

I send a little box of soil as I have composted it for carnations for next season. What are its needs, if any? What constitutes an ideal soil for carnations?

J. T.

The little box of soil you sent was hardly enough to form a good opinion of your soil, but if I mistake not it is the same that I advised you to add manure, etc., to, some time ago. I doubt whether you could improve this soil much more than you have done. But as I said in my other reply, it is not an ideal carnation soil and all the doctoring you can do will not make it so. I would advise you to pot some young carnation plants in some of this mixture and see how they grow in it. If they make a good, sturdy growth you will find it all right to use next season on your benches. The ideal carnation soil is a fibrous loam, just medium heavy, with enough sand in it to make it crumble when it gets dry. All sod should be well rotted and well pulverized before planting. From one-third to one-fifth of manure should be added when composting, according to the natural fertility of the soil.

Carnation Lieut. Peary.

CRAIG AND PEARY.

The accompanying illustrations are from photographs from the Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y. The picture shows the character of flower of Robert Craig probably better than any we have published. Lieut. Peary is the white which is being sent out this year and which has won the approval of those best qualified to judge of the value of a seedling. It has pure color, good size and form, strong stems of good length, strong calyx and is reported an early and continuous bloomer. Those who have seen it growing say that it gives promise of being a very useful commercial sort.

CARNATIONS IN POTS.

I have a north and south house eighty feet long and want to grow carnations. I want pink, red and white and want all-round bloomers. I do not care for size of flower but want perpetual bloomers in a temperature of 50 degrees. Could I expect success if I grew them in pots and kept shifting as required? I would like to do this so as to have the use of the benches for other purposes late in spring, and so I could sell the old plants in pots.

M. W. W.

The best varieties for you to grow in that manner would be Mrs. Joost and Indianapolis for pink, Queen Louise, Moonlight and Lady Bountiful for white and Crane for red. These are all upright growers and good producers. It is not good policy to grow only one variety in a color if you can get more varieties of equal value. Every variety has its own time when it is at its best and it is well to have another variety in the same color which will be at its best when the other is at its poorest.

The plan you suggest of growing the plants in pots could be executed all right, but you will find it lots of work. Start with 5-inch and shift into 7-inch when they need it and when the roots fill the sevens feed with liquid manure until you sell them. Unless you can sell a large part of them it would pay you better to plant them on the benches, as it will take the sale price of a good many of the plants to pay for the extra work in caring for them in the pots.

A. F. J. BAUR.

PROSPERITY?

I send you a couple of blooms of a carnation which I suppose is a sport. The pink flaked flowers first appeared on a bench of White Cloud, but the edges of the petals are not smooth, so it may not be a sport of Cloud. It is large and the stems long. The flowers keep splendidly. I have had this two seasons and see one or two similar plants in other lots, but they have not as yet bloomed.

J. J. L.

The blooms were badly wilted by the time they reached me, but they revived enough for me to be able to see the form and color. I think you had a plant or two of Prosperity mixed in your White Cloud. How they got there you will, of course, know better than

I. Mixtures of this kind occur sometimes on the best places.

PARCELS POST.

Not later than April 1 a parcels post arrangement with Great Britain will go into effect and packages of merchandise will be carried between the two countries at the uniform rate of 12 cents a pound, with the maximum for each parcel of four pounds six ounces. A similar arrangement has been made with France to go into effect at an early date. By the payment of 8 cents for registration, delivery can be assured.

An anomaly is that under this arrangement a plantsman at Chicago can send a package of cuttings to London or even to Hong Kong, China, cheaper than he can send them to Evanston, Hinsdale or Blue Island. The domestic rate will be 16 cents a pound and the foreign rate 12 cents a pound. This may before long result in a broadening of the parcels post laws and the eventual general adoption of the system in this country.

PRONOUNCING DICTIONARY.

So many requests like the above have reached the REVIEW during the past two or three months that it has become impossible to comply with them. We are therefore reprinting the Pronouncing Dictionary in booklet form, just the size to fit a desk pigeon-hole and be instantly available. A copy will be sent postpaid to anyone who sends 25 cents with his request.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

The Seed Sowing Month.

This will be a busy month with the man raising a general assortment of bedding plants. It is a seed-sowing month. Asters, stocks, dianthus, marigold and other so-called hardy annuals should be sown about the middle of the month. I allude more to the plants that you expect to sell for your patrons' gardens, and this is a considerable business nowadays, and a fairly profitable one. It does not do to sow so early that these plants occupy much room until after Easter, for you will not have room to spare, and by the end of April or early May they should go into cold frames. Now, take asters at 25 cents a dozen! There is a fair profit in them, as they can be grown in flats at little more than one inch apart.

Cobaea.

Don't sow this until the end of March. They soon get long and tangled up and are no better than plants eighteen inches long. If you are not sure that you can distinguish the right end to push into the soil, then plant the seed edgewise, pressing the seed in until it is even with the surface and you will be sure to be right. Don't keep the soil too moist or the seed will rot.

Pennisetum.

This beautiful grass is one of the most ornamental plants for the flower garden. Particularly good is it for the edges of beds of sub-tropical plants, such as cannas and caladiums. P. longistylum is the species mostly grown. Sow the seed thinly in shallow flats. When an inch high prick out into other flats and later pot into 3-inch. From the first of May a cold frame is the best place for them. Sow at once.

In connection with this plant some one ought to encourage the use of ornamental grasses, for they are, if tastefully arranged, capable of making a most beautiful group. If you could see during the summer but one flower bed, either flowering or foliage, and had to look at it often I should for mine have such a bed of grasses as the Henry A. Dreer Co. planted at the Pan American. There was the arundo, plain and variegated; eulalia in variety, some other grasses I don't call to mind, and edged with the beautiful pennisetum.

Cannas.

It is time now to get up and divide the canna roots. In cutting up the roots discard any piece that is unsound. Any piece that shows one or, better still, two eyes will make a fine plant by bedding time. Spread an inch of sphagnum moss or coconut fibre on a bench in a warm house—better still if there is a heating pipe beneath it—and lay the roots on this and cover them very lightly with the same material. When the growth is four or five inches high they should be lifted and potted, for they will also have made good active roots.

Perhaps, and most likely, you will not be able to pot them all at once, for they do not all start at once, but you will be saved the labor and expense of potting those roots that from some cause or other do not start at all. Pot them from the bench into 4-inch pots and that will do them until they are sold.

We have often bought cannas about the first of June that were drawn up, weak things that looked as if they had been subjected to the treatment of January tulips. This is not right. They should from their very start have the fullest light and when planted out be strong, stocky plants that sun and wind won't hurt. They occupy the benches less than two months, demand no more space than a well grown 4-inch geranium, but we get considerably more for them and we should give our customers good plants.

I am not going to say anything about varieties, for they are too numerous and several good old standard sorts are not yet played out. What we want for bedding is, first, free flowering, second, erect strong flower stems, and, third, a distinct, decided color.

The Gloxinia.

The first contribution the writer offerred years ago to horticultural readers was on this beautiful summer-flowering plant of no use except for the conservatory or window of a dwelling house but for that purpose most admirable. Somehow I never grew this plant better, or as well as we did some fifteen years ago, but I retained recollections of how it was done in the days when we first assumed pants.

We put the bulbs in 3-inch pots, now or perhaps a little later, in light soil and one-third rotten refuse hops (leaf-mold is just as good) and after the first watering kept them rather dry until the leaves appeared. When the leaves had overlapped the pots they were shifted into 5-inch and some of the strongest into 6-inch. The shifting must be done carefully or the brittle leaves will break. The pots were drained an inch or so. The soil was three parts loam, not sifted, one part old, well-rotted manure and one part of the hops. The pots were elevated on an inverted 5-inch pot and kept far enough apart so that we could water each plant without wetting the leaves, spreading them wider apart as they grew. We watered with a can because "they only want watering when they want it." They were shaded with cheese-cloth, which was removed when the sun was not on them. We saw no rust that summer because they had careful attention to their needs and that is about all there is in the successful culture of any plant.

They are rather common now in our town. The chief value of them is that they are a splendid plant for a room and will develop all their foxglove-like flowers. The dry air of a dwelling seems to suit them.

Pelargoniums.

A week or so ago in some remarks on the show pelargonium I said "they were wintered in 3-inch pots." Somebody blundered, either the man at the machine or my pencil. Of course, I meant to say a 4-inch.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

SMILAX.

Should smilax roots be lifted from the beds and divided each year? How soon after cutting the vines will it do to lift them? How should they be cared for during the resting period?

A. M. B.

It is not profitable to lift and divide smilax roots, such divisions being far inferior to young seedling plants. The method favored by the most successful growers of this useful plant is that of sowing the seeds in flats or pans in February or early March, and as soon as the seedlings are large enough to be handled to pot them off into 2-inch pots, in which they may remain until some time in May and then be repotted into 3-inch pots, this practice giving sturdy and well rooted plants in readiness for planting in the bed in July.

With proper care and a night temperature of 60 degrees throughout the winter such a bed should furnish three or four crops of smilax in the season, providing that the bed has been filled with six to eight inches of good soil at the start, and also been given a light top dressing of soil and manure between the crops.

Some growers do run a smilax bed for two or three seasons, and in that case the roots are rested by keeping them somewhat drier for four to six weeks and giving the house abundant ventilation, but without disturbing the roots by lifting and replanting. At the conclusion of the resting period all weeds and dead growths are removed, and the bed given a good top dressing of manure or manure and soil in equal parts, and the amount of water gradually increased as the plants start into growth, the strings having been replaced at the time the bed was cleaned up.

During the summer months there is always some risk of an attack of red spider or thrips on the smilax and thorough syringing is required to keep these pests in subjection. W. H. TAPLIN.

LYCASTE SKINNERI.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph of a plant flowering at the greenhouses of H. G. Selfridge, Lake Geneva, Wis., whose head gardener, C. H. Gebhardt, supplies the following descriptive and cultural note:

"Lycaste Skinneri, from Guatemala, is one of the easiest of orchids to grow, very free flowering, and a fine ornamental plant. It has oblong pseudo-bulbs, oblong, lanceolate, membranous plaited leaves and single-flowered, radical scapes. The flowers are large, five to seven inches across, and of waxy texture, the sepals oblong, spreading, blush white. The petals are half the length, ovate, erect over the column, with the tips reflexed, more or less tinted with rose. The lip is three-lobed, the middle lobe roundish, white, spotted with deep rose, sometimes crimson. It blooms during the winter months, keeping for a long time. This plant should be in every collection, as it is one of the finest for winter blooming and I think good for any florist, as we have also some pure white varieties.

"We keep them in our Mexican house, which we keep at a night temperature of from 50 to 55 degrees and 10 degrees higher in bright weather. We pot them in fern roots, a little moss and a little chopped sod, with plenty of drainage and give a liberal supply of water during the growing season. They are easily propagated by division after flowering and these plants will stand for a long time in flower in a dwelling room without the slightest injury arising therefrom, which we cannot say of other orchids, so this would be an ideal plant for a commercial florist for a high class trade."

OMAHA, NEB.—A. Delaney is removing his store from South Omaha to the new Bergquist building, Twenty-fourth and L streets.

CLEVELAND, O.—The city council has provided $2,500 for the erection of a greenhouse at Gordon park for growing bedding stock, etc.

RHINEBECK, N. Y.—According to reports the violet growers here will add something like fifteen or twenty new houses this spring.

ASTERS FOR CUT FLOWERS.

Sowing the Seed.

Aster seed should be sown from March 1 till the end of May, at intervals of two weeks, if you want a continuous crop and variety. The varieties, however, differ greatly in their time of flowering. For instance, if you were to sow Boston Market, Truffaut's Peony Flowered and Semple's Branching all on March 15 and treat them alike you would have in bloom, first, the Boston Market, three weeks later the Peony Flowered and in another three weeks the Semple's. The white Boston Market is very useful, because it gives you flowers just when there are no carnations. Yet the later you can pick good asters the better price you can get. We usually get a killing frost about the end of September or the first week of October, so that a crop not cut by that time is lost and you must be guided by your climate in this respect.

We use flats of convenient size, say 24x12x2 inches for starting the seed. Fill the flats with light loam, press the surface even and rather firmly, then water enough to wet the soil thoroughly. When soaked away the surface of the soil is not wet enough to be sticky. Sow the seed thinly and press it lightly into the soil. Then sift over the surface enough soil to cover the seed. If the seed is out of sight the covering is thick enough and the slightest sprinkling of water is sufficient. A temperature of 50 degrees is about right. As soon as the third or character leaf is developed, transplant into similar flats of three inches depth and give them the full light. Put the seedlings about one and a half inches apart. Get the roots down straight in the hole you have made for them with your wooden dibble and be sure you get the seed leaves almost resting on the surface of the soil. It may seem to you that the little soft stem is being buried deeply. That won't hurt.

Keep them down. Now, if you are going into asters by the acre, all this can be done by using the benches instead of flats and after the first of May a cold frame will answer the purpose. The flats we prefer for all March sowings, as we can set them out of doors in May and harden off the plants before planting.

Planting in the Field.

The time of planting must be governed by your climate and if you are in no danger of getting a frost, say, after May 15, then plant the earliest crop and after that you can plant at intervals until the end of June. For the early, small growing varieties you can set them twelve inches between the plants and fifteen inches between rows, but the stronger growing varieties need eighteen inches each way. We have tried less room and found it poor economy. Also leave a space of two feet after every fourth row. You will need that to walk through and pick the flowers.

Character of Soil.

I should be inclined to say that texture of soil is not of material importance providing it has plenty of manure and water can be applied. We have seen fine asters grown in everything from a light gravelly loam to pretty stiff clay. Perhaps the finest produced in this locality are on a heavy yellow loam. It is almost impossible within reason to give the soil too much animal manure and if there is any crop would well repay sub-plowing the land, it is asters. In ordinary summers you cannot get along without watering. Water is the life of them. More than one fine field of Semple's Branching aster we have seen become worthless because it did not rain a drop in the month of August. A thorough soaking once a week in dry spells is the all-important feature in producing fine flowers.

Cutting and Snipping.

There is no disbudding needed with asters and all there is done by some growers is to pinch out the leading growth, or rather just the top of the center growth. It encourages the side shoots, which is the crop, both in quantity and quality.

The flowers should be cut with all the stem you can get, just as soon as they are fully developed. For shipping to market the flowers are usually tied in bunches of twenty-five, laid in a long box and if large, fine flowers they deserve only to be laid in one tier of bunches, but more often they are shipped in two layers. Asters ship well and keep their form.

In concluding this monograph on the aster I can only add that you may be disappointed because your product will not resemble the magnificent flowers that are pictured in the illustrated colored catalogues of Messrs. Art, Pigment & Co. Yet don't always blame the seedsmen. They have paid high for artists to create these gorgeous monstrosities. By faithful care and attention (more than art or science) you may produce blooms that will delight and bring shekels to your pocket. When you see a flower of good size, form and color, save it for seed and in a few years, with careful selection, you will have a strain of your own.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

THE BEST MUMS IN ENGLAND.

A recent number of the Gardeners' Magazine, an English publication, contains an interesting article by the veteran grower, E. Molyneux, with a list of twenty-four varieties of Japanese chrysanthemums, which he considers the best in cultivation in England. The list is as follows: F. S. Vallis, canary yellow; Bessie Godfrey, canary yellow; Mrs. F. W. Vallis, crimson, shaded apricot; Duchess of Sutherland, orange yellow; W. R. Church, rosy crimson, bronze reverse; Mme. Paola Radaelli, rose and white; Elsie Fulton, white; Mrs. G. Mileham, pink; Henry Perkins, bronzy crimson; Mafeking Hero, bronze; Lady Conyers, rosy pink; General Hutton, yellow shaded bronzy red; M. C. Nagelmackers, white; J. R. Upton, golden yellow; Miss Olive Miller, pink; George Lawrence, golden bronze; W. A. Etherington, silvery mauve; Chrysanthemiste Montigny, straw yellow; Miss Stopford, creamy white; J. H. Silsbury, terra cotta shading to yellow; President Viger, light pink; W. Duckham, pink; Edith Shrimpton, white; Henry Stowe, blush pink.

This list may be said to be entirely free from any bias of trade influence and most likely represents the careful summary of the writer's notes and observations of the fall shows, and a little review of the varieties with their behavior here is interesting by way of comparison.

The system of showing over there, which is almost exclusively on boards, makes considerable difference, since no matter how long and bare the neck or weak the stem, it is immaterial if the flower has size. Here, of course, our system is different. The flowers are set up mostly on long stems in vases and stem and foliage count for much, sometimes even, I think, a little too much, since the flower is really the "paramount issue."

The two first varieties, F. S. Vallis and Bessie Godfrey, are both fine here, particularly for the short vase classes, but most growers here will concede the palm for yellows to Col. Appleton and Mrs. E. Thirkell as being deeper in color and having better stem and foliage. F. S. Vallis is probably the largest variety in cultivation today, but the stem is weak.

The third best on the list, Mrs. F. W. Vallis, did not show up with us last year as we had hoped. The color was exquisitely beautiful on second crown buds, but size was lacking and many blooms showed an eye. A much finer crimson with us was Maynell, which did not manage to secure a place on Mr. Molyneux's roll of honor.

Duchess of Sutherland I am not acquainted with but W. R. Church has done finely. This variety is firmly established now as one of the standard varieties with us.

Mme. Paola Radaelli has not "caught on" and the color is one which the American cultivator passes over without a second glance, being neither pink nor white, but of the character generally described as "washy."

Miss Elsie Fulton was a sad disappointment for us. I have spoken before in these columns, I think, of this variety. Many letters from the other side eulogized Elsie and we know how fine she grows there, but, alas, our strenuous climate upset her equilibrium entirely and sorrow is our portion. She was in flower by October 1 and showing an eye several inches across; in fact, many buds seemed to be all eye, with merely a fringe of petals around it.

Mrs. G. Mileham is very good here generally, though not one of the easiest to grow and since W. Duckham was introduced has fallen from popular favor since the latter variety is a grand grower and gives a much larger flower with practically the same color.

Henry Perkins is so far a novelty here and has not yet been distributed generally, but I like the color very much myself.

Mafeking Hero and Lady Conyers have neither of them shown any qualities entitling them to serious consideration here. Neither has Mme. C. Nagelmackers, but General Hutton was a much admired flower last fall. A grand growth, stiff stem and a perfect flower combined to make this a splendid variety, though unfortunately one cannot enter it in a class calling for a fixed number of yellows, since the bronzy shading kills it as a pure yellow and either Thirkell or Appleton would beat it.

Miss Olive Miller is far too early here for exhibition, though a beautiful thing and will probably fall into line as a fine early pink commercially.

W. A. Etherington has shown up splendidly and should be grown by every one. While the color is somewhat light and on that account needs to be carefully placed in a collection of varieties when being staged, it is a very fine variety.

Chrysanthemiste Montigny is in the novelty list here, as is also J. H. Silsbury and another year must elapse before one can judge them impartially.

W. Duckham is now well known and needs no further comment here. It is A1 in its color. The two last named varieties I am not acquainted with.

The noted French raiser, M. Calvat, is well represented, with F. S. Vallis, Mme. C. Nagelmackers and Chrysanthemiste Montigny. He has given to the world many grand varieties and also, unfortunately, a host of poor ones. Some seven of the list are Australians, notably W. Duckham, W. R. Church and W. A. Etherington, and I am inclined to think that a list compiled here of the twenty-four best would show a much larger percentage even than that. America does not seem to be represented by a single variety, though, as we know, several American varieties are standard commercial sorts over there.

The list shows fairly well the cosmopolitan character of the present day mum and if a few varieties from Japan were included in the list the chain would be complete.

CHARLES H. TOTTY.

RETURNING CONDENSATION.

I notice an article in the REVIEW of February 9, headed "Returning Condensation," in which it is apparent that the writer is surprised that high pressure and an automatic pump are not recommended to those who want the best system. I am surprised, after my experience with this system of heating, that anyone having experience should recommend it.

I first built two houses, each 150 feet long, and put the boiler down in a pit twelve feet deep, on a system recommended to me, the gravity system. I found that one-third of the pipes were always cold. The steam condensed in the pipes and water accumulated. The steam in the boiler prevented the water from returning until a large quantity accumulated, so that the weight of the water was heavy enough to overcome the steam pressure.

Then I changed from this system to a trap system. This was twenty years ago. That trap was so complicated that it was constantly out of order and I had frequently to get up in the night to repair it. The parts were so small that any little dirt that got in would clog it. From this I changed to the pump system. At that time the automatic receiver on the pump was not yet in existence. I got one of the best steam-fitters to make for me a receiver, put a float in and attached the pump. The receiver he made was 3x6 feet, holding five or six barrels of water, so I was pumping cold water back into the boilers. This was not satisfactory and I was on the lookout for something else.

Stairway Decoration by Ellison Floral Co., St. Louis.

I found a trap that was guaranteed to be satisfactory. I have used this for the last five years and would not be without it. It has worked for six months at a time without any attention. We return to the boiler without any pump, and without any air cocks: the trap takes care of the whole thing. We use what some would call high pressure, but it is only from twenty to thirty pounds. With this pressure we have every pipe in the house of equal heat, the returns being as hot as the flow, 900 feet from the boiler.

We use twelve 1-inch pipes in a house 28x300, all flows, and eight 1-inch pipes in a 20-foot house. Each pipe is controlled by a valve. We can use all flows, one or twelve. We heat from the center of a 300-foot house, the pipes running each way, returns across each end returning to the boiler, these returns across the ends being the only returns. A check valve is used at the end of every 1-inch pipe before it enters the return, so that we do not have to open and close valves in the returns; all we have to do is to open and close the valve in the center walk.

Some claim that high pressure will not grow good flowers, but we find we can grow as good stock in one end of the house as in the other, and we do not find one end cold and another hot. With low pressure the farther ends of the pipes are always colder than the flows, or those near the boiler, while with high pressure the water comes back to the boiler at nearly boiling heat, requiring but little fire to convert it into steam again. With the trap system you do not have the expense of running a pump and keeping it in repair. Further, we do not require a boiler pit, as the boiler will work just as well on top of the ground as in a cellar.

"The proof of the pudding is in the eating." The following well known firms, some of the largest in the country, have tried all systems and are now using the traps. Our concern has 250,000 feet of glass, but the system will work just as well on a small plant if no more than 1,000 feet of glass. Peter Reinberg changed from pumps to traps and was pleased. Bassett & Washburn have let a contract for a new place, all traps. Breitmeyer's Sons, at Mt. Clemens, were twenty-five feet below the surface with their boilers but have changed to traps. The J. D. Thompson Co., Joliet, put in a pump system at large expense, used it two years and changed to this system, and would not change back under any consideration. Around Cleveland nearly all the florists are using traps.

This article is not written to advertise any trap. It is simply to help anyone and everyone to get the best system without a lot of expensive experiments.

GERANIUMS AND CINERARIAS.

Please inform me how to treat young geraniums so as to make them grow fast and to make them bloom. Mine look healthy, but do not grow as fast as they should, and do not bloom freely. Also tell me if cinerarias can be had to bloom in summer. If so, when should I plant seed?

M. W.

At this season zonal geraniums should be in 3-inch pots and if you want them to grow fast give them 50 degrees at night and always the fullest light. A dark house or shade is most unsuitable. A rather heavy loam and potted quite firmly is much more conducive to flower than a light, rich soil and loosely potted. For bedding purposes you do not want them showing flower just now. Ours were either pinched or a cutting taken off about February 1 and are now making side growths. When we shift from 3-inch to 4-inch pots the end of March we use bone meal in the soil, rather than any animal manure; the latter making leaf growth. Use a heavy loam, a liberal amount of bone meal, pot firmly and give all the light possible and these geraniums must flower.

Cinerarias are not desirable after the end of May. They are useless out of doors for any purpose. By sowing seeds in November and keeping very cool and light you could have them in bloom in June or perhaps July, but "what's the use?" For Christmas flowering sow in April or May and summer over in cold frames. For March and April flowering sow in September.

A SCOTCH MARINE BOILER.

Would it be feasible to take an internally fired tubular boiler of the Scotch marine pattern, turn it upside down and set it in brickwork as shown in the REVIEW for February 16? I have a boiler of that character forty-three inches wide and fifty inches long. The grate area is 21x42 inches and on each side are fourteen 2½-inch flues. If I turned it over I could make the grate the full size of the boiler if necessary, firing underneath instead of internally. I am using the boiler for hot water.

VAN.

It will certainly not be practicable to turn the boiler bottom side up and use it for either steam or hot water heating with setting similar to that described in the REVIEW of February 16. The present arrangement is the most economical and most nearly perfect type of construction. It brings a greater amount of heating surface in contact with highly heated gases than is the case with the regularly constructed return tube boiler. I doubt if the small flues would be of much value if the boiler were to be set as a return tube boiler with one 21-inch flue. This would be large enough to carry a great percentage of the gases from the fire-box to the stack and the twenty-eight 2½-inch flues would lose a great percentage of their efficiency, with the result that the efficiency of the boiler might in reality be diminished, while the actual heating surface had been increased by one-half the surface of the shell of the boiler.

While it is possible that the heating capacity of the boiler might be slightly increased by this change in setting, the increased heating area would be about twenty-five square feet and if the added area were to be fully efficient the added radiation which the boiler would carry would be about 200 square feet. The question is: Can you afford the expense of changing the setting for this possible increase in efficiency; can you not get the additional heating capacity in a cheaper way? If the relation of the 2½-inch tubes to the 21-inch flue is such that a double return tubular boiler could be arranged, then there could be no question as to the superiority of such setting. If the furnace can be built under one end of the shell and the heated gases made to pass under the shell of the boiler into and back through the 21-inch flue and then back through the 2½-inch flues a greater efficiency could be obtained from the boiler. L. C. C.

A COIL BOILER.

I was much interested in the query and answer in the issue of February 16 with regard to a coil boiler. I have heard many florists belittle that home-made device, but cannot see why. True, you cannot heat a large range of glass with it, but for the small florist it is a boon. I have one myself, made of 2-inch pipe, thirty pieces four and one-half feet long put together with return bends. It works fine but I have got to enlarge it to take care of some more glass. This was my own idea and it is all right except that I would like something I could let go from 9 p. m. to 8 a. m. and still have the houses warm. They all tell me to put in 4-inch pipe, but that doesn't quite suit me, for, while it might retain the heat longer, I think the smaller body of water would heat quicker and with less fire. I have found that the smaller the pipes in my coil boiler the hotter the water became.

Now, this is what I am going to try for next season. I am going to make coils of five pieces of 1¼-inch pipe. These coils I am going to set so that the five pipes will stand one above the other and I am going to arrange ten such coils side by side, one inch apart. Each coil will be independent and supply its own flow and return. At the highest point, at the farthest end of the house, all the coils will be connected with the expansion tank by a ¾-inch pipe. Then, if at any time one of these coils should burst, I would lose only the use of two runs of pipe and could fire away on the others; with any other boiler, if you get a big leak, you might as well go "away back and sit down!" All this will cost including everything will be about $50 and I don't think it will be a coal eater, as some call them, for the grate area needed will be small and the coils will get the full benefit of all the fire.

PREPARE SOIL EARLY.

As soon as the frost is out of the ground the collection and preparation of soil for summer planting should be commenced. In the selection of rose soils for use on the benches some study and knowledge of the quality required is necessary and too much thought and care cannot be bestowed on this question. Although fair roses may be produced from inferior soils, the care, skill and trouble required to do so will more than offset the work of selecting a good quality of soil for composting now and the results will in every case be in favor of the judicious selection.

The kind of soil most favored by growers is a good, friable loam containing a good percentage of clay and taken from the top spit of old pasture land. This should be put into a neat pile on ground a little higher than the surrounding surface, so that the bottom may not get sour.

When piling it, the necessary quantity of manure should be added. If the soil is of good quality, and the manure of the right kind, the proportion should be one of manure to four of soil. Manure from the cow barn in a half decomposed condition, if the compost is made early enough in the season to allow time for perfect decomposition before planting time, is about the best and safest that can be used.

Of course there are many qualities even of cow manure, the quality of the feeding material regulating the quality and richness of the manure. Where the feed is grain and hay the quality is the very best, but if the grain has first passed through the brewery the manure is rank poison to roses, so be careful to use no manure from such a source.

There is also quite a difference in the way manure has been cared for, the best quality being that which has been kept under cover and not subjected to rains, which wash all the real nutritive properties out of it, leaving nothing but refuse.

After the pile has been allowed to stand two or three weeks it should be chopped in pieces not over-fine and the sod and manure thoroughly incorporated. To get the elements properly mixed, and to prevent weeds from growing, the pile should be turned over every two weeks and this should always be done during bright weather, to prevent caking and to make it mellow.

When soil is handled in this manner it is a pleasure to plant in it and the young stock gets something congenial to start with and the careful observer will note how quickly it responds by going to work at once and keeping it up if the soil is kept in good condition by periodical cultivation, judicious watering and care in ventilating. GRAFTED ROSES.

The REVIEW has reprinted the articles on "The History and Culture of Grafted Roses for Forcing," by Alex. Montgomery, Jr., in neat pamphlet form, fully illustrated. This series of connected papers one well-known rose grower characterizes as "the most important contribution to the modern literature of the rose." Many readers told us, when they

A SHIPPER'S VERSION.

A great deal has been heard from the man who receives a box of cut flowers which, for one reason or another, do not come up to his anticipations. The following is one shipper's view of the other side of the story:

"It may be well at this time to say a few words about the relation between the wholesaler and retailer, or shipper and buyer. The retailer from the city of B wires in his order, but does not say whether first or second train will do. He simply takes it for granted that the wholesaler has his ice box full of all kinds of stock, waiting for orders to come in. He forgets that stock is scarce and that home buyers are hustling around and picking up anything that is scarce and in order to get it pay the top-notch price, in many cases paying 2 to 4 cents apiece more than the wholesaler dare charge on a shipping order. At that, nine times out of ten the party they are shipped to feels that he was charged too high and proceeds to write to the shipper and complain about the price. It makes it effective to say the roses were poor and not worth half the price charged. Let us look at the other side. The shipper had the opportunity to sell these roses at home, as I said before, for, say, 2 cents each more, but not to disappoint the customer who depends on getting his order filled, he does not sell them to the home customer. He goes to the extra trouble to pack and box them and thinks he has made friends by filling the order as best he can, as he feels that when a customer wires for stock he must have an order for it and to not get it would be a great disappointment. Therefore the wholesaler makes every effort to fill the order, and I know numerous incidents where the wholesaler bought the stock and billed it out at a loss in order not to have his customer think that he was 'robbed.' This often happens when flowers are scarce and the price suddenly takes a jump. Can we charge this raise to our shipping customers? No, they won't stand for it, but our home customers must pay the price notwithstanding.

"I find that those who do the most 'kicking' on price are those who order only occasionally, when stock is scarce and they have none themselves and their home supply is short. I think on a whole the outside trade gets the best of the deal all the time. When stock is scarce the wholesaler 'breaks his neck' to get the stock to fill the orders. Does he do this for his home trade? Oh, no! If he has not the stock he tells them so and that ends it. The would-be buyer looks further.

"Then, again, there are customers who make a point of kicking. To get a rebate they write you that the stock came in such a condition that they could not use it. How does it happen? I, from Chicago, send 100 carnations to Texas, and the same to Minnesota; same carnations, equally fresh, packed and shipped at the same time. Note the difference in the distance of shipments. The Texas party writes back that he received the stock in fine condition. The Minnesota man says it was the worst stock he ever received; he had to throw them out. What do you think of that? Is it a square deal? I don't think so. Why doesn't that party send them back on the next train? Any wholesaler would willingly pay the return charges, because he would feel satisfied that he was not 'worked.'

"There is also another kind of 'work-er.' His game is to refuse a C. O. D., stating that the goods were late in arriving, an hour or two, as the case may be. The agent is instructed either to release or sell to best advantage. The wholesaler in many cases gets a bill from the express company for charges. I have adopted a new plan. I wire the agent to return the box on the next train, it makes no difference from what distance. In no case yet did I not come out 'ahead of the game,' both in satisfaction and money. If this were done by all wholesalers, this practice would stop, to the benefit of all concerned.

"It ought also to be understood that the wholesaler's responsibility ends after the goods are delivered to the express company. We cannot agree to deliver them in another city at any certain time. We deliver to the express company in time for a certain train, which should, barring accident, reach the destination in time. But if trains are snow-bound or the engine breaks down, or any other of the many unavoidable accidents occur, should the wholesaler be held responsible? I say, no, and we are not, either morally or legally.

"But if it can be shown that, on account of carelessness of the express company the goods were delayed, we can by request from our customer, if a loss to him resulted, help him make a complaint and file a claim for such loss to be adjusted by them. In any case, cost or not, the goods ought to be accepted by the consignee, making note on the company's book of the delay and time of delivery as a protest. The wholesaler would then proceed to assist to get the company to stand the loss. I think that every wholesaler would make every effort to push the claim for his customer.

"The writer received a telegram for a large shipment of flowers during the heavy snow storm. All trains were late, in and out. The express company would only accept the shipment subject to delay. This party wanted to know the exact time the stock would reach him. You might guess my answer. Under the most favorable circumstances this could not be promised with safety. The order was not filled.

"Another practice the wholesaler has to submit to, which should be stopped is in a case like this: A wholesaler gets an order. He can't fill it because stock is not to be had or because the order came in too late for the train mentioned. He wires his customer that the order cannot be filled. The customer reads the telegram, then refuses to pay the charges, which the wholesaler has to pay. Such people ought never to receive another reply, but be made to await the disappointment when they expect the shipment and don't get it. Don't even waste a postage stamp on these; they are not deserving."

MASSACHUSETTS GARDENERS.

Harvard Botanic Gardens, Cambridge.

The numerous visitors to the Harvard Botanic Gardens always find something at the duldest of seasons to please and interest them. The head gardener, or professor, as he has not inaptly been termed, Robert Cameron, is a skillful practitioner, one who makes use of every inch of space at his disposal. While a good part of the space in the glass structures is devoted to collections of cacti, economic and other plants of particular interest to the Harvard college students, good batches of all the more useful and showy flowering and foliage plants are to be seen.

Among hard-wooded plants, Acacia Baileyana, certificated in Boston in January, 1904, was noteworthy. It is a rapid grower and extremely graceful, splendid for cutting. Plants three years old were over ten feet high. Acacia Murryana and A. heterophylla were also in fine bloom. The seldom seen Franciscea eximia, similar in color to Lasian-dra macrantha, was clothed with its pretty dark blue flowers. Among the ericas, Mediterranea and melanthera were on the wane, but the pretty E. arcularis was at its best.

A house filled with finely grown Primula obconica, P. Sinensis and P. stellata was very attractive. P. Sinensis The Duchess is especially good for florists' use. The color is pure white, with a zone of rosy carmine surrounding a clear yellow one. It is one of Sutton's introductions. A division of cyclamens was a blaze of bloom. Gloire de Lorraine begonia, which is grown in quantity, was nearly over. Roses, of which Maids and Woottons are grown, all looked first-class. The stove house contains a fine collection of beautiful specimens of all the best ornamental foliaged plants. A splendid collection of well pitched nepenthes in numerous varieties was suspended from the roof. Orchids are grown in considerable numbers. Phaius grandifolius was flowering freely, also Dendrobium nobile in variety, D. nobile nobilius being the best. Cattleya Trianae also made a fine showing of blooms. All who visit these well kept gardens will find Mr. Cameron courteous in the extreme and a veritable encyclopedia of horticultural knowledge. W. N. CRAIG.

CAPACITY OF FLOWS.

Will a 3-inch flow down the center of a greenhouse supply six 3-inch returns? Will a 2-inch flow supply five 2-inch returns? M. B.

Whether or not the 3-inch flow will supply six 3-inch returns or the 2-inch flow supply five 2-inch returns depends entirely upon the length of the returns. If there is not more than 1,200 feet of radiation in the combined area of the six 3-inch returns and not more than 400 feet of radiation in the 2-inch pipes the flows will be ample. To state it in another way, the 3-inch flow will supply 1,200 feet of 3-inch pipe while a 2-inch will supply 640 feet of 2-inch returns. L. C. C.

DIGITALIS.

The plant shown in the accompanying illustration carried nine spikes, several of them over six feet in height. It was one of a number of small plants carried over a year on account of not flowering and grown in a bed of Ghent azaleas to supply flowers after the azaleas were over.

Henry Wild, of the A. W. Blake estate, Brookline, Mass., who grew the specimen under note and who handles foxgloves very successfully, states that he sows his seed in June. The young plants are placed in their winter quarters on a side hill in August. They winter splendidly with a covering of pine boughs, and are transplanted to their flowering quarters about April 20. He considers that it pays well to carry over plants which fail to bloom the first season and certainly such grand specimens are an ornament to anyone's grounds.

For planting in masses, in shrubberies, on the borders of woodlands or in beds by themselves, no biennials surpass the foxgloves and their lasting properties are excellent. The cut spikes are splendid for house decoration, especially the white varieties. Seed sown in shallow drills under shaded sashes in June or July and transplanted to the open during showery weather will give splendid spikes the succeeding summer. Digitalis gloxiniaeflora and Ivery's spotted are superior varieties. W. N. CRAIG.

VINCA ROSEA.

Would you please tell me how to grow vincas? I have no luck with them and would like to know what causes the trouble. The plants come up nicely from seeds, and I can keep them growing well until about December. Then they start to dry up. I kept them in the carnation house and planted them in carnation soil from last year. At about what time would you advise me to sow the seed and what soil and temperature would be best? Can I put them under the benches in winter? I mean the bedding vincas. R.

We think your failure is that you have kept the seedlings too cool and perhaps too wet in the dark winter months. For bedding purposes sow the seed the middle of January. Let the soil be light sandy loam with some leaf-mold or very rotten manure added. They don't like a heavy soil at any time.

When the seedlings have made the second leaf, transplant into flats, and when they crowd in that, pot into 2-inch and later into 3-inch, which is large enough to make good bedding plants. As the vinca is a tender plant, they should not be planted in the flower beds before all danger of the slightest frost is over, with us about the last of May. A temperature of 50 degrees at night is the lowest they should be given under glass, and always the fullest light. You can yet make a sowing and have fairly good plants. They will only be a little late. W. S.

WHITE FLY AGAIN.

I send a leaf covered with a louse which finally becomes a white fly. Please tell me what will destroy it. I have used tobacco in smoke, dust and extract, but it does not hurt them much. R. B. T.

The leaf sent was covered with the eggs of the little fly of which there has been so much complaint for the past few years and which I saw only a few days ago infesting some large tomato plants. The only thing that will kill the mature fly is hydrocyanic acid gas; the formula for which has been published in the pages of the REVIEW at least every month for the past two years. One dose may not clean your house. Repeat three times at intervals of two weeks, and they will be gone. W. S.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Prices have made a still further recession since last report. Dark and colder weather has served in a measure to check the increase in receipts, but there are ample supplies in all departments and values have weakened all along the line. It is an instance where "the flowers that bloom in the spring, tra la," have everything to do with the case. There are very large receipts of tulips, daffodils, jonquils and valley. The quality is exceptionally good, but the receipts are in excess of the demand and prices are not only low but exercise their effect upon staple stock. New York violets have been coming in more heavily than ever before and prices have varied widely. Seventy-five cents per hundred has been the top and Hudson river stock is sold as low as $1 per thousand.

There are not so many Beauties and the quality is nothing extra, so that prices have not receded. Brides and Maids are coming down in sympathy with the rest of the market and because of large receipts. Carnations are received in very great quantities, but of superior quality. It is still noticeable that after the early buying the stock left on hand is very largely Mrs. Lawson and clean-up sales are made at very low prices. Such sorts as Sport command small figures in the beginning.

Receipts of callas have increased materially and there is a bad glut in this department. Harrisii are not so numerous. Wild smilax is again coming into the market. There is a good demand for greenhouse smilax, but all orders can be filled. There are ample supplies of asparagus and Sprengeri is selling so cheaply that plantings of it will be somewhat reduced for next season.

Local trade was fair the last week of the "social season" and shipping trade good but New Orleans did not take so much stock for Mardi Gras as in recent years. Lent began yesterday but it has had little effect the past few years and is not feared as it once was.

Too Many Carnations.

With the street fakirs already handling a large part of the receipts of carnations, it is to some discouraging news that production is again to be largely increased next season. Not only will the season's building add considerably to the glass devoted to the carnation, but the Weber and Ristow places heretofore in roses will be turned over to carnations. Payne, at Hinsdale, who never grew carnations will plant 10,000 to 15,000 square feet of glass with them, and there are others. It looks to the pessimist as though the market might be overdone, but doubtless all will find an outlet then as now.

Long Distance Violets.

Up to last season practically all the Rhinebeck and Poughkeepsie violets were sold and used in New York. Last winter several millions were shipped to Chicago, but it has remained for this season to see the distribution carried still farther. Chicago has shipped other flowers to New Orleans, Texas, the west and northwest for years but violets have not figured in the shipping business. Now, however, the wholesalers, always awake to the possibilities, have standing orders for regular shipments of Hudson river violets to customers as far away as the market reaches. Poughkeepsie violets are 2,000 miles from home in New Orleans.

At Hinsdale.

One of the season's improvements at Bassett & Washburn's is the consolidation of several separate heating plants into one central station, containing ten 150 horse-power boilers. The new stack will have a flue seven feet six inches in diameter and will be 150 feet high. Standing on top of a hill it will be quite a landmark. Across the drive will be a shed capable of storing 4,000 tons of coal. Six new houses, each 576 feet long, are now being built. The iron gutters are up.

Various Notes.

John Peahrson, the manager of the Clark street store of the George Wittbold Co., has the sympathy of all in the trade who know of his recent bereavements. It is only two months since the baby died and on Friday the mother passed away. Mrs. Peahrson came to America to join him only a couple of years ago. He met her in New York and they were married there.

E. C. Amling is handling some very good sweet peas. He says bulbous stock and in fact all receipts are of unusually good quality just now. He has a big cut of smilax ready.

C. W. McKellar has been getting in very nice gardenias from the east.

The George Wittbold Co. had one great object in view when they built the new range at Edgebrook a few years ago, and that was to get space to grow on stock to the larger sizes. It was slow work, even with increased glass, for their trade has increased steadily, but they have at length succeeded in getting up a satisfactory stock in decorative sizes, something which has not heretofore existed in the west. They are particularly strong on large kentias.

The E. F. Winterson Co. reports last Saturday's receipts of violets to have totaled 85,000. They have been getting regular shipments of orange blossoms.

A discussion of corn-cob pipes has been arranged for tonight's club meeting.

Peter Reinberg, P. J. Hauswirth and George Asmus were in the party which went to Springfield last week.

Mrs. Leonard Kill, who has been ill for many weeks, is now convalescing slowly.

J. A. Budlong, who had a big crop of fine mums last year, will not plant any this spring, the intention being to give the additional space to Beauties, with which they have done especially well this season.

The house of E. H. Hunt says in its weekly review of the market "Outside trade continues fair. City trade is somewhat improved but not so much but that we could stand more. The street men are busy at last; they have got their inning, and are making the best of it."

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., says that all of a sudden the buyers have taken a decided preference for single violets.

FOR TWO NEW HOUSES.

I am ready to build two houses for general purposes, roses, carnations, etc. Would you advise to commence building at once or wait until frost is out of ground, about April 1? Posts are to be used. Each house is 20x100, one glass gable in each and two feet of glass on the sides. I want to heat by steam. How many runs of pipe, and what size will be needed to heat each house to 60 degrees in the coldest Wisconsin weather? Side walls, including glass, are four feet ten inches high, ridge ten feet. What size of boiler should I purchase? Any other hints you could give would be appreciated. E. H. O.

I do not think it would be economical to begin the construction of your houses until the frost is out of the ground. Workmen cannot accomplish as much outdoors at this season as later and there is more liability to loss from bad weather. Glass cannot be handled to advantage during cold weather. The joints will not be as good as in warm weather because of the difficulty of working putty and glass when cold.

I believe it would be a good plan to pipe both houses alike. Place a 2-inch flow under the ridge and return it through eleven 1¼-inch returns to boiler. Valves should be placed on about four returns in each house, so that they may be thrown out of commission during mild weather. Unless it is your intention to increase the area of the plant in the near future a boiler with 150 feet of heating surface will be sufficient for your work. A boiler thirty inches by eight feet, rated as ten horse-power, if of the type of the one illustrated in the FLORISTS' REVIEW, February 16, page 705, will be ample. If more houses are to be added soon it will be economy to install a larger boiler. L. C. C.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The pre-lenten season has closed with a heavy rush of business. There were many entertainments in town, requiring quantities of choice flowers, besides an exceeding brisk out-of-town demand. Immense quantities of flowers went to Washington for the inauguration and to other cities for events of social, not national importance. Beauties continue scarce, the medium grades being almost unobtainable. Tea roses have become more plentiful. Brides being hard to sell. Carnations are plentiful, of fine quality and lower in price. Violets are splendid and very popular. A Greek bought $60 worth (not $600 worth) at prices above those being paid by the stores, offering the flowers on the streets in Washington. Bulbous flowers have been selling fairly well at low prices, fancy varieties being most in demand. Dendrobium nobile has made its appearance. Sweet peas are improving in quality, the Reid brand of pink being the finest in size, color and stem that I have ever seen. White lilac is not so plentiful. Lily of the valley is in good supply and in demand.

The Rose Meeting.

President Wescott called a fairly good sized Florists' Club meeting to order on Tuesday evening, March 7. The only novelty on exhibition was a cross from American Beauty, color a rose pink in center, shaded to pale pink on the outer petals, somewhat resembling Queen of Edgely in appearance. It is free blooming and of robust habit. The growers, Myers & Samtman, have cut twenty-five blooms so far from the only plant in existence.

P. J. Lynch, of the Dingee & Conard Co., West Grove, Pa., read a very clever paper on "The Newer Varieties of Roses," which was heartily applauded. In the discussion that followed Mr. Lynch said he was inclined to believe Souvenir de Pierre Notting would prove hardy in this latitude.

The Second Assembly.

The last Friday evening, or to be more accurate, the last Saturday morning of the pre-lenten season, always marks the last Assembly ball. It was a sight worth going miles to see. A broad marble stairway leads from the Chancellor street entrance of the Bellevue to the spacious corridors and dressing room on the floor above. Then, again, by another half circular curve, we reach the ballroom above and, again, the gallery that encircles the dancing floor. The elevator is quicker, but those brilliantly lit stairways, with their perfect curves and wide, easy steps, are a pleasure to ascend. The view from the gallery is impressive. Rows of seats behind a tier of boxes look down on a perfectly proportioned ballroom of good size, the floor polished till it shone, the walls and pillars decorated with artistic simplicity, the stage a mass of color relieved by a background of green, the whole effect charming.

It is seldom that the floral artist has such an opportunity. Everything fresh, new and in perfect taste, nothing to hide. The decorators, J. J. Habermehl's Sons, grasped the idea, turning it to the fullest advantage. A perfect specimen palm, a kentia, at the head of the stairway, a few more here and there, a semi-circular bower nearby, with a few easy chairs, and the stage effect enhancing the beauty of the scene. The stage arrangement was carefully planned and executed. A bank of color ran across the entire front, half white, the other yellow. The former consisted of La Reine tulips in flats, azaleas and lilacs; the latter of yellow tulips and daffodils, in flats, and genistas. Behind this mass of color came the orchestra seated in full view and behind them a high bank of palms. The plants used were all of good quality, two fine specimens of Bougainvillea spectabilis being especially handsome. The ladies' dressing rooms were decorated with vases of lilies of the valley and sweet peas.

Two large dining rooms on the first floor were filled with small tables each seating six persons. A single vase, some high, some low, each filled with one variety of flower, adorned the center of each table. Here a tall vase of fancy Bridesmaids, there a shallow vase of Dendrobium nobile, here a high cut glass vase filled with sprays of bougainvillea, near it a bunch of white lilac in a vase of moderate height. Many varieties of carnations were used and many varieties of spring flowers, each by itself, all of high grade. There were 5,000 or more blooms on the tables. The whole decoration reflects great credit on the Messrs. Habermehl and their assistants.

Various Notes.

Berger Bros. are handling the stock of the Philadelphia Carnation Co.

W. & Harry F. Evans, of Frankford, have bought and are running the greenhouses of Charles W. Cox, at Second and Bristol streets. The latter has taken a position with J. J. Habermehl's Sons.

Mrs. S. I. Smith, of Secane, sent 20,000 (not 200,000) of her fine violets in one day to the Flower Market.

A. B. Ellsworth and Mrs. Ellsworth, of Allentown, and Daniel Gorman, of Williamsport, were in the city this week.

Paul Berkowitz, of Bayersdorfer & Co., returned on Monday from a good business trip.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons decorated the Academy of Music for the Philopatrian ball on Monday. It was a very handsome affair.

Charles Krueger is doing an active business at the Reading Terminal.

B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., has just returned from a successful business trip of five weeks in the middle west. He was in St. Louis during the coldest weather that city has ever experienced, a severity which had its compensating advantages, as he found all its florists in and was cordially welcomed. The weather in St. Paul and Minneapolis was in direct contrast, extremely mild.

February was the largest month in the history of the Cut Flower Co.

Henry C. Geiger states that the Floral Exchange will plant one large house, now containing 4,000 Beauties, with tea roses next season.

Wm. J. Baker and Edward Reid are, and have been, receiving fine pansies.

John McIntyre has been doing some heavy buying lately. He is said to have taken 6,000 Joosts in one day.

"Our Horticultural Indebtedness to Japan" will be concluded at Association Hall, Germantown, next Monday evening. "Japanese Aquatics," by Wm. Tricker, "Japanese Plants for House and Conservatory," by Frank Gould, and "Japanese Hardy Perennials," by Ernest Heming, are the papers to be read.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The last meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society being the quarterly social meeting, little business was transacted. The dates for the chrysanthemum show were decided upon, being October 31 and November 1 and 2.

The prize for the evening for the best vase of assorted roses was awarded to John Featherstone, Greystone, Yonkers. L. A. Martin, of Irvington, gave him a hard run. Mr. Featherstone also exhibited some fine plants of cyclamen and Cineraria Feltham Beauty. This is the result of a cross between C. cruentus and C. stellata, being a considerable improvement over the latter variety. In color the varieties of this cross run mostly to pink.

The secretary, E. W. Neubrand, was presented with a gold locket, suitably inscribed, by his fellow members as a token of respect and appreciation of his valuable services in the interests of the society. Light refreshments were served, and several of the members entertained the company with songs, recitations, etc.

The Market.

The market has gone to pieces the past week and with the exception of roses, which still are scarce and sell at previous quotations, there has been a decline in prices. Carnations have now to be extra fine to bring $3. A larger quantity clears out at $2, with poorer stock lower. A perfect avalanche of violets is now descending on the market daily and prices on these have dropped still further, from 25 cents to 35 cents per hundred being prevailing prices on good stock, although as low as $1.50 to $2 per thousand has been taken to clean out.

There has been something of a glut in bulbous stock, which hitherto this season has sold extremely well. Yellow Trumpet daffodils rarely bring over $2, some going lower. The double Von Sion sells at rather better prices than the much prettier single varieties. Of Poeticus ornatus there is just about sufficient to go around. Tulips are now over-abundant. Lilium Harrisii and longiflorum remain about the same, but callas are lower. The advent of Lent and consequent cessation of social activities will now affect the market, although as a rule Lenten trade is very good in Boston.

A. Herrington, of Madison, N. J., lectured on March 4 on "Some Aspects of Hardy Flower Culture," before a large audience. Mr. Herrington brought along a collection of 100 colored plates of choice perennials to illustrate his remarks. Quite a number in the audience joined in the discussion which followed.

In the small exhibition hall Peter Murray staged a collection of dendrobiums comprising forty plants in twenty-five varieties. They were all well flowered and made a most excellent group. A silver gilt medal was awarded for the group, certificates of merit to D. Mur-rhinianum, D. Venus and D. Ainsworthi roseum and honorable mention to D. Euryalus and D. Dominii.

W. N. Craig showed several baskets of Phalaenopsis Schilleriana, also the variety Schilleriana Curnowiana and Stuartiana. These received a certificate for superior culture. The same exhibitor had the true Cattleya Trianae alba, Miltonia Bleuana virginalis with five spikes, which received a certificate of merit, and the rare and beautiful Odontoglossum Wilckeanum albeus with two spikes.

The following notice has been sent to a large number of prospective exhibitors and the attention of all intending exhibitors is directed to the same: "On account of the great demand for space at the spring exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and the annual exhibition of the American Rose Society scheduled for March 23 to 26, 1905, intending exhibitors are advised to file their entries at least one week prior to the opening of the exhibition. Preference will be given to such entries if the conditions require it."

New prizes still continue to come in for the rose exhibition. The Pierson-Sefton Co. offers a cup valued at $50 for the best fifty blooms of teas or hybrid teas, not over three varieties. Welch Bros. will give a prize of $25 for the best vase of roses in the show, in addition to any other prizes it may have won.

The committee on exhibitions has just purchased a large number of additional clear glass vases for staging roses and carnations. Work on the decoration of the main exhibition hall will start this week.

The executive committee of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club met on March 6 to perfect arrangements for the reception of visiting members of the Rose Society.

Entries from Pennsylvania and New York are already received. A first-class show is assured. We earnestly hope our western rose growers will come on with exhibits and help to make this a truly national meeting, more especially as the society will probably vote to meet in Chicago in 1906.

Various Notes.

The garden committee of the Horticultural Society visited the greenhouses of Geo. F. Fabyan, in Brookline, on March 7, to inspect his batches of beautifully grown cyclamens, cinerarias, calceolarias and other plants, many of which will be seen at the coming exhibition. James Stuart, the gardener in charge, had everything in fine shape.

The weather continues very cold in this section. With the exception of the winter of 1903-4 the present one is the coldest for over thirty-five years. The mean temperature for December, January and February averaged four-tenths of a degree higher than a year ago. While we have had fewer abnormally low temperatures, the cold has been steadier than 1903-4. A good many florists say their coal consumption will be heavier this winter than last.

Anthony Hannah, of Holbrook, is carrying his arm in a sling as a result of a recent sleigh accident.

Blooms of Cardinal carnation exhibited in Boston at the club meeting on February 21 were still in good condition on March 3, which speaks well for the keeping qualities of this variety. Indications point to a remarkably fine show of carnations at the coming exhibition, including many of the novelties.

Some nicely flowered schizanthus were noticed in some of the stores the past week. Retailers are just beginning to appreciate the value of this plant for decorative purposes.

Carbone, on Boylston street, keeps one of the most attractive stores in Boston. Orchids are made quite a feature here and an increasing call is noted for them. Other flowers not often seen in the markets are handled here.

W. E. Glidden was married to Miss Corey, of Newtonville, on March 8. Mr. Glidden has just recovered from an attack of typhoid fever.

Galvin has been showing a quantity of nice Odontoglossum Rossii and Dendrobium nobile the past week.

We are glad to report that John Walsh has recovered from his recent sickness and is back once more at his own stand.

The growers are now busy figuring on Easter stock. There is likely to be plenty of everything but violets. The extremely late date will make the latter scarce, but one or two large growers expect to have a fair supply.

Kenneth Finlayson spoke on "Hints on Greenhouse Management" before the North Shore Horticultural Society on March 3.

I SHOULD like to have my subscription begin with the issue in which Brian Boru gave his notes on commercial varieties of chrysanthemums; I am very much pleased with what he has to say on the subject.—J. A. SHEAFF, Fairbury, Ill.

NEW YORK.The Market.

The average temperature is about 10 degrees warmer than a year ago at this date. Monday was almost springlike and prices dropping. Violets especially sank to the lowest level of the year. It is surely ebb tide with the purple flower and there can be no possible return this season. One house disposed of 300,000 last week at prices ranging from 50 cents down. One day 70,000 went over to the city of churches at 15 cents per hundred. Top on Monday was 40 cents. Over 1,500 Meteor roses were sold in one wholesale house on Twenty-eighth street for $5. All roses have receded in value. Top for Maids and Brides was 10 cents. Beauties fell to 50 cents and carnations, thousands of them, sold for $1 per hundred, lots of the 2-cent and 3-cent kinds among them. The warm weather will help from now on and there should be nothing left over hereafter, though cold weather prices can no longer be expected. The lily stock is immense and 50 cents a dozen is the prevailing value. But for Easter as high as 12 cents is asked and many orders have been booked at that figure. The indications at present are that there will not be an oversupply.

Various Notes.

Ford Bros. will have a model store on Twenty-eighth street when completed. An immense ice-box is being constructed across the entire space at the rear and abundance of room will be available in store and cellar.

Fenrich will move "the reliable house" to the big store, first occupied by the New Jersey Cut Flower Co. and nearest Broadway of any of the wholesalers. These engagements will about absorb all the vacant stores on Twenty-eighth street.

A. J. Fellouris is making his annual trip south, in the galax country.

Wild smilax is running low and the demand exceeds the available supply. Kreshover receives shipments daily, however, and thinks early contracts will all be fulfilled. Prices have been lifted to $8 a box and may go higher before Easter.

Jos. J. Levy attended the inauguration and it is hinted his next trip to Washington will not be alone. A good many horticulturists begin their honeymoon in the capital city.

Gunther's improved condition. He is still in the hospital, but the crisis of the fever is past and with no setback he will soon be on the way to health again.

The annual thieving campaign on Long Island has begun. Every year robbers clean up a few greenhouses before Easter. Lustgarten and Schrader are the early victims. There will be others and good, healthy dogs and well loaded shotguns are in order.

In addition to Wm. Elliott & Sons and Cleary's Horticultural Hall, it is said another auction house on Mercer street will make a bid for public patronage before the end of the month, backed by some well-known Long Island growers and with a familiar voice at the "fo'-castle."

The rose meeting of the New York Florists' Club next Monday evening promises a fine entertainment and exhibition and some valuable expert testimony on the queen of flowers. Many rose growers have promised exhibits. Shipments may be sent to Secretary Young, on West Twenty-eighth street, with the assurance they will be well staged and cared for. The club's summer outing has been definitely fixed for Wednesday, June 28, at Glenwood, Long Island.

J. W. Reimels, Jr., is recovering from the effects of his severe fall and hopes to be on deck at his stand next to that of Moore, Hentz & Nash in the Coogan building very soon. Meantime this firm has been handling the fine carnation stock of Mr. Reimels.

C. W. Ward has returned from his extended western trip, which continued on from the carnation convention, and is now visiting his business interests in the south.

The shamrock, as usual, will be much in evidence two weeks from Friday and all the stores will make a window display of the modest little plant, while the growers around us are anticipating the demand with larger stocks than usual. The "17th of Ireland" is one of our banner days in New York.

The firm of Slinn & Hughes has dissolved and Mr. Hughes will become one of the bone and sinew of the country on his farm at Hempstead, L. I. It is rumored Mr. Slinn's next partner will come from above, one of the members of the Cut Flower Exchange on the third floor having aspirations in the wholesale line.

The sales of plants at the market will commence in a week or ten days at the old stand. The Clinton market and the tent will again be in evidence.

The Horticultural Society of New York and the Farmers' Club of the American Institute held a joint session on Wednesday evening of this week, when sporting in plants was discussed and papers read by L. C. Corbett, of Washington, and Patrick O'Mara, of New York.

Next Tuesday, March 14, Wm. Elliott & Sons will open their auction season with a big sale of roses, rhododendrons, conifers and other nursery stock from "the other side."

STANDARD SIZES OF PLANTS.

I see in a recent issue that a discussion is invited as to standard sizes of plants. I think it very difficult to set a rule as to certain measurements for plants as no scale would be acceptable in all parts of the country. A plant should be well established in a standard size of pot, ready for a shift; it should be clean and healthy and well grown according to variety. E. R. TAUCH.

ally can imagine the intensity of the contest when the last ball rolled, by Otte, left the score a tie. A fine dinner closed the evening's enjoyment. The return match was fixed for Monday evening, March 20, on the New York alleys. The prize for the high score, a silver loving cup, filled to the brim by Birnie with some Scottish beverage, went to the 300-pounder, Rickert. For the low score, Holt, the rubber man, put up a pair of gum boots and won them himself,

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

There has been quite a slump in the cut flower trade the past week, owing to the scarcity of decorations, and prices have fallen off considerably. Bulbous stock, sweet peas, mignonette and violets are a glut on the market. Good roses have not been over plentiful, but quantities of short Beauties and Maids are to be had at your own price. Quantities of fancy carnations are arriving which are sold at low prices.

Death of C. T. Siebert.

C. T. Siebert, one of the oldest and best known florists of this section, died Tuesday, March 7, at 4 a. m. Mr. Siebert had been in poor health for several years, but still continued his business, greenhouses on Stanton avenue and stand in the Liberty Market, and was just completing a handsome building with conservatory attached in the fashionable part of the east end which would have been opened this week. He was admired and loved by all for his kind and lovable disposition, and one never met him without feeling the better for his cheery laugh. The craft would be honored if it had more such men.

Various Notes.

Geddis & Blind Bros. had a handsome window Saturday, arranged in green and yellow, which attracted a great deal of attention.

Wm. Cromack, of Irwin, Pa., is installing a new tubular boiler at his plant.

Blind Brothers are waiting for the weather to open to start on the erection of another greenhouse 20x200.

Chas. Peterson, of East Liverpool, Ohio, lost his store in the big fire last week. He has not yet found a new location, and is doing his work at the greenhouse.

J. J. Zimmerman has sold his business on Mt. Washington to G. J. Learzaf and started for Ocean Park, Cal., last Friday night.

B. L. Elliott and wife will start for Los Angeles, Cal., next Thursday. He may locate there if something good presents itself.

Fred Burki met with an accident last week, breaking several ribs. This, with a slight attack of grip, has confined him to his home.

Andy and John Hellstern, of Wheeling, W. Va., have the sympathy of the trade in the loss of their father, who died March 6, aged 84 years.

A portion of the interior of the Allegheny market was burned Sunday morning. G. & J. W. Ludwig met with a slight loss through the burning of their work stand. Hoo-Hoo.

HERE is a dollar for another year's subscription to the best trade paper to date.—C. F. ALTMANN & SONS, Manitowoc, Wis.

GUERNSEY LILIES.

Some four years ago I brought home with me from the Island of Jersey two pink nerines, the true Jersey lily. They came in pots, the bulbs undisturbed. Since then they have grown and multiplied. Every autumn they have had long, thick stems with six immense and most lovely lilies on each stem. Last month two of the longer bulbs showed second stems of buds, and several of the smaller bulbs had stems of buds, but none of them matured. Can you tell me what is the reason and what I ought to do? They all have greenhouse culture.

I have some Japanese peonies for forcing, but am in doubt as to how they should be treated, whether after potting they should be kept in a warm, dark place and sprayed every day, as are Japanese cherries, etc., or if they should be given light as we treat begonia bulbs. Of course, the peonies are just a root with two little shoots showing and not bushes like the cherries and wisteria.

G. L.

These bulbs called Guernsey or Jersey lilies are no lily at all. Nerine Sarniensis is the species that grows to perfection in the Channel Islands. They make their growth in winter and flower in the fall, are beautiful and interesting for the amateur, but will not likely ever become popular with the florist. I cannot account for your plants making flower spikes in January. Here, briefly, is what the late John Robertson, an authority, said of them in the FLORISTS' REVIEW:

"The secret of success with nerines is to secure the fullest possible development of the bulbs. This refers to their winter treatment. They enjoy an abundance of water at the roots and overhead, with occasional applications of liquid manure. This treatment should be continued until the leaves turn yellow, which is a sign that the plants are finishing their growth. Then diminish the water supply gradually. Lay the pots on their sides, where they will not get wet, and in full sunlight, so that the bulbs may ripen thoroughly. Nerines do not like to have their roots disturbed and do well with small root room. Three bulbs in a 5-inch pot in fibrous loam and a little sand added will do well for five or six years, as the offsets can be removed and separately potted, while the old bulbs go on increasing in size. As the flower scape appears in the fall, carefully remove an inch of the surface soil and renew with a top dressing and then a thorough watering."

It is not likely you will get flowers from the peonies this spring. They want no dark place, merely put them in full light on a bench in a cool house. Forty-five to 50 degrees at night is sufficient.

THE Supreme Court of Nebraska has affirmed a decision to the effect that a contract for a crop yet unplanted is not valid. If this is good law a large proportion of the contracts made in the seed trade, and a good many other lines, would not hold.

THE tomatoes packed in Canada last year amounted to 297,750 cases, each of which contained two dozen tins, compared with 397,500 cases in the preceding year. The United States packed 8,671,053 cases last year as compared with 10,282,309 in 1903.

WHILE in 1903 the total exports of seeds of all classes from the United States were valued at $9,455,283, in 1904 they were valued at only $2,583,325. At the same time our total imports of seeds increased from $2,831,279 in 1903, to $3,587,469 in 1904.

THE old case of J. M. Thorburn & Co. vs. the United States, in the United States Circuit Court has been dismissed. It was an application for a review of a decision of the board of appraisers, appealed December 10, 1890, and related to an importation of bulbs under the tariff act of 1883.

WM. K. HARRIS bought shamrock seeds at Belfast, Ireland, and the collector of customs at Philadelphia assessed duty at thirty percent ad valorem. Mr. Harris appealed, contending that the seed was free as grass seed, in particular, clover seed, appealed to the board of appraisers, who adopted his view.

THAT so few seedsmen should have taken advantage of the law permitting the mailing of catalogues without stamps affixed must have convinced the Powers-that-be at Washington of one of two things: Either that the regulations of the Department are too involved, or, more likely, that the privilege is not generally considered so valuable as those who asked it professed.

This is the case in which the Secretary of Agriculture asked the Attorney General to intervene on behalf of the United States on the ground that the granting of the injunction would be "a great public calamity" and would paralyze the distribution of seeds for the remainder of the current year. One of the defenses in the case was that an official of the Department of Agriculture, one John Tracy, had himself made the invention, involved in the patent granted to Mr. Brown. Tracy also obtained an affidavit from a carpenter employed to work in the building that he was also the inventor of the apparatus.

SEED PACKING.

Referring to a note on packing seeds which appeared on page 834 of the REVIEW for March 2, James Carter & Co., the London seedsmen, offer the following on packing seeds for shipment to foreign countries:

We were much surprised to read the following remark contained in the note contributed by Mr. Watson, where he says: "For seeds generally I know of nothing better than paper packets or calico bags, and the more moisture there is in the seeds when thus packed the better. Hermetically sealed tins or bottles should never be used." How far such a remark is applicable to seeds sent through the tropics here we will not argue, but so far as it applies to the majority of English seeds for despatch abroad we feel we can speak with authority, it having been our privilege for over half a century to conduct an important business with the Empire of India and our colonies in tropical and sub-tropical climates, and it has been over and over again proven that the ordinary vegetable and flower seeds will rarely retain their vitality if sent away from here without some special treatment which eliminates a large percentage of the moisture contained in them, when harvested naturally in our temperate climate. To overcome this difficulty we have for many years not only subjected this class of seeds to a special drying process, but enclosed each packet in tinfoil, and this again is placed in a hermetically sealed covering from which the air is exhausted. We quite agree that roots such as potatoes, artichokes, dahlias, etc., which are principally composed of water, must on no account be put under tin, but cannot understand an authority from Kew applying the same restrictions to seeds generally.

LONDON WHOLESALE SEEDSMEN.

Howcroft & Watkins.

This firm succeeded to an old established business known as Charlewood & Crenmons, in Tavistock Row, Covent Garden, on the south side of Covent Garden Market, a block of buildings which was leveled to the ground some years ago to make way for the enlargement of the market. This firm was famous for the business done with tree seeds of various kinds. The business passed into the hands of Howcroft & Watkins, who, on the destruction of the old premises, emigrated to Hart street, close by, and are now in Floral street, Covent Garden. Mr. Howcroft was for some years a traveler for Messrs. Minier, Nash & Nash, an old wholesale seed house in the Strand, but extinct for a number of years, and Mr. Watkins was a relative of his.

G. A. Bunting & Co.

This firm was established about 1899, and is, therefore, quite young. Mr. Bunting, who is at the head of the firm, was formerly with Watkins & Simpson, Tavistock street, Covent Garden.

Alfred Legerton.

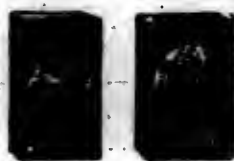

The founder of this business is, I understand, the son of a seed grower in the eastern counties. Outside of his immediate business connections, Mr. Legerton seems to be but little known in horticultural circles, but Richard Dean says, in the Horticultural Trade Journal, that he has wide relationships with the trade.

THE lettuce growers for the big markets have made little money so far this season, because of low prices, due to the competition of southern stock. And now that many lettuce houses have been planted to cucumbers, prices have not improved as had been hoped.

NITRATE OF SODA.

As I am a subscriber to your valuable paper I take the liberty to ask for a little information concerning the use of nitrate of soda as a fertilizer. Is it valuable for forcing lettuce, cabbage and cauliflower? In what manner and in what quantity should it be applied?

A. M. B.

Nitrate of soda is valuable as a fertilizer for cabbage and cauliflower, they being strong feeders, but is apt to cause too soft growth in forced lettuce and induce damping. It is best applied in water at the rate of one ounce to four gallons for general use, but if used on lettuce, about half this quantity would be enough.

Nitrate of soda is easily soluble in water, and can be mixed in the watering pot immediately before being used, but when watering with it to any extent it is better to mix in a barrel in the proportions above given. Care should be used in applying to get as little on the foliage as possible in case of burning, and the application should not be made if the soil is very dry. Should the soil be in this condition it is better to give a good watering and let it stand until next day before making the application. In this way the manure will not only be more beneficial, but there will be less danger of causing injury to the roots.

W. S. CROYDON.

PLANTINGS IN COLD FRAMES.

We have just made our last planting of the season in the greenhouse, of lettuce and cauliflower. From this out we will plant both these in cold frames, where they do considerably better than in the greenhouse after the weather gets warm. No matter how carefully airing is attended to the bright sunshine causes flagging. When the heat of the day is over they stiffen up again but this flagging and stiffening induce toughness in the lettuce and affect both the quality and size of cauliflower.

The plants to be set in the frames should be grown on in the greenhouse until large enough for planting. To avoid giving the plants a check it is a good plan to set the seed boxes in the frames for two or three days previous to setting them out. In this way the change will be less severe than if they were planted immediately on removal from the warm greenhouse.

In preparing the frames for planting we give a good forking up and work in a liberal quantity of well decomposed barnyard manure, then put on the sashes and keep the frames close for a few days, so that the heat of the sun will warm up the soil. To retain as much of this sun heat as possible we cover the frames at night, to prevent frost from penetrating, the weight of covering being regulated according to the coldness of the weather. This covering we continue for some time after the plants are set. Some nights during mild spells it might be omitted, but it is always safer to cover up. During March there is always a tendency to sudden changes and for all the time it takes to throw the mats on at night and off in the morning it is better to be prepared rather than be caught napping.

Cold frames require quite a little attention in regard to airing. As they contain but a small body of air the temperature is easily fluctuated. It is a good plan to get on a little air as early in the morning as the outdoor temperature will warrant, increasing the amount as the day warms up and closing down early at night to retain as much of the sunheat as possible.

NEW ASTER KATE LOCK

Has Been Grown 48 in. High.

Blooms from 5 to 6 inches in diameter with very high centers; stems from 36 to 48 inches. Shown at largest exhibitions in Canada and took everything before it. Colors—White, Daybreak, and mixed, $2.00 per 1000 seeds. Not less than 1000 seeds sold. No agents. Don't send checks. Originator, J. H. LOCK, 41 Manchester Ave. TORONTO, ONT.

The varieties of lettuce we employ for frame work are Boston Market, Big Boston and Deacon. These three come in nicely in succession. In cauliflower we find Dwarf Erfurt the best for this purpose.

DREER SEASONABLE SPECIALS

Stokesia Cyanea, the Corn Flower Aster. When making up your planting plans for summer cut flowers you should not overlook this hardy gem. It will please you and prove profitable. The plants we offer are from very strong 3-inch pots which will give excellent returns under ordinary treatment, but if you can take them now and shift them up into larger pots their season of bloom will begin much earlier. $1.00 per doz.; $5.00 per 100; $40.00 per 1000.

The Baby Rambler Rose. Strong one-year-old imported field-grown plants which have recently been potted up into 4-inch pots. $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100.

Dreer's Royal Exhibition Pansies. A fine lot of strong sturdy plants, wintered in cold frames of this famous strain. 75c per 100; $5.00 per 1000. Seed of this strain 50c per trade pkt.; $1.25 per 1/2 oz.; $8.00 per oz.

Myosotis Palustris Semperflorens. (The Everblooming Forget-me-not.) A nice lot of cold frame-grown plants, suitable for 4-inch pots, which, if brought into a cool greenhouse, will furnish readily salable plants for retailing or will quickly produce a profitable crop of flowers for cutting. 50c per doz.; $3.00 per 100.

Rhododendron Everestianum for Easter Flowering. We have a fine lot of this splendid crimped pink variety which can readily be forced for Easter. Elegant plants 18 inches high, bushy and well set with buds, 80c each; $9.00 per doz.; $70.00 per 100.

Dahlia Kriemhilde, the Finest of all Cut Flower Varieties. Perfect in color, free and early, good stems, and the ideal Dahlia as a fine cut flower. Field roots, $1.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100.

The New Paris Daisy, Queen Alexandra. A gem, either for cut flowers or as a pot plant. It bears double, semi-double and single flowers on the same plant. The double flowers resemble an anemone flowered chrysanthemum, but all are handsome. Strong 2 1/4-inch pots ready now, 20c each; $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

Azalea Mollis for Easter Forcing. This hardy azalea is gaining in favor every year. It is profitable stock for the retailers to handle; bushy plants 15 to 18 in. high, full of buds, $4.50 doz.; $35.00 per 100.

Primula Cortusoides Sieboldi. Try a few of these for early flowering; you will be surprised how much attention they will attract. We offer strong corms which, if potted up and placed in a carnation house temperature, will flower in four or five weeks' time. Four colors—pure white, blush, salmon rose and crimson rose with white eye, $1.25 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

The New White Hybrid Perpetual Rose, Frau Karl Druschki. It seems almost incredible that such a fine rose should have been introduced seven years ago and its many good points only now become known. However this may be, the fact remains that this is the first really white hybrid perpetual rose that we have, and furthermore it is a gem in every way perfect in form, a vigorous grower and remarkably free-flowering. Strong two-year-old imported plants, $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100.

The Scott Fern. This is not only the new Boston fern which has come to stay, but a variety which will displace that old favorite. We have a good lot of 2 1/4-in. pots. $2 doz.; $15.00; $125.00 per 1000.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The market was even more crowded the past week than the one previous. The warm weather of late has had a great deal to do with the prevailing conditions. March came in like a lamb, but the weather man predicts that the lion will soon appear. The business, so far as cut flowers are concerned, has been very unsatisfactory. The wholesale market has been glutted with stock of all kinds and sales were made only when prices were made low enough so that the retailer would buy on speculation and make his windows attractive. There are no fixed values. The question is, "how many can you use and we will make the price right."

Special Beauties sell slowly. Shorts are too many for the demand. Brides clean up pretty well, but Maids, Meteors, Perles and Gates, are slow. There are plenty of these for all demands at low prices. Specials, though, run to $8 per hundred. Carnation blooms are in surplus, with fancy stock as low as $2.50 per hundred. Enchantress, Lawson and Prosperity with good long stems sell at these figures. Good common stock is hard to dispose of when fancy stock sells so cheap.

Violets are in great demand. Extra fine long Californias are within reach of all in 1,000 lots; as low as $1.50 per thousand. This is about the only flower handled by the stores and fakirs at present. Lilies are very plentiful and especially callas. They might be called a glut. Harrisii are not so many. The store man with a big funeral order is in clover.

Romans, Von Sions, tulips and other bulbous stock still make gray hairs for the wholesalers. Sweet peas and lilacs are finding little favor from the buyers. Smilax is selling fairly well along with other greens.

Various Notes.

George M. Kellogg spent Saturday in the city, looking for help for his up-to-date dairy at Pleasant Hill. Mr. Kellogg reports a big cut of roses at his place, which find a ready market, and is sorry that he cannot be with the boys at the club meeting this week.

J. W. Dunford, of Clayton, called on Saturday. James reports a fine crop of Harrisii in pots coming on, which should sell well among the retail trade.

Henry Ostertag was busy on Saturday canvassing votes at the democratic primaries. He is a candidate for the house of delegates from the Twenty-second ward.

George M. Kessler has a new title now, Director of Restoration. Mr. Kessler has started a big force of men at the World's Fair grounds working at the restoration of Forest Park.

Chief Taylor and Supt. Hadkinson are still holding the fort at the World's Fair grounds and will until late in the spring, as many important matters are to be transacted in their department.

J. W. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, is cutting extra fancy Enchantress carnations and California violets.

E. W. Guy, of Belleville, is sending to Kuehn some well grown bulbous stock of all kinds.

Charlie Dauernheim, Jr., of Kimmswick, is cutting a fancy lot of carnation blooms, which are sold in this market by Berning.

George Augermuller, for many years bookkeeper for C. A. Kuehn, has left his place. It is rumored that he will open a wholesale house on his own hook.

Bowling.

On Monday several of the old-timers of the club met and bowled four games. The scores were as follows:

The Market.

Business continues very good and it seems to be evenly distributed. But the number of carnations received during the past week was little short of marvelous. Lawson fairly rained in. This carnation is being cut in great quantities and the quality is fine. With all the great quantities of carnations, white and red were never in excess of the demand. But pink! It was almost a case of take what you could get for them, and some even found their way to the dump. I believe that the heavy cut will continue through this week, but from the report of various growers, that will be the end of it, and the following week will see things back to normal.

With roses it was different. White was scarce, also Golden Gates. Beauties, especially long-stemmed, were not equal to the demand. The fine weather we are having now will undoubtedly increase the cut very shortly.

Bulbous stock of all kinds is plentiful and sells well. Violets continue coming very heavily.

The near approach of Lent does not strike terror into the florist's heart as in years gone by. The past few years have not shown a very great diminution of business during this time.

Various Notes.

The annual carnation show of the Florists' Society will come off Saturday, March 11, and it will be a great event. By an oversight, the color red was omitted from the printed schedule, but prizes will be given in this class the same as the others.

W. K. Partridge is cutting some of the finest stock seen in this market, and a visit to his retail store will quickly prove this fact. The product of his greenhouses would be hard to excel.

George & Allan are cutting a general line of bulbous flowers now, and the quality is of the best. Besides supplying this market, this firm ships large quantities to Chicago and St. Louis.

J. Lodder & Sons, of Hamilton, are sending in some extra good Princess of Wales violets.

The beautiful springlike weather last Saturday brought out a large representation of the growers in the Jabez Elliott flower market, and their stands were well stocked. Business was very good.

E. Mack, whose greenhouses are on Price Hill, reports the cemetery trade as very good, and that business in general has been brisk all winter.

Martin Reukauf was in town last Saturday.

The Nassau County Horticultural Society held its regular meeting March 1, one new member being elected. H. F. Meyer, gardener for George R. Sheldon, read a very interesting paper on growing mushrooms.

The first exhibition of the society was held, being of carnations. Some very fine flowers were on exhibition. Special mention was given W. Willesen, gardener for H. F. Noyes, for a sport from Enchantress, much darker in color than the parent, measuring three and three-

THE GREEN CARNATION.

We are informed that A. C. S., of Los Angeles, raised a green carnation. He refuses to explain how he did it except that prepared soil was used. Mr. A. C. S. ought to have his soil patented before some one analyzes it and discovers the secret. We also advise Mr. A. C. S. to send his carnations to New York before March 17, as they would bring high prices on that day. It is surprising how horticulture advances when we have only to put the dye in the ground to obtain, in the flower, the color we want. B.

FRANK STEVENS.

BULB STOCK NOT PAYING.

Several of our largest growers of hardy bulbs have made the remark to me that there is no longer any money in growing bulbous flowers for market in this locality. I have visited, in the last few weeks, several of the largest bulb fields in the neighborhood of San Francisco and from the prices that I find the growers are receiving for their stock there is certainly very little to be made at present. There are a good many acres devoted to the culture of narcissi and daffodils and the crops should be remunerative. Paper White narcissus is the only sort grown in quantity and the price has not been good this season. The growers have received an average of about $7.50 per thousand blooms and there has been some difficulty in disposing of them even at that price.

Of course the bulbs do not need much attention otherwise than giving them a small amount of hoeing during the season and transplanting them every four or five years. Several growers watered their bulbs in July and kept them growing during August and September by the same means and had a good crop of flowers in October and November. These paid very well and were easy to dispose of, but when the bulbs are allowed to flower at this season, after the natural rainfall, they do not begin to bloom freely until December or January. This being an unusually mild winter there was no scarcity of flowers of any kind and white narcissi went begging. Several growers have created quite a market for them in our interior and northern towns and considerable of the surplus has been used in this way.

With yellow flowered daffodils the price, except for extra early varieties, has also been poor this season, partially because of the extra mild winter and partly because of over production. Double varieties did not pay to pick this season and Trumpet Major at no time during the crop brought over $5 per thousand. Princeps, which is really a much better sort, has sold wholesale as high as $10 per thousand and Sir Watkin, the variety now in full blast, has averaged about the same price. The only varieties from which money has been made, as near as I can find out, and one that does well here, is Ard Righ. These were forced into flower without any trouble early in December. This particular grower sold his entire lot at $5 per hundred, with demand for many more than he had. Emperor comes very late in some localities and is better than the early blooming varieties on that account. Golden Spur is also to be commended for the same reason.

The increase in bulbous stock is so large the past few years that the florists cannot handle them when the conditions are favorable for blooming, such as they have been this winter. With jonquils I have not found a grower who handles

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Warm nights and an abundance of sunshine have brought in a greater profusion of flowers than we generally have at this season of the year. Flowers of all kinds and especially those that do not come under the head of fancy stock, can be had at very low prices. Carnations are selling at $1.50 per hundred for the smaller flowered varieties and from that price up to $4 per hundred for fancy stock. Roses are more plentiful and the prices are good for long-stemmed stock, but for other grades they do not average over $1 to $1.50 per hundred. Valley is plentiful and is selling at $4 per hundred. Hyacinths and Romans are out of season and a few L. Harrisii are offered. Fruit blossoms are now much in evidence in the stores and quantities are handled by the sidewalk merchants also. Violets, owing to the warm spell, give evidence that their season is drawing to a close. They can be bought now at from $2 to $4 per hundred bunches. Wild maidenhair has almost taken the place of the cultivated variety.

BURBANK'S

Phenomenal Red Raspberry!

THIS IS MR. BURBANK'S LATEST BERRY TRIUMPH. He never wants anything to leave his hand until he has proved its merits. So this was not put upon the market until tested and sealed with approval by its great originator.

And from another season's experience with it we are frank to say that as the territory of its introduction and use is enlarged, it continually grows in favor. It has made for itself, by its just merits, hosts of new friends within the past year. To see it in its perfection is to desire it.

It is the result of a cross between the "Improved California Dewberry" and the "Cuthbert Raspberry." It takes the color and flavor of the latter and size and shape more of the former. Mr. Burbank describes it as "larger than the largest berry ever before known; bright crimson raspberry color; as productive as could be desired, and the most delicious of all berries for pies, canning, jelly or jams."

The berries grow in clusters of from five to ten, or more, and individual berries, under favorable conditions, have measured three inches one way by three and one-half to four the other. It's a surprise and delight to people when first seen, being so large and luscious. Mr. Burbank has recently said: "It is the best berry in the world," and the prophecy of others is that "It is the coming berry of the future." The demand for plants last year far exceeded the supply, and the demand now is greatly on the increase. This speaks for itself as to the quality and merits of the berry. It being easily grown and firm, it is a profitable berry for the fruit grower or small rancher to produce for shipping to home or distant markets. Also, it's no mistake if one has a half dozen plants in the garden or back yard of a town or city residence, for, by their productiveness they prove a delight for the table and yield great returns for the amount invested. We can supply the plants in dozen or thousand lots, as suits the buyer. WARRANTED HARDY ANYWHERE.

The vines grow as trailers.

In field cultivation there are two methods: One is to set the plants six or seven inches deep, six to eight feet apart in rows eight feet apart. To set in the spring is best, and let them grow until the next spring, but keep the ground well cultivated. Then set stakes twelve to sixteen feet apart and three and one-half or four feet high. Stretch a wire from top of stakes and staple down. Then gather up the vines and loosely twine or tie to the wire and continue cultivation.

The other method is similar; only the plants are set 12 to 16 feet apart, in rows only 4 feet apart.

The berries ripen here the last of May and continue until the first of July.

After the fruit is gathered, go through and cut out all the old vines and canes, as the new growth at the foot of the hill is the one to put up on the wire the following spring to bear fruit.

HEATING IN OREGON.

We have four three-quarter-span greenhouses running east and west. Three of the houses are on a line, end to end. The boiler shed is at the east end. Then comes a lettuce house, 18x60, then another lettuce house, 18x60, and then a carnation house, 25x80, all connected, making the string 200 feet long. Fifteen feet to the north of the middle house is one 33x60, which we wish to use for chrysanthemums followed by lettuce. We want to know how to heat these houses most economically with hot water, using wood for fuel. Could we build a pipe boiler in a brick furnace to do the work? It seldom reaches 10 degrees above zero here.

H. & F.

Your problem is a difficult one because of the arrangement of the houses. To place a boiler in the boiler room at the east end it will be difficult to heat the wider house at the far end. It occurs to me that to locate the boiler house between the middle house of the string and the chrysanthemum house would be most advantageous if the height of the latter will permit such an arrangement. Flow pipes could then be carried to the two houses 18x60 feet, to the one 25x80 and to the one 33x60, each independently, and in each case the system would not be excessively long. If this cannot be done, a boiler room might be constructed at the west end of the detached house and made to subserve almost the same purpose.

The total radiation required in these houses is about 1,400 square feet, which will take a boiler with about 180 feet of heating surface. A pipe boiler can be constructed that will do the work, but it would be wise to make it long and narrow and build it so as to make it a return flue boiler in construction, i. e., place a coil of pipe over the fire and in the chamber to the rear of the fire-box and another parallel coil over it in such a manner as to be parallel with the first, but separated from it by a cast-iron plate or fire brick partition. This is intended to carry the heated gases along the water tubes to the rear of the boiler, where they change direction and return to a flue directly over the fire-box. A boiler constructed of 1½-inch pipe will require to be ten feet long, four feet wide and contain eighteen loops of pipe or thirty-six lengths of pipe ten feet long. Such a furnace could be constructed with grate bars long enough to burn 4-foot wood. Another plan would be to use an internally fired return flue boiler. If this type is used the same area of heating surface should be employed.

With the boiler located at the west end of the house 33x60 feet, a 2½-inch flow pipe should be carried to the partition between the two lettuce houses, from which point take off a 2-inch flow to return by eight 1½-inch pipes, four on each side wall or under the side benches. At the east end of the other lettuce compartment divide the 2-inch flow to return by eight 1½-inch returns. The carnation house 25x80 should have a 2½-inch riser supplying twelve 1½-inch returns and the chrysanthemum house 33x60 should be provided with a 2-inch riser and thirteen 1½-inch returns. L. C. C.

RICHMOND, INP.—The B. K. & B. Floral Co. has had trouble because of a short water supply this winter, a difficulty which has embarrassed many growers in southern Ohio and Indiana, where the autumn was very dry. Mr. Knopf has produced good stock, but says it would have been better if he could have had more water.

CARNATIONS

We offer first-class stock of the finest varieties.

Strong Rooted Cuttings

Variegated Lawson This variety which we are introducing this season we are sure will prove to be the very best variegated sort. Pure Ivory white with delicate carmine pencilings. Mr. W. N. Craig, an authority on everything pertaining to horticulture, says that he knows that this variety will out-bloom the favorite, Mrs. M. A. Patten, three to one. It has the Lawson habit and stem, and is bound to give satisfaction. $12 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Red Lawson A bright red sport of Lawson that is bound to be popular, and will be grown where Lawson is popular. $10.00 per 100; $75 per 1000.

Cardinal Bright cardinal, or crimson-scarlet. Won first prize for best 100 scarlet, first prize for best 50 carnations any color, first prize for best 50 scarlet seedlings, Chicago. $12.00 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Fiancee The queen of pink carnations; in a class by itself. Magnificent flowers, strictly fancy in every respect. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

White Lawson We consider this variety, which we introduced last season, the most profitable white carnation ever sent out. We think it will outbloom any other white two to one. It has given great satisfaction. When the flowers are left on the plants until fully developed they are much larger than Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson. We believe this will occupy among white carnations the same place that Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson does among pink carnations. Remember that we are headquarters for it. Splendid stock ready for immediate delivery. $7.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

Fred Burki Recommended as an extra free-blooming white variety and a claimant for popular favor. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Lady Bountiful A magnificent white of last season's introduction. $8.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Daheim Dark crimson. Grand stiff stem. Oalyx never bursts. Free and abundant bloomer, developing very quickly. We consider this the best all-round crimson carnation. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Mrs. M. A. Patten This grand variegated carnation has given splendid satisfaction. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Enchantress Freest blooming, bringing highest market prices. In great demand. $4.00 per 100; $30.00 per 1000.

Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

Prosperity A magnificent fancy carnation. $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

We are now prepared to book orders for 1906 for the Coming Scarlet Victory. This is a real bread and butter variety. An early, free and abundant bloomer with good stem; a magnificent keeper and shipper; flowers of the largest size, commanding the very highest price. This is going to be a money-maker. Orders will be filled in rotation, as received. Delivery beginning December next. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

BUFFALO.

Good Business.

February was, all branches of the business considered, a very good, lively month. Flowering plants sold well, with a steady, healthy demand for cut flowers. No great splurges, yet a call by the many, and that's nice. Our stores are very gay with azaleas, lilacs, acacias and pans of hyacinths, tulips and narcissi. In fact the pan business has been better than any previous year. What a grand narcissus is the Golden Spur, easy to force and as a flower for a vase much prettier than the double Von Sion. Now we have Emperor and Empress, very pretty, but Golden Spur is queen of this class. High quality roses are still quite scarce and even inferior flowers all go. There is an abundance of carnations, consisting of good, bad and very bad quality. Bulbous stuff is abundant and valley, freesias and other "fixins" in plenty and a good demand for it all. It is only fair to be grateful and just to the weather and let up on growling when we can do so with truth and joy. While our streets are awful, nothing like them east of Manchuria, we have turned our faces to Old Sol every morning for the past three weeks and he was not veiled with a cloud, but beamed upon us with a warm, glad smile, and how our spirits rest in the winter sun's rays! You feel so good that troubles you have none and start the day so happy that oatmeal for breakfast, sourkraut for dinner and Limburger for supper seems more than you deserve, and are thankful.

We are all preparing for a big Easter and those who have the stock in the right condition need fear little about demand. It is in human nature to feel optimistic. In fact it is an essential of life. If the pessimists were in the majority it would be a miserable world, and it must be rather blue to live in a city or town that does not grow. There are such places in this great country, but they are in the great minority.

"A History of Our Times."

A four-mile trolley ride to the east edge of our city line and a mile walk through snow varying from six inches to thirteen feet gave me time to think of the status of our business in this city thirty-five years ago and what it is today. What a list we could draw up of old establishments that were born, flourished and decayed and finally passed off the map during those few years. What an interesting story could be made of "The Growth and Evolution of Our Business" for our national society. It would be mighty entertaining, even if it didn't instruct you how to force "pie plant." For every one of these old places that are no more, a dozen have arisen to take its place, much larger in size and infinitely better adapted to raising plants and flowers. The land in large cities, even in the outlying districts, is too expensive for the commercial florist and so new establishments and removals seek the surrounding country and trolley and telephone keep them in touch with the city.

A Prosperous New Place.

At the end of the snow walk we found at Pine Ridge, Erie county, a brand new place, that of Messrs. Werick Bros. At present there are only five houses about 20x100. They have unlimited room to spread and they are going to widen out. Although strangers to the business a few years ago, they have the vim and brains that will end in success. Two houses were filled with carnations and three with general Easter stock, to be followed by bedding plants for cemetery work. An interesting item in their benches was 2,000 young Fiancee and the writer was pleased to see what a grand lot of strong, vigorous young plants they were. They intend putting up two more houses 28x100 and converting the heating from hot water to steam.

There are other very recently erected places that we know only by name and we are going to buy a Winton auto car and take them all in. W. S.

PUEBLO, COLO.—G. Fleischer reports business good and prospects bright. Stock is scarce, not enough home-grown carnations and outside stock has to be relied upon. It was 30 degrees below zero in February.

CONCRETE BLOCKS.

In answer to J. H. S., who asks about double hollow cement blocks as a material for building walls for a greenhouse, would say that we built a new greenhouse last season, using the cement blocks as material for our walls. We have the Dietsch style house, running east and west, 41x120 feet, six feet to the gutter. On the south side we have thirty-six inches of glass and thirty-six inches of cement blocks. On the west end there is glass down to the same level and cement to the ground. The blocks are well laid up and are excellent for the purpose, showing no signs of frost at all. This winter so far has given them a good test, the temperature having gone down 23 degrees below zero. They are also fine material for making chimneys. This building material has given us entire satisfaction.

The Market.

A continuance of bright, warm weather is causing an increase in the supply of all classes of stock, with a corresponding decrease in prices. Beauties are coming in larger quantities and are of better quality. Gates, Brides, Maids and Chatenay are as yet not quite up to the standard, but some very fine Uncle John are to be seen. Carnations are coming in large quantities, especially Lawson, and prices are going down, some retailers selling them as low as 25 cents per dozen. Much larger quantities of bulbous stock are being shown than formerly, prices remaining about the same. Violets are in abundance and large quantities of callas and Harrisii are seen. The lateness of Easter is bringing on stuff that would have brought good prices then, but for which there is very little sale now. A large number of small receptions and several large funerals have brought quite an amount of business from distant points and local trade has been above the average.

Various Notes.

The Commercial Club is making an earnest effort to interest the florists in a flower show to be held in the fall. Past experience has taught us that we can, if we will, have as good a show as any city in the Union and we feel sure that the outside florists will again bring their best. A meeting will be held shortly to canvas the situation.

Miss Murray has some fine plant stuff on display and reports business as good with enough orders to clean up everything each day.

Miss Moseley, on Minnesota avenue, across the line, sends a very satisfactory report of business.

W. J. Barnes is the premier bulb grower in this section.

W. L. Rock is displaying some very fine stock at his store and with his large force has all he can do to take care of his trade.

Miss Jewell, on Grand avenue, is well pleased with trade. Although but a short time in business, her trade has increased to very satisfactory proportions.

The Star Floral Co., Masonic building, Miss Schaeffer, manager, is busily employed looking up a satisfactory location with the view of increasing their capacity. Miss Schaeffer reports business as very satisfactory.

RED SPORT (Of Maceo.)

Red Sport has proved the greatest money-maker we ever grew, producing more good blooms to the square foot of bench room than any other variety on the place. During the glut the first part of January we could only get four cents for fancy Lawson and sold every Red Sport we had at five cents. Every grower who was here in December was carried away with its possibilities, as a future supply of a "holly berry red" for Xmas. There is no pick in the blooms. They are all a uniform size and color. There are 40,000 or 50,000 buds showing in different stages of development at this time and there is not a split or off color bloom in the lot and every plant is the picture of health. We will plant 20,000 plants of Red Sport for next season's bloom and the cut is already engaged by two of Washington's leading retailers. Red Sport is an easy doer and everyone can grow it as successfully as we can. Price—12 for $1.50; 25 for $2.50; 50 for $4.00 post-paid; $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000. We guarantee stock to arrive in good condition and be well rooted.

The Club's Show.

On February 27 the Gardeners' and Florists' Club gave its annual carnation and rose show. There was a fine exhibition and a good attendance. My Maryland, from H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, was scored to 97 points and awarded a special certificate. It was reported that the owners ask $10,000 for a half interest in this variety. J. E. Haines, Bethlehem, Pa., showed his namesake and Imperial. C. M. Wagner, gardener to C. R. Diffenderfer, showed a pink seedling named Lady Edna, and John Cook had an unnamed white seedling. The following were the awards in the general classes:

Mrs. T. Harrison Garrett (Charles Uffler, gardener)—First for 100 blooms of Enchantress.
Lehr Bros.—First for Genevieve Lord; first for Prosperity and first for Enchantress.
John A. Nuth—First for Mrs. Lawson, second for white and second for Genevieve Lord.

CANTON, OHIO.

The Brown Floral Co. has a new sport from Enchantress carnation which has been named Mrs. Ida McKinley, for the widow of the late President McKinley. In all its characteristics save color and fragrance the sport is identical with Enchantress. The color is a shade lighter than Joost, the petals dark at the base and growing lighter toward the tips in the fully expanded flower. The flower has a strong clover fragrance, which should be a strong point in its favor.

I mail you under separate cover the tops of two geraniums. Kindly state what the trouble is and the remedy, if any. The plants will not bloom.

The tops enclosed were fine, healthy, short-jointed growth and we can see nothing to prevent them from flowering. Some zonal geraniums do not flower during the winter months; only a few varieties are good for this purpose. However, some varieties after years of propagation will show a tendency to terminate their growth with a number of small leaves, a sort of rosette of leaves. This growth will not flower and the plant is useless for bedding or any other purpose. The splendid old semi-double pink, Emile de Gerardine, which was our standby for years, developed this tendency and we had to be careful in the fall to select for cuttings only healthy shoots that had produced perfect trusses of flowers, and you will have to do the same if the varieties you sent have that tendency. The cause of it we do not know. It can hardly be called a disease. Instead of the natural process, they refuse to assume the form we call blossoms and continue making small leaves. Selection of healthy cuttings is all the cure we know of for this trouble. W. S.

Six weeks before Christmas my plants were fine in foliage, with only one stem of blooms each, but close to the crown were a dozen bunches of buds. I removed the leaves from the center of the plants and up come the flower stems, making the finest of plants for the holidays. Before working with Primula obconica, oil the hands and be sure the foliage is dry. J. J. L.

New scarlet salvia of great merit. This grand variety originated at our greenhouses and is named in honor of the wife of the President of the American Seed Trade Association.

It is undoubtedly the dwarfest grower, most profuse and early bloomer and most intensely bright scarlet salvia yet introduced; therefore the best bedding variety.

A NEW FEATURE—It can be had in bloom in 5-in. pots or larger for Thanksgiving or Christmas decorations. This in itself should be enough to recommend it to the retail florist.

ORANGE, N. J.

The cultivation of fruit under glass was made the topic of the monthly meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society on March 3. William Turner, superintendent of the estate of M. C. Borden, Oceanic, was the speaker and treated of grapes, peaches, nectarines and plums, their soil, fertilization, fruiting and general treatment. The topic brought out a good showing of members and visitors, and the discussion which followed was general.

The exhibition of flowers was the second in the contest for the society's prizes, and the display of roses, orchids and carnations, to quote the speaker of the evening, "more than creditable." The judges of the evening were Jos. A. Manda, Arthur T. Caparn and Henry Hilbig. Thomas Jones, of Short Hills, was placed in nomination by Jos. A. Manda and Jas. Lang, by William Bennett. Alexander Smith and Otto Manetz were elected members. J. B. D.

RED BANK, N. J.

At the meeting of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society on March 3, Frank Brunton was elected to active membership. The secretary reported that eight essays had been sent in by the assistant gardeners for the prize contest. The names of the winners will be announced at our next meeting, March 17, and the prize papers will be read and discussed at that meeting. The subject of the essays to be sent in before April 7 is "Fruit Culture in General Under Glass." These essays are also to be written by the assistant gardeners and prizes will be given for the two best. Mr. Hale exhibited some Morgan roses, which received eighty-five points. The discussion of the evening was "The Value of the Gardeners' Union." The judges of the evening were W. W. Kennedy, H. Griffith and Wm. Ritchie. B.

"A sturdy, Dwarf and compact form of NEPHROLEPIS, very symmetrical and handsome, either in small plants or quite large ones. A great acquisition, with excellent qualities as a house plant. Worthy of Gold Medal."

READ CAREFULLY THE BEST REPORT EVER GIVEN BY NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB FOR A NEW PLANT.

The committee of award of the club visited the establishment of John Scott, of Flatbush, N. Y., on October 28, for the purpose of inspecting the stock of his new fern, NEPHROLEPIS SCOTTII. Seven members of the committee attended, also the president and vice-president of the club. The initial exhibit of this fern was made at the rooms of the club at the November meeting, 1903. The committee which examined it at that time was so favorably impressed by it that they unhesitatingly awarded it a certificate of merit, and did not ask to see it growing; a request to examine the stock was only recently sent to the club by the exhibitor. The committee made a thorough examination of the stock, both in pots and on the bench, and character. It was growing in all sizes from plants in 4-inch pots up to specimen plants in tubs, and it was absolutely uniform, and were highly pleased at its condition form in all grades, the characteristics of the large specimen plants being evident in the smallest specimens on the place. The most careful scrutiny failed to discover any tendency whatsoever toward reversal, and it seems as if the character of the plant is absolutely and indelibly fixed. It is in essence a condensed form of the Boston fern, with valuable characteristics added, which are not evident in the parent. Your committee took an average plant in an 8-inch pot and found by actual count that there were 200 fronds in it, not counting the undeveloped and small ones which were in the center of the plant. The fronds of the plant in question averaged about 20 inches in length and three inches in width at the widest point; the pinnae are very closely set, so that they overlap, making a more finished frond than the parent. The plant in question had a spread of three feet. Plants in 4-inch pots showed a spread of 18 inches and a height of 10 to 12 inches.

The committee was unanimously of the opinion that it is a most valuable introduction, and that it will become a plant for the florists to grow universally. It has a crispness and hardness about it which is superior to the parent, and which is one of its very valuable characteristics. It propagates very freely, and because of the fact that its character is established in the smallest size, it should find ready sale in all grades. After a thorough examination, your committee unanimously agreed that it was worthy of the highest award by the club, and therefore voted that it be awarded the silver medal of the club, and herewith recommend same for your approval.

SCOTTII has received the highest awards whenever exhibited and for the past season has proven itself to be a hardier house plant than the Boston. There is no comparison between this fern and any other variety for commercial use. Consult any grower or retailer, who has bought SCOTTII, and they will tell you that it is as far ahead of the Boston as the Boston is ahead of all other introductions.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

The Easter Worries.

Many florists will be losing sleep about this time, pondering over the question: "Are my lilies about right, or are they late?" "My azaleas are too early; what shall I do with them?" There are some crops that only years of experience can teach you how to manage, to regulate so finely that ninety per cent will be perfection in Easter week, because it is not a fixed date and that great florists' harvest may arrive in arctic weather one year and the next year be accompanied by the "busy bee at every opening flower." If not observant, we forget.

Time to Force Bulbs.

Some eighteen or twenty years ago Easter was as late as April 24. Our tulips, narcissi and hyacinths were sadly too early, we being new at the bulb business. We failed to notice that the following year was almost a month earlier. The principal impression on our mind was the loss of the previous year, and we allowed only two weeks for the tulips, etc. The weather was dark, stormy and cold and we had to resort to high pressure forcing and then only "reached the wire by a scant nose."

Now, for this very late Easter two weeks would have been just right and for a very early Easter the four weeks in a cool house would not have been so far off the mark. However, there is little excuse for being wrong with the bulbs or valley, or even with the deciduous shrubs, such as lilac and Azalea mollis, but it is different with azaleas, lilies or hybrid roses.

I have taken a walk around, listened reverently and contemplated profoundly, examined the indelible lines scored on the grey matter which is called memory and if the conclusion of all this will be a help to any beginner we shall be well pleased. Weather may upset our calculation slightly. Remember that the direct rays of the sun have a powerful influence, more, I think, than heat, in expanding the petals of many flowers. By the time you read these lines Easter Sunday will be five weeks away.

Azalea Indica.

The great majority of azaleas will be more likely to be too early than too late. Without going into the names of the many varieties, the buds will show you plainly what condition they are in. If the buds are showing any signs of swelling, then they should be kept in a cool, shady house and retarded all you can, for once the buds loosen up to start, two weeks in a light house at 50 to 55 degrees at night will bring them into full flower. If a little earlier than above described, the buds even showing color, you could keep them back in a deep cold frame, shaded from the sun, with ventilation whenever possible, but thoroughly protected from frost. We find our customers prefer an azalea that is in not quite full bloom. They like to see many buds to open. If you have some azaleas showing not the slightest sign of moving, and this we noticed recently with summered-over Bernard Andre, and its variety, alba, then get them into sunlight and a night temperature of 55 degrees. These plants that you have grown during the past summer are never as precocious in flowering as last fall's importations.

Azalea Mollis.

Azalea mollis is a very different plant. These have been wintered in a cold frame and perhaps been frozen for weeks. Allow four weeks in a night temperature of 50 to 55 degrees and they will be a mass of bloom. They can yet be bought from large importers and brought in for Easter. Inexpensive and beautiful plants they are, and if not in a limestone district you can truthfully tell your customer that this azalea is a hardy flowering shrub.

Lilacs.

The lilac, if well flowered and compact, is now a favorite Easter plant and no sweet flower is more universally known and liked than the lilac. Allow four weeks in 50 degrees at night. This is another plant that is preferred when there are trusses of flowers not fully out.

Rhododendron.

The rhododendron is like Azalea Indica, not all inclined to flower at the same season. Plants that show any inclination to open their petals must be retarded, the same as you would do with the forward azaleas. Those with buds that are tight and dormant, as they were in midwinter, should be put in a house at 55 degrees at night and given daily spraying until the color shows. Spraying causes humidity, not only immediately on the leaves and buds, but in the atmosphere, and you have only to notice the effect of a shower in April or May on our hardy shrubs and trees to realize the magical change that occurs.

Lilies.

We are sure to get a few personal inquiries about now. In fact, they are arriving already, with a postage stamp enclosed, asking "how big should the lily buds be?" Although stamps come handy we cannot undertake to answer so many letters. In a batch of a thousand lilies, however good and pure the stock may be, you are not going to get them all into flower in the same heat at the same date. In fact, their flowering time may spread over two months. This occurs in our experience more of late with the Harrisii than with Japanese bulbs and with these scarcely forced at all, say for Decoration day, ninety per cent may be had in flower in the same week, as we have seen occur.

The forced bulbs will not do this, so while some plants may be just right, others will be late, while others are or would be too early. Remember this. You cannot take a lily from a night temperature of 60 degrees and remove it to a temperature of 40 degrees when the buds are only half developed. They seem to get a chill and at once stand still. If much too early, don't attempt to retard. Lilies are always useful. You can reduce the temperature 7 or 8 degrees with the early ones without harm, and let them come along at that and once the buds are turning white (not before) they will expand in a very cool house and keep a long time.

With lilies the public look for them well out. As most of them are used for church decorations, it is best they should be all well developed to make a good showing. The Japan multiflorum is with us rather early, the black-stemmed giganteum a little late. These lilies, after the buds are visible, will endure strong forcing and can be rushed into flower in a few weeks. I would say, after careful thought, that if all the buds are plainly visible five weeks before Easter they would be all right in a night temperature of 55 degrees. If later, then more forcing must be done. If very late do not force at all.

Spiraea.

Spiraea Japonica and its improved varieties should be showing spikes, and if so will not want over 55 degrees. Do not neglect to place these plants in saucers. If you grow a thousand it is little expense and saucers are always useful. Keep an inch of weak liquid manure in the saucers and these spiræas will absorb and digest it and "flourish like a green bay tree." The difference in foliage and flower over those starved for the want of "that air liquid nourishment which I requires," as Mrs. Sarah Gamp remarked, is wonderful.

Acacia Armata.

Fine plants of acacia sell well. It is beautiful in its thousands of little globular blossoms and unique in its glossy green foliage. Easter is rather late for it, unless it has been wintered very cool. We have been troubled with many of the flowers turning brown, which is decay. A cool, dry atmosphere will prevent this and the flowers hang on a long time.

The Genista.

The cytisus or genista is another yellow blossom and quite attractive as a neat, compact plant. An early Easter suits its season better. All you can do is to keep it very cool. We used to sell many of them, but they received a bad but true character. They quickly drop the flowers and foliage in a living room.

The Bougainvillea.

The Bougainvillea Sanderii is an arborescent plant and should command a good price. Although a plant of the tropics, it does very well now, and when in flower, at 50 to 55 degrees. If the bracts, which to the customer are the flower, are about coloring, they will be all right, because the bracts hang on forever.

Rambler Roses.

And now we come to a very important Easter favorite, the Rambler roses, not only the popular Crimson Rambler but Dorothy Perkins, the beautiful pink, and Farquhar. They are all about the same in time of flowering under glass. If never subjected to a night temperature of over 55 degrees they are far superior to those forced out in 65 degrees, deeper green, more robust foliage and far superior in substance and color of bloom, and this is about true of our tea and all other roses. If you can see the flower truss, then five weeks is plenty of time. If not visible at this time they will want some boosting in the way of heat.

These Ramblers should be properly tied or trained to stakes before growth is started, but if there are any naked places or gaps in their make-up, it is not too late to adjust a growth to improve the shape. There is time yet to grow out of man's formal shaping into nature's form and grace, which man cannot imitate, with all his skill and dexterity.

The greatest menace to the Ramblers now is mildew. Under anything like good care there is little danger, but when they do get mildew, they get it badly. A chill will cause it; so will neglect of ventilation some fine, sunny morning and the house goes up to the century mark; and so will a severe dryness of the roots. These neglects do not occur in well regulated families, but they are not all well regulated.

Hybrid Roses.

The hybrid perpetual roses in pots, if well grown and flowered, will always sell. There are, perhaps, millions annually forced for Easter, but seldom well grown. American Beauty is one of the very best for this purpose, but I am not on that side of the subject now. These should not have over 55 degrees at any time and if you can see that they are now about to form buds you will be in time. No skill can get a plant of H. P. roses to have all its flowers in the same stage of growth, but let its first blossoms be opening when offered for sale. It is the flowers to come that sell the plant.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

A BASKET DECORATION.

The accompanying reproduction of a photograph shows a luncheon table decorated by a group of three baskets. The table is oblong, with covers for nineteen guests. The central point in the scheme is a round, low basket in straw color and green, filled with Enchantress carnations, violets and Asparagus plumosus. Connected with the center basket by slender sprays of smilax at either end are small baskets of the same style and garniture.

To get down to details, in filling of center basket with sphagnum, after lining with tin foil to prevent a suspicion of dampness from soiling the cloth underneath, leave a slight hollow in the center, and push the moss filling perceptibly toward the edge of the basket. Tie the sphagnum in with a few cross wrappings of green thread and cover the top with a light mat of wood ferns. Wrap the handle with soft, dark olive satin ribbon, without bows. Cut and stem Enchantress carnations, the stems shortened to from four to six inches, enough to fill in the body of the basket generously, allowing freedom to those on the outer edge to lean out naturally.

In spite of the shortened stems, many of the heavy flowers in the body of the basket will droop too much. To support them easily without the labor of wiring, set in thickly like bristles, stubs of stems, three or four inches long, with the foliage, which have been cut away from the lower ends of the long carnations. This will not only support the flowers and allow them a natural swing, which wiring cannot do, but will add the natural foliage effect so often lacking in carnation arrangements. The reason for the depression in the sphagnum filling will appear as the work of inserting the flowers progresses. One often sees a basket filling pyramidal in the center, which is decidedly strained and unnatural. The opposite treatment throws a few flowers in toward each other and also concentrates the color, producing a gradation of shade to tint from center to edge.

Select two dozen most graceful and long-stemmed of the Enchantress and start a cluster as shown, up over the handle from one side. Wire in two or three places around the handle to retain in the position they naturally take. The delicate tint of the Enchantress on the dark green ribbon is pleasing and restful.

Set a deep fringe of Asparagus plumosus in short sprays around the edge of the basket. No stemming is needed; the wiry stems will run into the moss and hold themselves in place. Against the asparagus fringe as a background set in clusters of violets stemmed in groups of six to twelve. Here and there they will be thrown against the tint of pink in the carnations and be thrown out in relief.

The design of the smaller baskets is more plainly shown in the one on the right. Prepare the basket as was done for the larger one, except instead of covering the sphagnum with ferns use Asparagus plumosus, not upright, but set down into the moss so far that only the foliage is visible. This makes a soft bed over the sphagnum. Instead of inserting the carnations upright in the basket, stem at various lengths from four to twelve inches and insert horizontally from the center toward one end of the basket, the longer ones falling far out past the end of the basket. Then stem some carnation stems and insert in the same way at the center of the basket toward the opposite end. When complete the design will appear to be a cluster of long stemmed carnations laid in the basket lengthwise. Tie a small cluster of violets on one side of the handle toward the top, with a smart butterfly bow of dotted light pink florists' chiffon. Set in a cluster of violets at the base of the handle opposite. Work in a few carnation buds among the carnation flowers. Turn two or three carnations backward from the general direction of the cluster over the stems.

After placing the baskets on the table, start a light garland of smilax from a point about one-third of the distance up the handle of the large basket on either side, downward across the cloth in a curved line toward each of the smaller baskets. Let the tip end easily reach and touch the base of a small basket. From the same source trail two or three other light garlands of smilax to either side of the small baskets, touching the points where the candlesticks are placed, or at some other convenient point. Under the two outside smilax sprays, starting with them from the large basket, trail a 2-yard wavy length of the dotted pink chiffon to match the bows on the small baskets. This is distinctly shown between the foreground candlesticks and the baskets.

As should be always observed, favors to match some portion of the centerpiece here take the form of bunches of violets tied closely up under the heads of the flowers with brisk bows of the pink chiffon. Candle shades in pink are used to blend with the dominant color.

GERTRUDE BLAIR.

THE ROSE IN DECORATIVE ART.

[A paper by Robert Kift, of Philadelphia, read before the New York Florists' Club, March 13, 1905.]

When June nature stirs in the early spring and arouses into life the snowdrops and crocuses, which in turn are followed by their more pretentious kinsmen, the gaudy tulips, the daffodils and stately hyacinths, she pauses awhile to admire and then actively and vigorously her work goes on, until the whole landscape is pictured with her beautiful art. But still she presses forward not satisfied, until at last the crowning glory of her work appears, the rose, the queen of flowers.

It is her masterpiece. She has endowed it with every virtue, it is most beautiful in form, it has almost all the colors of the rainbow, while its fragrance is most delightful. She guards it carefully, providing even an armor of thorns to protect it.

'Tis sweet to dare the tangled fence
To cull the timid floweret thence.

Such is a brief description of the flower we honor tonight.

The Rose of Commerce.

Almost the entire history of the roses of commerce, as we know them today, covers but the short period since 1870. Prior to that time the camellia was the favored flower, and choice blossoms brought fabulous prices. As soon, however, as the rose made its appearance the camellia was doomed. Bon Silene, Safrano, Marechal Niel and Lamarque, small and insignificant as, with the exception of the Marechal Niel, they appeared, they soon relegated the old favorite to the blackground and finally to oblivion.

How I remember the weary hunt in the early eighties from one greenhouse to another over the Hoboken hills, gathering in a few Bon Silene and Safrano here and there, and possibly a few Jacques, which were then being forced in small quantities but which soon took the lead as the most popular rose. Two hundred or 300 buds were then considered a large stock and well worth the one or two days' journey necessary to get them.

The decorative features of the flower did not count for much until the long-stemmed hybrids made their appearance. The advent of Ernst Asmus's Glory of Paris (Anna de Diesbach) made a great sensation. This was followed by Ulrich Brunner and Mrs. John Laing. Then came the new teas, Catherine Mermet, followed by Bride and Bridesmaid.

It was, however, that queen of roses, the American Beauty, introduced to the public by the Field Bros., of Washington, that placed the rose in the van as a decorative flower. Now no important decoration appears complete without a liberal representation of this variety to add dignity to the occasion.

Fashion in Use of Flowers.

To a certain degree dame fashion must be reckoned with in floral art, as there are fashions in flowers and floral devices, the same as in dress. Peter Henderson's book on the art of bouquet making and the general arrangement of cut flowers was the recognized authority of his period. The close, compact form, presenting solid masses of flowers without foliage, was then the fashion and the details of arrangement are minutely described in this work. Since then with the great strides made in the cultivation of flowers and the production of long-stemmed blossoms, the styles have changed, the close, formal designs have been succeeded by the more graceful and natural arrangements that display the beauty of stem and foliage as well as flower.

In the garden dame nature arranges her flowers in the most beautiful manner conceivable. The branches of the climbers bend over gracefully with their wealth of bloom, all, even the smallest blossom, uniting into a perfect whole; while the bush varieties throw up their single buds or clusters that stand from out their wealth of foliage in perfect symmetry. Such effects can be produced in the ball room or elaborate house functions, the growing rose being simulated and made to climb in any direction and when covered with blossoms makes a capital counterfeit and beautiful decoration.

The Many Uses of Roses.

For the wedding, that most joyful time of life, there is no flower that more fittingly graces the occasion than the rose. In the church, the altar, the chancel, the windows, the pew ends, in fact, at every available point there should be seen this most beautiful flower. The bride and her maids should carry them and, under a bower, surrounded on every hand by beautiful roses, she should stand to receive the good wishes of her guests.

The beautiful custom of greeting the debutante upon her entrance into society with the choicest flowers has grown into prominence the past decade and offers great opportunities for the artist. Probably no other occasion brings together such an assortment of flowers as are to be found among the hundreds of clusters that grace the receptions of the popular young buds. The rose is also found in the front ranks here, as seventy-five per cent of the bouquets are sure to be of our favorite flower.

The arrangement of flowers for the dining table is an art in itself and the rose easily leads in popularity for this purpose. The formal plateau, or mound, has given place to the more graceful arrangement in low bowls below, or high receptacles that carry the flowers above, the line of vision. When loosely arranged in such vases all the beauty and grace of the flower are brought out. They should not be so crowded as to lose their individuality, but enough should be used to get the color effect, and their quality and freshness should always be such as to leave nothing to be desired.

Tall vases of long-stemmed American Beauties are still very popular, and certainly the most effective of all roses, whether used in groups of palms, on the banquet table, or in other of the many places that seem ideal for them, and for which there seems to be almost no substitute.

The use of flowers to carry the voice of condolence to bereaved ones is a beautiful custom, and one, let us hope, that will never die out. It can hardly be classed as decorative art, yet for those who have the final disposition of flowers as they are placed before the public today, it is a very important branch of the business, and as much care and attention must be given, and as skillful treatment in the arrangement, as for any other occasion. Here, as elsewhere, simplicity has asserted itself, and the cluster of long-stemmed roses and the wreath, the least formal of all designs, are fast growing in popularity.

The Rose in Roman History.

If we can believe the accounts of the extravagant use of roses thousands of years ago, and they appear to be authentic, our most extensive decorations are as nothing when compared to these elaborate displays, as much as $100,000 having been spent by Nero for roses for one entertainment. What they sold for by the dozen may be conjectured from the following, copied from Mr. Parsons' book on "The Rose," published in 1847:

If the Egyptians cultivated roses for transportation to Rome during the winter, they must have had very extensive plantations for the purpose.

The exportation could not have been of loose flowers or they would have withered long before the termination of the voyage. Neither could it have been of rooted plants in a dormant state, as nurserymen now send them to every part of the world, because the Romans had at that time no means of causing them to vegetate and bloom in the winter. On the contrary, the cultivators at Alexandria and Memphis must of necessity have sent them away in the vases and boxes in which they had planted them with that object, and when they were just beginning to break from the bud, in order that they might arrive in Rome at the moment they commenced expanding.

At that remote period, when navigation was far behind its present state of perfection, the voyage from the mouth of the Nile to the coast of Italy occupied more than twenty days. When this long voyage is considered, and also the quantity of roses required by the Romans to enwreath their crowns and garlands, to cover their tables and couches and the pavements of their festive halls and to surround the urns which contained the ashes of their dead, it is evident that the Egyptians who traded in roses in order to satisfy the prodigality of the Romans would be compelled to keep in readiness a certain number of vessels to be laden with boxes or vases of rose plants so prepared as not to bloom before their delivery at Rome.

The cost of roses thus delivered in Rome must have been immense, but we do not find a single passage in ancient authors which can give any light on this point; they only tell us that nothing for the gratification of luxury was considered too costly for the wealthy Roman citizen.

What would rose bushes in bud, such as we know them today, look like after a three weeks' journey by sea? They must have been impregnated with the same blood as Burbank's fadeless flower; in fact we are led to wonder if the roses of that day were roses at all, or at least such as we know them now.

It appears to have been the custom at that period to use flowers most lavishly, and particularly for dinners, and all social occasions, and for the dead. In addition to the decorations for the table the couches upon which the guests reclined were elaborately decked with roses, as were also the floors of the rooms.

Cleopatra covered the floors of her dining-rooms with rose leaves to a considerable depth, and over them placed a fine net, so that her guests might tread the floral carpet without inconvenience. It was the custom to cover the beds of the guests with roses, and some who slept under layers of rose petals were annoyed beyond measure if any of them should start to curl, indicating they were not fresh. I fear that some of their descendants are among our patrons of today.

The rose has many rivals as a decorative flower. The chrysanthemum, the carnation, the lily, and even that butterfly of fashion, the orchid, are all in the race for popularity. But the rose, endowed with so many points of excellence, is still the one great favorite.

One thing more may be said of the rose that can hardly apply to any other flower, and that is its changing beauty. As a bud we admire it, and as it slowly develops until half blown, it grows more and more beautiful, until finally when fully expanded, it takes another form and gradually fades away.

Oh, there is nought in nature bright
Where roses do not shed their light!
And when, at length, with pale decline,
Its florid beauties fade and pine,
Sweet as in youth, its balmy breath
Diffuses odors e'en in death.

NEW AND PROMISING SORTS.

[A paper by P. J. Lynch, of West Grove, Pa., read before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, March 7.]

Philadelphia as Rose Center.

In responding to the invitation of the chairman of the committee having charge of the evening's program, to give a "short" talk upon the new and promising roses, I think the polished diplomacy of the gentleman overcame my better judgment, for I know of no particular act of my life that justifies the honor thus paid me. Your club has ever been in the front rank in furthering the popularity of the rose, while the fame of your growers is world-wide. For a slow town like Philadelphia, sending safely to England's queen, as one of your growers did, a bunch of that beautiful rose of Philadelphia origin, Queen of Edgely, savored of a pace rather difficult to overtake.

Then, too, while the origin of the ever-popular American Beauty (or as has been claimed, Mlle. Ferdinand Jamain) is somewhat obscure, yet it first attained prominence as a commercial variety through the foresight of a Philadelphia grower. Liberty, now so thoroughly established as a forcing variety, came into prominence through the efforts of a Philadelphia grower. Even that much-discussed variety that today for amateur cultivation is perhaps the leading rose of its color, achieved notoriety through one of your local growers. Though gallantry was at stake as to whether it should be named for the bishop or the lady, the bishop won. I refer to Balduin—Helen Gould.

I might mention a host of now famous varieties, such as William Frances Bennett, Souvenir de Wootton, Golden Gate, Princess Bonnie, Pink Soupert, Marion Dingee and many others whose rise to fame and popularity came through the intelligent efforts of growers of Philadelphia and its environs. With these facts in mind I approach this subject with considerable apprehension.

Some Old Roses Still "New."

I am conscious of the fact that in the brief limitations of this paper it will be impossible to cover the subject completely and accurately. I shall therefore give you my observations as they have occurred to me in the daily contact with over a thousand different varieties of roses, coming as they have, from all parts of the world. I shall speak only of roses now in commerce, and while varieties may be mentioned that are not entirely new so far as recent origin is concerned, yet it is to be borne in mind that there are a great many roses "born to blush unseen and waste their sweetness on the desert air"; many for years remained unnoticed, with their latent beauty undeveloped, until through sheer force of worth they rose to fame and glory. We have notable instances of this fact in Golden Gate and more lately that Irish beauty, Killarney.

The Amateur's Interest.

I shall also give equal prominence to varieties that are undoubtedly valuable, not only for forcing purposes, but those varieties appealing to amateur growers, whose ranks are constantly increasing. Of this class, for whom I feel better fitted to speak than from a strictly professional standpoint, I can say that it is a gratifying indication of the rapidly increasing love for the queen of flowers, that the average amateur enthusiast—and there are thousands of them in all sections of the land—is keenly alert to the improvements of the rose, and not infrequently has a knowledge of varieties as accurate as that of the professional grower. This growing interest of the masses bodes well for the future of the rose, and should prove a stimulus to American hybridizers, who may feel assured, if their creations have merit, that the rose-loving public will be quick to give them deserving recognition.

The Newer Ramblers.

It seems fitting that I recommend at the outset that sensational new rose, Mme. Norbert Levavasseur, or Baby Rambler. This vivacious French debutante is the rose that blooms every day in the year. Growing in its full vigor twenty inches high, with finely polished, dark green foliage, with which it is abundantly supplied, it forms a compact bush, which with ordinary care is a mass of shining crimson beauty. For every purpose from the florists' standpoint it possesses the highest value, and for the amateur it is equally valuable. It is indeed a perpetual blooming, dwarf Crimson Rambler.

In the Rambler class may be also mentioned a variety that does not seem to gain the recognition it deserves as a rose of splendid worth, Dorothy Perkins. It is a true Rambler, particularly valuable for Christmas work, and equally as valuable in the open ground; thoroughly hardy, bearing in large clusters beautiful clear, shell-pink flowers of excellent substance. Philadelphia Rambler, a recent introduction, bears out all that is claimed for it, and in some respects is an improvement over the old, reliable Crimson Rambler.

The Splendid Hardy Hybrids.

One of the most unique and valuable of the newer roses is Soleil d'Or, the first of a new race, a cross between Persian Yellow and Antoine Ducher. It forms a strong, sturdy bush, very robust in habit, with foliage that emits the true sweetbriar fragrance. The flowers are sunset yellow or reddish gold, and are highly fragrant; hardy everywhere; splendid for single specimens or for hedges.

In this same class of hardy roses of the rugosa and sweetbriar type may be mentioned Sir Thomas Lipton, a rugosa rose. The flowers are large, very double, pure white and fragrant. It is freer blooming than any other rugosa, and will prove a splendid variety for hedging purposes.

From Germany comes another great new hardy rose, Frau Karl Druschki. The flowers are almost as large as American Beauty, deliciously fragrant, full, deep and double. This variety may be called a free blooming hybrid perpetual, being a cross between Merveille de Lyon and Mme. Caroline Testout. The color is snow-white. Apart from Margaret Dickson we do not have a really great white rose in this class, and this variety may be considered one of the best, if not the very best, hardy hybrid perpetual rose of its color.

Newer Hybrid Teas.

Among the newer hybrid teas of prominence and merit we have Bessy Brown, a really wonderful rose, with large, double, deep flowers, borne on strong, erect stems, after the style of President Carnot, which it resembles in growth and somewhat in flower, but is distinct enough to deserve a place at the head of the list.

We hear but little of the rose that bears the honored name of Admiral Schley, which as a pot plant possesses rare value. The color is rich, glowing, velvety crimson. The flowers have unusual substance, a valuable point, are delightfully fragrant and borne in great abundance. A clean, healthy, dwarf grower, with splendid foliage.

Since Killarney has become recognized as a rose of more than ordinary merit, such roses as Mme. Jules Grolez, its counterpart in color and almost equal in flower, remains unnoticed. It is a splendid grower and with proper management should prove a strong competitor of Killarney.

The list is incomplete without Lady Joy, a cross between American Beauty and Belle Siebrecht, a royal parentage; flowers large, cup-shaped, almost double, with enormous shell-like petals of good substance, highly fragrant. The color is new—lively crimson.

Mrs. Robert Garrett is of the same type, but not as free blooming; immense bright, clear pink flowers. We cannot omit Winnie Davis, one of the fairest of the newer hybrid tea roses. Very free blooming, of good habit of growth, with immense, long, heavy buds, splendidly formed, developing into unusually large flowers. Color bright apricot-pink, shading flesh tint at the base of petals.

A Word for Americans.

Right here I wish to compliment our American rose growers upon the splendid results achieved in producing new roses of merit. Fully conscious of what our brothers across the sea have done for the rose, for which we are indebted to them, I would say naught against the magnificent work they have done, and are doing. Unlike our American growers, however, who hesitate to offer a rose unless it be of pronounced merit, from my own personal experience, each year hundreds of varieties are produced in Europe many of which have little or no merit to commend them. I know of nothing that is so fraught with pleasure, as well as disappointment, as the trying out of new roses, and it has been the practice of our company up until recent years to try out all the new roses of Europe as they have been introduced, and I can say that the large majority of these new varieties of foreign origin have been disappointing. Therefore our American growers are to be not only congratulated, but also commended upon the work they are doing, and the precaution shown in not introducing any and every seedling they originate.

I need not call attention to Mr. Hill's splendid new rose, Richmond. It has spoken for itself, and as a candidate for popular favor in the class of red forcing roses it seems to be a decided improvement over any we have at this time. Rosalind Orr English is another promising hybrid tea.

John Cook, to whom we doff our hats as one of the veteran introducers of meritorious new roses, contributes Cardinal, a beautiful crimson hybrid tea, and Enchanter an extremely free blooming variety with large, clear, bright pink flowers. Mr. Cook selects this variety as the best of over 500 seedlings.

Pierre Notting a Winner.

Large Flowered White Marguerite.

(Grown by Wm. Nicholson, Framingham, Mass.)

Pierre Notting as one of the best roses for all around purposes introduced in many years. It will take front rank, if not surpass from every standpoint, white and pink Maman Cochet, the best roses for summer flowering in the open ground. This new variety is a splendid grower, throwing up beautiful flowers on long, stiff, erect stems. The bloom is large and double, opens easily and possesses unusual substance. The color is difficult to describe, apricot yellow, tinged with golden, mixed with orange yellow, while the edge of the petals are shaded carmine. Every florist who has a foot of ground for summer roses should have this rose.

Mme. Derepas-Matrat has established itself as a companion to the Cochet roses, which it resembles in every particular, except the color in deep yellow.

Other Good New Sorts.

The following varieties are also among the most promising of the newer sorts. Canadian Queen is an improvement over Mrs. J. Pierpont Morgan, Mme. Cusin and Mrs. Oliver Ames, the latter which it resembles in color; General MacArthur, a vivid crimson hybrid tea; Red Chatenay, deeper in color than the parent; Uncle John, more pronounced in color than Golden Gate; Beauty of Rosemawr, rich carmine red, valuable for outdoor purposes; La Detroit, distinct and valuable, shell pink, good for forcing; Saxonia, worth trying as an improvement over Golden Gate; Mrs. B. R. Cant, unusually valuable for amateur cultivation, better than Papa Gontier; Aurora, an improvement over Hermosa; Franz Deegen, an immense deep, double yellow rose, alike in habit and growth with Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, and far superior to Perle von Godesberg, sent out as Yellow Kaiserin; Florence Pemberton, a strong growing hybrid tea, large shell-pink flowers, good for open ground work; Maddalena Scalarandis, will rank with the Cochet roses outdoors, color rich dark pink, on yellow ground. Ideal ranks with Bridesmaid and La France, pink in color.

Old Rose Made New.

As an example of an exceedingly rare rose I mention the variety York and Lancaster, which dates back to the War of Roses between the royal houses of York and Lancaster, said to have originated when these warring factions became united, its colors representing the white of the Yorkists and the red of the Lancastrians, the flower being a combination of red and white blotched and striped.

Magnafrano is a free blooming hybrid tea, with large, double pink flowers. Wellesley is a remarkably free flowering forcing variety. The color is bright pink; a good keeper. For greenhouse men doing a local trade there is always a demand for a hardy ever-blooming climbing rose. To meet this demand there is no better variety than Climbing Clothilde Soupert.

The list of the newer and promising varieties could be extended to considerable length, but I feel that I have already encroached too far upon the patience of you gentlemen, and in thanking you for your kind attention I wish to express the hope that I may have said something of value to growers as well as helped deserving roses to greater popularity.

CARE OF YOUNG STOCK.

As Easter approaches and we are all trying to make the best showing possible, every foot of bench space occupied and every minute of time valuable, there is frequently a danger of neglecting the young rose stock, the Easter stock getting all the attention, the returns from such being a nearer prospect. If we allow any of these issues to entice us to relegate the young stock to dark, cold or draughty quarters, or let them suffer from neglect in any way, however hard we are pushed for time or crowded in bench room, we cannot expect to have the best of success when such stock is benched.

Stock which has suffered in this way in its youth may apparently recover and look well during the growing season, but the chances are that after a few weeks of firing they will begin to go back, without any apparent reason, defying the skill of the best growers to keep them in health. Many of the troubles which come under my notice are traceable to this carelessness and neglect of stock while yet in the pots.

As the sun's rays are becoming stronger every day, care should be taken that young stock is kept from drying out and also that they do not become pot bound, as pot bound stock suffers severely if allowed to become dry and rarely, if ever, recovers fully from such a shock.

In nearly every range of glass there will be found some panes which, owing to some defect, will cause blistering and burning of the tender young foliage and even the older foliage will be apt to suffer as the season advances. These spots should be hunted out and touched with oil. It takes a few days to find them, but it pays. RIBES.

IS LAWSON "RUNNING OUT?"

Apropos of the views as to Lawson "running out" expressed in the last issue of the REVIEW, Fred Dorner, Jr., Lafayette, Ind., says that they have not for two years grown Lawson for cut flowers.

J. W. Dunford, of Clayton, Mo., writes: "I think that on account of its vigorous constitution Lawson will be good for some time to come but the fact that it is necessary to plant it very early to get good stems and the high temperature we must give to make it profitable are somewhat against it. It is an established fact that all varieties 'run out' sooner or later." Mr. Dunford says that he can not credit the statement which has been made that half the carnations grown this season are Lawson.

In this connection it is interesting to note that one of the large growers at Chicago says that for two years past more than half his sales of cuttings have been Lawson, and he has some twenty varieties on his place.

Writing from Denver, J. A. Valentine says: "I think there is nothing in the appearance of Lawson as grown in this vicinity which would indicate that it is 'running out.' When the variety was new and considered a novelty, it was naturally given extra care, and probably the blooms then produced averaged better than those produced now; but we occasionally see benches of it which seem in every way equal to the variety when first produced."

CARNATION "DEALS."

An arrangement has been consummated between the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., and W. N. Rudd, of Mt. Greenwood, Ill., whereby Mr. Rudd's new pink carnation, Lady Margaret, on the order of Fiancee, will be introduced to the trade by the Hill Company. Mr. Hill has also entered into an arrangement with H. Weber & Sons, of Oakland, Md., to handle their splendid white variety, My Maryland, which is to be sent out next season. Both varieties will be grown extensively at Richmond.

WE are well pleased with the REVIEW, here is the proof, another dollar.—Hartmann & Wagenfohr, Winfield Jet., N. Y.

RETURNING CONDENSATION.

On page 882 of last week's REVIEW is an article entitled "Returning Condensation," from our friend J. M. Gasser, of Cleveland. Now all who know Mr. Gasser as intimately as does the writer are well aware that he is, in greenhouse construction, heating, ventilation and arrangement of benches, one of the most progressive men in the business. No sacrifice of time or money is too great for Mr. Gasser if he can attain the best construction and methods. Notice that he dug a hole twelve feet deep for gravity. Then he changed to a trap, then to a pump and then back again to a trap, all to attain the best method, which he seems to have found in the last trap. It is from the effort of such men to overcome difficulties and the desire to reach perfection that most of us benefit. Beginners can copy, without expensive experiment, the results of years of thought and labor of these progressive men.

But with all this Mr. Gasser should not be "surprised" that anyone would recommend high pressure on the boiler, with an automatic steam pump and controlling valve to reduce the pressure of the boiler, say forty pounds, to a pressure of two pounds on the piping. He should not condemn it simply because he never tried it. His experiment with the steam pump and receiver holding six barrels, or about 200 gallons of water, and no controlling valve was no more a test of this system than the old-fashioned brick flue. No wonder he pumped back cold water. The receiver of the modern pump holds, for a block of 40,000 feet of glass, with 18,000 feet of 1-inch pipe and several hundred feet of 2-inch and 3-inch pipe, not more than eight gallons of water. It might hold that quantity but it never does, because directly there is a gallon of condensation returned to the receiver, the pump starts and back it goes to the boiler at a temperature almost 212 degrees.

Those who are quite satisfied with a trap should stick to it on the very ancient maxim of "Let well enough alone." I can quote what more than one have told me who have tried both systems. "I would not have another trap as a gift since I know the benefit of the pump and controlling valve."

I have not written the above to dissuade anyone from using a trap, but simply to prevent Mr. Gasser from being unpleasantly surprised at the commendation of a system that he never tried and which is so extremely satisfactory where used. WILLIAM SCOTT.

OUR PAMPHLETS.

THE REVIEW has reprinted Mr. Montgomery's article on "Grafted Roses for Forcing" and the Pronouncing Dictionary of Plant Names. Each makes a neat pamphlet. Either one will be sent post-paid to any address on receipt of 25 cents.

SIZE OF SHIPPING BOX.

Please tell me the correct size of shipping boxes made of wood to ship about twenty miles with flowers and return empty. I want sizes for tulips, peonies, asters and carnations. E. A. M.

The size of box depends on the quantity of stock and a little on its quality. Where considerable quantities of cut flowers are shipped into the Chicago market a very convenient box is one thirty-six inches long, fourteen inches wide and ten or twelve inches deep, with egg case cover. The ends are made of 1-inch and the bottom and sides of ½-inch lumber dressed down.

WORLD'S FAIR FLOWER SHOW.

At a meeting in Chicago March 10, the books of Treasurer Rudd were audited and the affairs of the World's Fair Flower Show Association wound up, with the exception of mailing dividend checks to guarantors who paid the assessment. This will be done as soon as a printed statement of receipts and disbursements can be prepared to go with the checks. The statement shows a profit of $1,457.35, equivalent to a dividend of twenty per cent, with $15.35 balance to defray cost of printing and postage. All things considered, it is a very favorable outcome. A brief summary of the statement follows:

A RARE CATTLEYA.

We reproduce in this issue a good photograph of Cattleya Trianae var. Backhousiana which is at present in bloom in the orchid collection of E. G. Uihlein, Chicago. This is not only a very handsome variety but also very rare. Flowers are well shaped, sepals and petals blush pink flaked at the tips with bright magenta; lip round with a large blotch of deep purple; throat intense yellow. While the ordinary Cattleya Trianae can be purchased at from $2 to $5 for good pieces, Mr. Uihlein has declined an offer for this plant from one of the largest orchid dealers in England of $250. It is certainly a gem.

WATCH THE GAS MEN.

It is worth while to keep your eye on the gas company's employes when you see them working on the mains near your place or near your water supply. Closely following the report that Gustave Knoch, at Woodmere, Mich., has started suit against the Detroit Gas Light and Coke Co., as a result of its careless dumping of poisonous matter taken from its mains, comes the story of an almost parallel case at Cincinnati, where Critchell's lost a big lot of cuttings. The water which accumulates in the gas mains and requires to be pumped out seems to contain most injurious elements and water should not be used which contains the slightest trace of the poison. The following letter from B. P. Critchell tells what happened in his case:

On account of a bad accident that we had in our propagating houses we had to discontinue the rooted-cutting advertisement. During the severe weather in January the Gas Company dumped some gas water into the creek, which is our water supply, and it stopped at our pond, and before we knew anything about the poisonous nature of it, we had used it for several days in the propagating house. The result was that we lost the entire bench of between 20,000 and 25,000 cuttings.

Have cleaned out the house and are in shape again and will send you an advertisement in time for next week's issue. We had very good results from the advertisement, and have had to return quite a number of orders with the money for the reason that parties wanted the stuff, immediately.

ILLINOIS STATE ASSOCIATION.

The prospect of securing a state appropriation for experiment work for floriculture under the direction of an advisory committee of the Illinois State Florists' Association has awakened great enthusiasm in that organization. At a meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club on March 9 thirty new names were added to the already long list of members of the state society. Application to incorporate has been filed. In the endeavor to secure favorable consideration by the state legislature, the committee in charge has been surprised at the lack of realization of the importance of the greenhouse industry in Illinois. For educational purposes it has issued the following open letter:

By an act approved March 2, 1887, the national government appropriated $15,000 per annum to each state for the purpose of establishing and maintaining an agricultural experiment station, "to aid in acquiring and diffusing among the people of the United States useful and practical information on subjects connected with agriculture and to promote scientific investigation and experiment respecting the principles and applications of agricultural science."

The Agricultural Experiment Station of Illinois was placed under the direction of the trustees of the State University as a part of the university. From 1887 to 1901 the station was maintained upon the United States fund of $15,000. Its sphere and its activities were necessarily limited because the above sum had to be used for salaries, printing four bulletins a year, as required by law, labor, supplies, etc. When divided among four or five departments representing great agricultural interests, such as agronomy, animal husbandry, horticulture, dairying, together with the necessary investigation in botany, entomology and chemistry relating to these industries, it is a matter of wonder that the stations have done the great work they have. According to the provisions of the law, none of the money can be used for buildings, as it was supposed the states would make the necessary appropriations for them.

Four years ago the various agricultural organizations of the state, realizing that the appropriations received from the national government were inadequate, sought and obtained appropriations. The past two years appropriations were made as follows: Twenty-five thousand dollars for live stock investigations; $25,000 for the soil survey of the state; $15,000 for dairy investigations; $10,000 for corn investigations and $10,000 for orchard investigations. Each of these appropriations was expended under the direction of an advisory committee of five from each of following associations: The Illinois Live Stock Breeders' Association, Illinois Farmers' Institute, Illinois Corn Growers' and Illinois Corn Breeders' Associations, Illinois Dairymen's Association and the Illinois State Horticultural Society.

The sums mentioned are specifically appropriated for certain investigations and have been so used. The only reason the florists have not had similar appropriations is because they have not asked for an appropriation for experimental work.

According to the census figures for 1900 there was invested in floriculture in Illinois the sum of $4,648,056. Of this amount $2,096,652 was represented by buildings and $2,439,163 in land. The wholesale value of the flowers and plants sold in 1899 was $1,867,855. There was 8,414,541 square feet of glass. In addition to the above figures, which relate to the commercial florists, or those who derive the principal part of their income from the sale of flowers and plants, we find 1,199 gardeners using a total area of 8,744,020 square feet in growing plants.

Greenhouse building firms estimate the amount of greenhouse building material, including structural work, glass and pipe and heating apparatus, at $2,000,000 per annum of sales in the city of Chicago alone. Information obtained by builders, through the trade press, from wholesale plantmen and estimates from leading members of the trade, make it certain that the value of investment and the amount of annual output are now 50 per cent greater than the above quoted figures for 1900. Conservative estimates place the coal consumption of the greenhouses of Illinois at 150,000 tons per annum.

In Cook county we find the glass area of the florists to be 5,855,612 square feet; in Du Page county, 532,680 square feet; Kane, 195,563;

Sangamon, 184,240; McLean, 150,263; Will, 110,455; Morgan, 96,000; St. Clair, 95,330; Peoria, 86,509; Lake, 73,487, etc. With few exceptions there is in every county of the state some glass devoted to floriculture, and if we include the glass used in market gardening, the industry is practically universal, so far as the state is concerned. Indeed, no other state has so universal an interest in floriculture as Illinois. The industry is common to the whole state, and if we remember that a portion of the appropriation asked for should be used for experimentation on the home grounds of the state, the fact is established that floriculture is an interest that affects every person who possesses even a few feet of land. From the foregoing it will be seen that the results of investigations will be far reaching.

New York, the only state which equals or surpasses Illinois in commercial floriculture, has provided greenhouses at its two experiment stations at Geneva and Cornell. Many experiments have been carried on for the benefit of this industry, particularly with vegetables under glass. In Illinois, with her great floricultural interests, not a dollar has been specifically appropriated for experimental work along this particular line, while other agricultural interests have been cared for and florists have paid their part of the state taxes without any direct benefit in return.

In Rhode Island an asking has been made of the legislature for the sum of $15,000 for greenhouses. They will get it because the florists and gardeners are supporting it. In Illinois there are single establishments with a greater glass area than there was in the whole state of Rhode Island in the census year.

The state of New Hampshire has today perhaps the most compact and serviceable little range of glass of any state agricultural college and experiment station, costing $7,000 and built under a state appropriation. Compared with the floricultural industry in Illinois, New Hampshire has not as much glass as Du Page county, to say nothing of Cook county, which surpasses every state in glass area except New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Massachusetts. Is $10,000 too great a sum for Illinois to put into glass structures?

The lines of work under glass which most likely will be taken up are methods of combating insect and fungous diseases and investigations to the use of commercial fertilizers. Whatever is undertaken will be determined by an advisory committee appointed or elected by the Illinois State Florists' Association, and this committee will certainly see to it that only such problems are investigated as are of the most vital interest to the whole state. The law contemplates a fund of $10,000 a year to pay all operating expenses, labor, coal, supplies, printing, etc., as well as co-operative experiments carried on away from the experiment station. If an insect or fungous pest appears on ornamental plants anywhere in the state which cannot be readily determined, an investigator should be put to work at it to the end state should co-operate, and this can best be done by urging your representatives and senators to vote for the bill. Interview them when they are at home, if possible, otherwise write them a strong letter.

MASSACHUSETTS GARDENERS.

Prof. C. S. Sargent, Brookline.

The Sargent estate in Brookline covers over 200 acres and is the largest in area of any of the numerous estates in Greater Boston. The grounds here are lacking in that formality which characterizes so many of our newer places, being of a park-like nature and planted very tastefully and containing splendid collections of trees and shrubs, comprising many choice and rare varieties. While the glass department is less extensive than on some estates, Charles Sander can always show visitors something good. The conservatory attached to the mansion is especially attractive at this season, with large groups of finely grown azaleas, imantophyllums, amaryllises, acacias, ericas, bulbous stock and Primula obconica. These are very tastefully arranged on the ground with palms and other foliage plants as a background.

In the various greenhouses we noted some good forms of Cattleya Trianae and batches of phaius, coelogyne and other seasonable orchids. Imantophyllums are grown in large quantities, big specimens in large pots or tubs of many choice named varieties, and make a gor-vator. Specimen azaleas are grown in quantities and are a great feature in their season, as are standard wistarias and Trachelospermum jasminoides. A large number of the latter were being placed on new frames at the time of our visit.

WITH THE GROWERS.

Schneider & Noe, Congers, N. Y.

The establishment of Schneider & Noe, of Congers, N. Y., is one of the modern plants for producing high grade carnation blooms. The houses are new and of the best construction. There are three houses each 200 feet long. One is twenty-five feet wide and two are each fifteen feet wide. A fourth house is 9x100. The heating is by hot water, but a new house 30x200, which is to be built this season, will be heated by steam. The Lord & Burnham Co., the builders of the present houses, has the order for the new structure.

There is an admirable water supply at this place, as shown by the tower and tank which are a conspicuous feature of the accompanying illustration. It is a Caldwell outfit, the iron tower being fifty-one feet high, carrying a tank of 5,000 gallons capacity. A well and pumping engine keep the tank filled at all times and give a splendid pressure.

The entire crop is carnation blooms for the New York wholesale market. Mrs. Lawson is the favorite and they have at present about 10,000 plants of it. Next in order come Enchantress, Prosperity, White Lawson, Flamingo, Lorna, and Queen Louise. The two latter will be dropped next season and the space given to White Lawson, which is doing exceptionally well with them. They will also plant some Fiancee next season.

Schneider & Noe say that they have been much interested in the opinions expressed as to Lawson "running out." It has done so well with them that they will plant more of it next year.

CYCLAMENS INDOORS.

The seeds of the cyclamen plants shown in the accompanying illustration were sown in November, 1903. After making the second leaf they were potted into 2-inch pots. The soil was the same as we use for growing roses, but some leaf-mold was added. After becoming rooted through they were replanted into 2½-inch pots, and so on until they are now in 5-inch pots. We used leaf-mold in very small quantities, about half a bushel to six bushels of soil. As cyclamens make a more compact and robust growth in a stiffer soil, manure was also used sparingly and then only well-rotted horse manure. Cyclamens should never be allowed to become pot-bound. They should be repotted as soon as the roots begin to form a net around the ball. We had our plants all summer in our propagating house, slightly shaded, and prefer this way to outdoor culture, as to handiness in watering, etc. The photograph reproduced was taken December 21 and gives a fair view of the quality and success of cyclamens grown indoors.

that it may be brought under control for the common good of all the trade. Under the law for orchard investigations almost all the work has been carried on away from the university. No one knows at the present time what this co-operative work will be, but there will necessarily be some such work done and the appropriation must cover all possible contingencies, especially since there can be no profit in maintaining a range of glass for experimental work, as the work will be largely with diseased plants.

The movement for appropriations is favored by the Illinois State Florists' Association, the Chicago Florist Club, and many other prominent florists of the state, but every florist in the geous show. Nerines are grown in hundreds and are great favorites. Quantities of seedlings from the best crosses obtainable were noted in various stages. Crinum Macowani was blooming freely, as were gardenias. The Tunford Hall form of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine was still flowering finely and is a favorite here. Batches of quite a variety of plants, some of by no means easy culture, denoted Mr. Sander's skill as a culti-

MEASURE FOR CARNATIONS.

Kroeschell Bros. Co. has got out a neat measure for carnation blooms, made of the best water-proof card. They will send one to any one who sends a 2-cent stamp to pay the postage. Their address is 51 Erie street, Chicago.

NEW YORK.The Market.

"One of the worst ever," one prominent wholesaler called last week's market. In several respects it was one of the most strenuous weeks New York has ever known. The flood of rain removed the snow and brought the first practical evidences of approaching spring. But the bad weather was not the only deterring business influence. A strike tied up the elevated and the new subway roads for days, causing immense losses to business generally and the florists were no exception to the rule. The bottom fell out of prices and quotations of a week ago were cut in two before the week was over. This applies to the very best stock reaching New York, while up to this time quality had maintained its rights.

Roses especially felt the strain. When at this season of the year the finest Beauties drop to 20 cents and Maids to 6 cents, the rest can be imagined. Carnations are far below normal, and violets—let us draw the purple curtain. Take Saturday as a sample. On one train from up the Hudson 157 boxes arrived. Many boxes contain 3,000 flowers. When all the trains were in from all the sources you can reckon the supply. No wonder the sacrifices took place and good stock often commanded only $1 a thousand. What about next season? Many new violet houses are already contracted for in and around Rhinebeck. One expert prophesied last Saturday night that in 1906 violets will sell at 50 cents a thousand. It is useless referring to bulbous stock and in fact nothing but orchids has maintained quotations and of these the supply is limited and the demand continues. Lilies are abundant and of excellent quality, but thousands are sold during the week at 50 cents a dozen and less in quantity.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club's rose night was a great success. The attendance was large, the program intensely interesting and the exhibits varied and creditable. Breitmeyer's Sons sent La Detroit, the best flowers in color, size and length of stem they have ever exhibited here, also some grand stock of antirrhinums. John Scott showed Scottii in several sizes, every plant perfect. Peter Bissett, of Washington, sent his new pink seedling, a remarkably strong grower and of exquisite perfume. The F. R. Pierson Co. had Killarney at its best, also fine blooms of Daheim and Variegated and White Lawson carnations, Baby Rambler roses in pots, and a handsome plant of Pierisii elegantissima. The committee of awards, through Chairman O'Mara, commended the exhibits and a unanimous vote of thanks was accorded the exhibitors.

The outing committee reported the date of the club's summer outing as June 28, the place of meeting Glenwood, Long Island. Six new members were elected and Professor Johnson nominated for membership. Mr. O'Mara read the new rules governing the award committee, which were unanimously adopted and ordered distributed.

The subjects taken from the question box last meeting next received consideration. Harry May spoke on the most valuable characteristic in the rose, deciding that "form, all else being equal, is most worthy. The rose must be prolific to be valuable and from the commercial standpoint must have stem, from the exhibition standpoint beauty." He quoted from Dean Hole, whose opinion placed form first and beauty second. The Rose Society has declared for color first, he said, and in conclusion he paid a glowing tribute to the Marechal Niel. Robert Simpson agreed with the Rose Society's decision and claimed that without color the rose would be comparatively worthless. Liberty he called pre-eminent because of its color. Patrick O'Mara spoke interestingly.

Mr. Birnie read a most interesting paper on the most valuable characteristics of the carnation and gave as his belief the keeping quality of the flower as of greatest importance. He dilated upon the causes of carnations going to sleep and dwelt upon the necessity of picking at the proper time, but said a visit to the wholesale houses often gave him a severe jar, with vases over-crowded and results of careless handling by expressmen evident. He illustrated the value of care and gentle handling by his own experience with Enchantress.

John Scott read an interesting paper on the fern, giving as its most valuable characteristic its adaptability for house adornment and its lasting qualities. The commercial fern, he said, "must be a free grower and free seller and its value must be reckoned by its money making qualities." James Scott, of Tarrytown, concurred with the speaker as to the keeping qualities from the commercial standpoint and paid tribute to the old favorite, the Boston, and its honorable progeny.

In the absence of Mr. Duckham, Mr. Totty was asked to champion the chrysanthemum, which he called "everybody's flower, second to none for all purposes." To this Mr. May demurred because of the shortness of its season. Mr. Birnie and Mr. Traendly, for various reasons, agreed that it was a nuisance. Mr. O'Mara defended the flower from this aspersion. B. Suzuki, with a modesty characteristic of his nation, postponed his opinions until after the fall of Harbin.

The orator of the evening, Robert Kift, of Philadelphia, then read his interesting essay on "The Rose in Decorative Art." It was a fine effort and merited the enthusiastic vote of thanks.

In the question box for the April meeting were the queries: "Why are carnation growers more progressive than rose growers?" "Is floriculture in the United States as far advanced as in Europe?" "What is the most valuable plant in the memory of the club?" This will also be Easter plant night.

Chairman Nugent provided as a fitting close to the evening a fine lunch and entertainment of music and song.

Various Notes.

John Scott, of Flatbush, has 10,000 longiflorums in pots held back for the Easter demand, which have been so carefully timed as to be at their best on April 20. Mr. Scott will have a good stock of roses, spiraeas and hydrangeas, while his Scottii fern will still occupy the place of honor. He anticipates a call for 200,000 of the young stock from 2 1/4-inch pots this season.

J. K. Allen handles oceans of sweet peas weekly in a dozen varieties. His grower at Grand View, N. J., has named a new cerise after him that seems to be a general favorite, the demand being for the pink in preference to other kinds. The limit in value seems to be $6 a hundred bunches.

Henry Ramm, of Secaucus, one of Mr. Fenrich's growers, died last Friday.

On Wednesday of this week Jas. McHutchison and Miss Grace Edgar, daughter of W. W. Edgar, were married at the home of the bride's parents at Waverly, Mass.

Geo. L. Olney, bookkeeper for one of the Twenty-eighth street wholesalers, is giving temperance and evangelical talks with stereopticon views several evenings each week in New York and Brooklyn.

Leonard Barron is now on the editorial staff of Doubleday, Page & Co.

These are "halcyon days" with the nurserymen. Immense plantings are already contracted for and the demand will gladden the enterprising hearts of all the growers in this vicinity.

The departure of winter signalizes the recovery of many who have suffered the prevailing diseases of this fickle climate. Mr. Walter, of Stumpp & Walter Co., is convalescent and Jack Gunther was considered out of danger on Saturday.

Elliott opened the auction season Tuesday with a good attendance, smiling skies and some excellent conifers, rhododendrons and hardy rose importations.

Hitchings & Co. will shortly remove from their Mercer street offices to more convenient quarters in the uptown district.

Charles Totty, of Madison, reports his second large order for mum novelties from the Emperor of Japan, for the imperial gardens at Tokio. He also won the gum boots for high bowling score at Madison last week, so "everything seems to be coming his way."

The veterans, John N. May and Julius Roehrs, Sr., are both enjoying renewed health. Mr. Roehrs has just returned from his trip south.

Bowling.

Next Monday evening on the New York alleys, the Hoboken and New York teams will roll off their tie match, and the following Saturday evening at Newark, Madison and New York will roll their deciding game. Following is this week's score:

THE WEEKLY
FLORISTS' REVIEW

Enclosed is another dollar for subscription. I had no intention of getting along without the Review; that would be shortsightedness. T. D. BROWN.

more plentiful and, while they have dropped a little in price, they clean out well. Quality is first-class. Beauties, especially, are coming extra good. Carnations are in very heavy supply. From $2 to $3 has been the average for good stock, inferior grades making only half this. Violets continue to arrive in enormous quantities, but have improved somewhat in price, the best making 50 cents. Some very fine frame-grown Princess of Wales are now arriving of splendid color.

Bulbous stock has sold fairly well, daffodils clearing out especially well. Callas are very abundant and cheaper. Lily of the valley remains about the same. There is the usual miscellaneous assortment of other spring flowers now coming in. Adiantum is of better quality. Prices on green stock remain about the same.

Horticultural Society.

A large audience assembled to listen to the lecture by Miss Maud Summers on "The Return to Nature," on March 11. Miss Summers is a fine elocutionist. She spoke entirely extempore and could be heard clearly in every part of the hall. Her lecture was one of the most scholarly, eloquent and instructive the society has ever had. She advocated the extension of school gardens and more nature study in the schools. She said the farm school, with its plots for forest trees, fruit trees, vegetables and flower gardens, lawns, playgrounds, etc., should be given a fair trial also, and is bound to do great good.

A discussion on vegetables on March 18 will close the regular lecture course of the society. The increasing interest in horticultural topics has been illustrated by the largest attendances in the history of the society.

Entries continue to come in freely for the spring exhibition and rose show. That it will be a pronounced success is a certainty. Everyone interested seems brimful of enthusiasm over the prospects. Any who have failed to send notice of entries should do so without further delay, as the space at command is going to be taxed to the utmost.

The banquet to be tendered by the horticultural interests of Boston to the visiting members of the American Rose Society, will be held at the Hotel Thorndike on Friday evening, March 24, at 6:30 o'clock. Tickets can be procured from the officers of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club and quite a number of other members.

Florists' Club.

It had been hoped that E. G. Hill would be able to speak at the next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, on March 21, but a recent communication from him regrets that he can not get along in time, although he hopes to be on hand for the rose show. It is expected that William H. Elliott will give the club the benefit of some of his experiences. A large attendance is expected at this meeting.

The field day of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club at Arlington, arranged for March 11, was postponed to March 18, owing to the funeral of Mrs. F. R. Mathison, of Waltham, occurring on the former day. A delegation from the club attended the funeral and the sincere sympathy of the whole club and very many others goes out to Mr. Mathison in his bereavement.

Various Notes.

Harry, the youngest son of William Nicholson, is now with the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., picking up horticultural ideas in the Hoosier state.

W. H. Wyman, of the Bay State Nurseries, returned from an extended European trip on March 10. Mr. Wyman bought a large quantity of choice nursery stock in the several countries visited.

Thomas Pegler, of the Park street market, received news of his mother's death in England the past week. Mr. Pegler and his wife were planning a trip to Europe this summer, which they had not seen for a number of years, and his mother's death has quite upset him.

T. J. Grey has just recovered from a rather serious sickness.

Julius Heurlin, of the Blue Hill Nurseries, reports orders for nursery stock ahead of all previous years. Mr. Heurlin has just issued a handsome catalogue.

J. T. Butterworth is now sufficiently recovered to be among his favorite orchids once more, and is correspondingly happy.

Sweet peas now coming in are of splendid quality. Those from William Sim and Malcolm Orr are superb.

Shamrocks have been much in evidence of late. Nearly every store shows a distinct variety, all labeled the "genuine shamrock." W. N. CRAIG.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Conditions show little change in the past week. What little several cloudy, chilly, windy days have served to retard production has been counterbalanced by an equal reduction in street sales due to the unpleasant weather. Tuesday the market was in bad shape because of an all-day snow storm which kept the street stands closed. Lent has had no appreciable effect on trade, either in the city or out of town.

Beauties are about at the lowest ebb and prices stiff, with quality nothing to brag of. A new crop will soon be coming on. Bride, Maid, Chatenay and Liberty are all of splendid quality, although with some growers Maid is beginning to lose color. Supplies are very large but all the stock finds an outlet, if not a strong market. Of course prices are very weak on the lower grades with so much good stock selling cheaply. Liberty is not so abundant as the other sorts.

The receipts of carnations are very heavy. The street salesmen and the large orders which go to other cities for cheap sales are the salvation of the market; the removal of these quantities serves to give a value to the select goods and holds prices something like steady; at least a bottom is established. The surplus is almost always in pink and Lawson has to be sold at about the price of good Sport or Triumph to get a buyer. White is equal to all requirements. Red is the best seller.

Bulbous stock of all kinds continues abundant. There are plenty of fine tulips of all colors. Daffodils and jonquils are not so plentiful as they were, but still there are some to spare. Callas continue in over-supply. Easter lilies are not so plentiful but poor. For Easter $12.50 per hundred is quoted. A few freesias are seen. Valley is cheap but good.

Quantities of sweet peas are received. New York violets never reached this market in larger quantities and never made lower prices. Good stock is sold in quantity at $1.50 per thousand but occasionally a box of extra grade brings 75 cents per hundred. Mignonette is plentiful. Green goods are equal to all requirements if wants are made known early enough in the day. In fact every order, for no matter what, is well filled if it gets to market before the cleaning up process is complete, for it is the rule of the wholesalers to sell; these days there's sure to be plenty more stock coming on the next train.

The Florists' Club.

There was a well attended meeting of the Florists' Club on March 9, the special attraction being an exhibit of pipes and tobacco. There was also an exhibit of cinerarias by A. P. Frey, of Lincoln park. These were hybrids of Cineraria stellata and C. hybrida and showed some very interesting variations. They were awarded honorable mention. The Chicago Carnation Co. sent a vase of Cardinal and another of White Lawson. These were magnificent. Cardinal never looked so good as it does now and the White Lawson was very fine. The pleasure of the evening was enhanced by the presence of a negro trio and Gus. Balluff contributed some of his popular songs. Of course the Florists' Club quartette was heard. A committee was appointed to consider a plan for life membership proposed by E. F. Winter-son.

Geo. Asmus has assumed the burden of management for the trade exhibition which is to be a feature of the next club meeting. The show will open at 2 p. m. in room 300 in Handel Hall, 40 Randolph street, and will remain open until after the club meeting, which will take place at 8 p. m. No premiums are to be awarded, the idea being to make it strictly a business proposition. The growers are expected to show what they have to offer for Easter and every opportunity will be afforded them for taking orders from the retailers, all of whom are expected to visit the show. Dealers in florists' supplies are also invited to exhibit.

The club has in mind another of its popular suppers for an early Saturday evening.

Various Notes.

E. C. Amling says that to satisfy himself as to the exact state of affairs he went over his books and found, somewhat to his surprise, that where growers had the same varieties of carnations both seasons, the standard sorts have averaged better prices from October 1 to March 1 this season than they did last year. Lawson, of course, is an exception; it has sold for less money. But Guardian Angel, Higinbotham, Flora Hill, etc., have brought more, and the growers who had the same space in carnations both seasons have generally received more money in the past five months than in the same period a year ago.

Lubliner & Trinz have secured the vacant Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co. store at State and Washington streets for an indefinite period and on Saturday opened a flower stand there. They are doing a big business. It is reported they are paying $600 a month rent. These boys are nothing if not enterprising.

Tomorrow is St. Patrick's day and many of the store windows show sham-rocks. B. O'Neil, of Elgin, was in town Monday offering the "real goods" grown from seed brought from Ireland on his return from his recent visit there.

N. J. Rupp, president of the Moninger Co., says that if trade holds out to the end of the season at the pace at which it has started, this will be the banner year for greenhouse building. They have booked good sized orders all the way from Long Island to Colorado.

N. J. Wietor, in speaking of the plant business done by the large cut flower growers, said that last fall his firm sold chrysanthemum stock plants at 8 cents each to the value of $980. Save for advertising and boxes that is like "getting money from home."

The World's Fair Flower Show Association affairs have at length been wound up. Dividend checks to balance the books will be mailed in a day or two. There was twenty per cent profit.

C. A. Samuelson says that up to the first of March trade was very good. February being an exceptionally busy month,

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The market has changed appreciably since the advent of Lent. Prices have fallen from ten to twenty per cent all along the line, with no increase in the volume of flowers coming into town. It is a buyer's market, with occasional dull days to make the dealers eager to accept fair offers for quantity. Beauties are more numerous. The specials sell fairly well and will sell better when they get lower in price. There are hardly any mediums but plenty of shorts. Fancy carnations have suffered more than the ordinary grades, the Greeks disposing of many at curbstone prices. The demand for violets is weak and irregular. Tulips, especially fancy sorts, and daffodils are far less plentiful than before Ash Wednesday. Both callas and Easter lilies are increasing in number, while really good valley is decreasing. Greens are quite plentiful. The southern brand of asparagus is good enough to make the home growers a trifle uneasy. Dendro-

Wm. K. Harris' shamrocks had a great run this week in the retail and department stores. One of the latter, Litt Bros., alone used 10,000. At least four of these department stores had millinery openings, which gave Hugh Graham, J. J. Habermehl's Sons and the Wm. Graham Co. quite a little decorating. Wild smilax plants and spring flowers were the chief material.

The Dingee & Conard Co.

The REVIEW, as all its readers know, is a modern paper, wide-awake and progressive, so it happened that when P. J. Lynch made his maiden address before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia last week, a representative of this paper was straightway sent to West Grove to see the things whereof he spoke. So quickly did this newspaper man reach his destination that he got there before the now famous secretary and treasurer of the Dingee & Conard Co. had returned, whether from that Philadelphia trip or some other was not stated. His brother, Henry Lynch, vice-president of the corporation, was there, however. His courtesy and his explanations made the visit one of great pleasure and interest.

Baby Rambler planted out in the bench is a sight, a sheet of small-leaved, deep green foliage, full of vigorous shoots from which cuttings by the thousands are continually being taken and scarcely missed. These cuttings are said to root readily and surely grow fast. Souvenir de Pierre Notting is a beautiful bud, somewhat resembling Golden Gate in coloring but richer. The plant is very free and vigorous. But P. J. Lynch has told about the newer sorts, far better than I can, so with a passing glance at the hybridizing, with good old Bon Silene as seed parent, and the cuttings which are rooting nicely in a pure white sand from the quarry nearby, I will go on to the systems.

First in point of interest is that of catching the rain water on the roofs, storing it in tanks and pumping it through the pipes with good pressure by means of Ericsson hot air pumps economically run. Only in a summer drought is a spring called in to help the rain water. Then there is the system of devoting one house to all the varieties ready for shipping, each variety labeled and partitioned with lath, one man's duty being to keep each compartment filled ready for the men in the shipping department. Then there is the office, with its drawers and drawers of letters classified, its order books, account books, catalogues and what not, all bespeaking thought and system. It is a great place, chiefly devoted to roses, but with houses of chrysanthemums, geraniums, begonias, nice little Latania Borbonica and other things to help the roses go all over this great world of ours.

Various Notes.

Fred Ehret has received a new white rose, resembling but superior to Bride. The bud is fully three inches long, very full and it has a perfect stem and good foliage. It came from John F. Andre, of Doylestown.

The Henry F. Michell Co. has a handsome and unique window decoration, composed of shamrocks in tiny pots and shamrock pans on pale green ground with green sash and sweet pea seed in many varieties, the idea being to remind the passers-by of the popular fancy that sweet pea sown on St. Patrick's day will surely thrive.

The Floral Exchange is sending exceptionally fine Queen of Edgely roses to Bernheimer and Reid.

Wm. Rementer, florist, jobbing gardener and chief of police of Lansdowne, Pa., has left for parts unknown, leaving some unhappiness and many debts behind him. A receiver was appointed and last Tuesday his property was appraised by F. J. Michell, S. S. Pennock and W. E. Powell.

George Burton is again cutting his extra fine Beauties in quantity. He shipped 200 specials one day this week to the Leo Niessen Co.

Samuel S. Pennock is receiving many fancy carnations, choice dendrobiums and cattleyas.

Berger Bros. are receiving fine American Beauty roses.

Paul Berkowitz, of Bayersdorfer & Co., had a very successful trip to New York recently. The firm are busy day and night getting out their large orders.

Edward Reid considers William Diddins' deep pink carnation, Helen Reid, the very best pink in the market. It is especially valuable for long distance shipping.

M. Rice & Co. are tremendously busy getting out their Easter orders. Their new building at 1220 Race street is rapidly advancing.

Eugene Bernheimer is receiving fine Princess of Wales violets.

The Florists' Club concert will be held March 30.

Myers & Samtman's new rose described last week is a cross between Safrano and American Beauty, the former being the seed parent. PHIL.

The Market.

The market conditions are very much the same as last reported. Carnations are not coming in quite so heavily and they have increased somewhat in value, good stock selling out much better. Roses are still rather scarce and Bridesmaid is the only variety that is equal to the demand. Beauties, with the exception of very short-stemmed ones, are getting scarcer. Violets are selling better. Bulbous stock is the same as last report, also green goods.

The Carnation Show.

Our carnation show held March 11 proved to be a magnificent exhibition. The number of unnamed seedlings was remarkable. The general excellence of all varieties was noteworthy and none of the blooms were any the worse when the show was over. During the afternoon there was a continual crush of people viewing the show and thousands of interested and astonished carnation lovers visited the club room.

Our own "Dick" Witterstaetter made the show of his life, staging some thirty vases of blooms, the majority of the varieties being seedlings which as yet are nameless. Of his entire exhibit but two varieties, Lady Bountiful and Enchantress, were the product of other hybridizers. He staged Aristocrat, After Glow, and J. A. Valentine, all of which have been shown recently at other places and need no commendation from me. Much could be written of the unnamed seedlings, but space forbids. The following prizes fell to Mr. Witterstaetter: First on light pink, with Enchantress; dark pink, with Aristocrat; on seedlings, with Aristocrat; on white, with Bountiful, and on best general display; second on red with Cardinal; on seedlings, with After Glow, and third on seedlings, with Valentine.

The Chicago Carnation Co. was on hand with a large number of blooms, staging some twenty-five vases. Their stock was fine but Fiancee did not arrive in the best of condition. Other sorts were Flamingo, White Lawson, Enchantress, Prosperity, Mrs. Patten and Lady Bountiful. There were also numerous seedlings of fine quality. They took the following premiums: Second, on dark pink, with Lawson; on variegated with Patten; on 100 mixed commercial varieties and third on white, with Lady Bountiful.

While the E. G. Hill Co. did not make such a large exhibit, they were "there with the goods." They captured first on variegated, with Mrs. Patten, and on vase of commercial varieties, with a beautiful collection, also third on light pink, with Enchantress. They also staged a vase of their new rose, Richmond. They were magnificent blooms.

H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., staged My Maryland and a variegated variety, Jessica, which was first-class. My Maryland was in great form and many of the boys who saw it said it was the best white carnation in the business today. Some of the flowers showed signs of their long journey.

D. Honaker, of Lexington, Ky., staged Lawson, Adonis and Enchantress in fine form. He was awarded second on Enchantress and third on Lawson.

J. W. Rodgers staged several vases of nicely grown stock and received third for his vase of commercial varieties. Ed. Ruch, of Richmond, staged a vase of finely grown Adonis, for which he was awarded a third premium. W. E. Hall, of Clyde, O., sent a vase of his seedling, a cross between Prosperity and Maceo. It is a brick red color, very soft and pleasing, and very large. It was up for a certificate and scored 85 points. George & Allan showed a vase of Enchantress very well done. C. C. Murphy staged several good seedlings. The Indianapolis Flower & Plant Co. sent Candace. It is a beautiful medium pink color. It scored 81 points.

J. A. Peterson exhibited his Tunford Hall begonia in fine form, also pandanus and the new fern, N. Piersoni elegantissima.

A shipment from J. E. Haines, Bethlehem, Pa., did not arrive till seven o'clock. It contained several seedlings. J. E. Haines, a beautiful red, was scored by the judges and received 89 points. Other seedlings scored by the committee were: Aristocrat, 93 points; J. A. Valentine, 87; My Maryland, 91; Jessica, 87. My Maryland was the only one entitled to a certificate. The others must be exhibited at our fall show. The S. A. F. silver medal was awarded to Aristocrat, the bronze to My Maryland.

At six o'clock the visiting florists were entertained at dinner at the Gibson House, where a general good time was had till the meeting of the society was called to order at 8 p. m. at the club rooms. One item that will be of general interest to the craft at large is that it was placed on record by a unanimous vote that it is the intention to invite the S. A. F. to this city on its twenty-fifth anniversary. A committee was appointed to look for more extensive and centrally located rooms to hold our shows in, where a small fee could be charged for admission. Theo. Bock, the judge of our shows, was presented with a fine meerschau pipe and cigar holder as a token of appreciation of his services.

Visitors were: John W. Weber, of Oakland, Md.; D. Honaker, Lexington, Ky.; Theo. Bock, Hamilton, O.; John Evans, E. G. Hill and Ed. Ruch, Richmond, Ind.

ST. LOUIS.The Market.

Trade in the social line has dropped off greatly since Lent began, but work for funerals has been quite plentiful. The clear, warm weather of the past week helped the retailers down town, who report transient trade excellent. Violets are selling best, carnations and jonquils next. These are sold so cheap that they are within the reach of all classes. Prices on all grades of stock are on the downward grade and cut stock is coming forward in increasing quantities. The trade here thinks that there is little prospect of any betterment before Easter.

Roses, in particular, are most plentiful and Bride seems the only one that has any demand. In Maids, Meteors, Perles and short Beauties the market is overstocked. Fancy long Beauties are enough for the demand. Carnations are an overstock with first quality blooms. Special fancies are sold at 3 cents. Others are only sold when fancy stock runs out. Violets are also badly overstocked and are kept moving with great difficulty. Prices are way down, as low as $1.50 per thousand. Harrisii and callas are offered in large quantities and our local growers are in the belief that stock intended for Easter will come in ahead of time. Much will depend upon the weather to make Harrisii scarce for Easter.

Other bulb stock is the same as last reported, plentiful and cheap. Tulips are hard to sell. Valley is fine, but very slow in demand. Sweet peas have some demand, as there are none too many in the market. Smilax is of very fine quality but in slow demand. All other greens run about the same.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club meeting March 9 was attended by a larger number than usual. The attraction was our annual rose show, and the exhibition was large and fine. Peter Reinberg, Chicago, showed Bride, Bridesmaid, Uncle John and Chatenay; A. C. Canfield, Springfield, Ill., a fine vase of Gen. MacArthur; W. J. & M. S. Vesey, Fort Wayne, Bride, Golden Gate, Bridesmaid and an extra fine vase of their new carnation, Glendale; John Breitmeyer's Sons, Detroit, La Detroit and a vase of snapdragon; Heller Bros., New Castle, Bride and Bridesmaid, not for competition; J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Chatenay, Bride, Perle, Ivory and Golden Gate; J. F. Wilcox, Council Bluffs, Beauty, Bride, Maid, Ivory, Meteor and Chatenay; E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, eighteen of the famous Richmond, which was the center of attraction; John Hartje, Indianapolis, new carnation, Candace, a fine pink variety; Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, a table of Baby Rambler. The exhibition was in charge of Messrs. Koenig, Meinhardt and Beneke. Everything was in order when the meeting was opened at 2 o'clock by President Juengel.

trustees reported their plan for holding a successful flower show this fall, which was adopted by the club by a full vote. Otto G. Koenig will be manager and F. H. Meinhardt superintendent. These two, with the trustees, Messrs. Weber, Guy and Miller, compose the executive committee. This is a great body of workers and a successful show is assured. During the meeting $500 was subscribed for the flower show by the members present.

The judges of roses were E. W. Guy, J. S. Wilson and Frank Fillmore. Their report was as follows: Twelve American Beauties, J. F. Wilcox, first. Twenty-five Brides, J. F. Ammann, first; W. J. & M. S. Vesey, second. Bridesmaids, W. J. & M. S. Vesey, first; J. F. Wilcox, second. Chatenay, J. F. Ammann, first; J. F. Wilcox, second. Gate or Ivory, W. J. & M. S. Vesey, first, with Gate; J. F. Wilcox, second, with Ivory. Gen. MacArthur, Liberty or Meteor, A. C. Canfield, second, with MacArthur, the first prize being withheld. Various Notes.

Otto Koenig was called home during last week's club meeting. Upon arriving home he was presented by his wife with an American Beauty. He got back in two hours and brought the news of his good luck. Mother and child are doing well.

marks at the club dinner last week, extended the Florists' Club an invitation to hold one of its meetings at their place in Gardinville, which was accepted with thanks.

The Automobile Show.

Last week our city held its third annual automobile show and it was a great success. All parties connected with its management auto be pleased! It became a society event and fair ladies promenaded with huge bunches of violets.
Some Main street stores have been advertising, "Violets, large bunch 25 cents."
If they are in such abundance, let the public have the benefit of it. Many a girl who has been treated to violets during this very inexpensive period will expect to wear them when they have trebled in price, and Alphonso will have to respond. Palmer & Son and S. A.
Anderson both made fine floral cars for their windows. They were each some five feet in length, very complete in all details and only one thing lacking, viz:
the odor of gasoline. Palmer used largely his famous Red Lawson. S. A. Anderson used some thousands of daffodils.
Wind for Anderson's tires was supplied by Mr. Andy Adams.

Trade Good.

Bright, clear days and cold, frosty nights is the order of the weather and business is very fair. We have entered Lent, but surely it is time in the world's progress to drop and forget these superstitions and relics of the dark ages.
Don't do anything outside of Lent that you would not wish to do during Lent and then you can do during Lent what you can do every day in the year, Sundays included, and the great majority of our people must be of that opinion, for we notice little difference in trade during Lent. In fact the very word is getting obsolete. The "world do move."

Club Election.

Next Tuesday, March 21, the annual meeting of the Buffalo Florists' Club will take place, at which time a new set of officers is to be chosen for the coming year. Now, boys, come in and vote and take an interest in the club. There is some good, warm, young blood as candidates for the offices. After the election and business there will be a variety of "so and so, and so and so." I look forward with every hope that the coming year will be a most useful and active one and if it is not, it will be your fault, who do not attend, but stop at home and grumble and "chew the rag" about what we ought to do. Come and show us how. W. S.

GALVESTON, TEXAS.

Death of Mrs. Chas. Eickholt.

Than Mrs. Charles Eickholt, who died March 1, after a prolonged illness, there have been few more widely known women in the trade. She was a tireless worker and possessed of a mind to which circumlocution was wholly foreign. She went straight to the heart of a matter and seldom failed to see the important point among the many lesser considerations by which it might be obscured. In speech she was as direct as in her thoughts. The justice with which she administered all her business affairs and her indefatigability won for her a large trade. For several years she has been a steady and heavy buyer of cut flowers in the Chicago market.

Mrs. Eickholt was in middle life. She came to Galveston from Germany. For years her flower business was small, but it had assumed good-sized proportions by the time of the Galveston flood, in 1900, which inflicted a great loss upon her. But she rebuilt and opened a down-town store and when the new city had risen had a fine trade. Failing health caused her to spend last year in Germany, whence she had but recently returned after convalescing from a serious surgical operation. She has two sons, the elder, William, having been in charge of the business for some time and will continue it.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., E. W. Kirkpatrick, McKinney, Tex.; Vice-Pres., O. L. Watrous, Des Moines; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 29th annual convention will be held at West Baden, Ind., June, 1905.

THE "want lists" all come back with no offerings of Teas' weeping mulberry.

T. E. STEELE is now proprietor of Parry's Pomona Nurseries, at Palmyra, N. J.

JACKSON & PERKINS CO., Newark, N. Y., say that of clematis they are now the largest growers in the world.

THE South Parks system in Chicago now has a nursery of thirty acres growing stock for park uses, a great deal of material being required for the new work in hand.

MAMARONECK, L. I.—Christopher J. Schilling of New York will build an estate here, including a range of greenhouses and much landscape work. C. E. Oelshlager, Philadelphia, is the architect.

At Brandon, Manitoba, the Sterling Nursery Co. is endeavoring to recover $35,000 from the Canadian Pacific Railway for loss inflicted by an extension which it ran through the nursery grounds.

THE quantities of flowering shrubs prepared for this season begin to make apparent the fact that a much larger outlet than usual must be found or there will be a surplus after the spring business is done.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—Frederic W. Taylor, Chief of Horticulture at the World's Fair, started March 15 for Europe, to join his family and remain for some time. His address will be care the Dresden Bank, Berlin.

ALTHOUGH the past winter has been an unusually severe one, nurserymen feel confident that stock has come through in excellent shape, owing to the thick blanket of snow which has everywhere covered the ground.

SEVERAL nurseries, appreciating that the florists have exceptional opportunities for developing business in hardy ornamental stock, are establishing agencies with greenhouse men who do considerable bedding out.

ALBERTSON & HOBBS say that in their opinion the storage cellars generally do not contain such quantities of stock as in some previous season, and that there will be little need for bonfires after the spring orders are out.

THE Chase Nursery Co., Riverside, Cal., is supplying 500 orange trees for an experimental irrigated orchard near Artesia, N. M., in the hot desert country. It is hoped to put the crop on the eastern market six weeks ahead of the southern California product.

WHILE the weeping mulberry may be called scarce by one looking for a quantity, still there is no exceptional demand for it because most of the retail nurseries have enough stock for spring orders, and in a year or two the mulberry will likely be very plentiful again.

SHRUBS FOR RAILROAD LAWNS.

Please give us list of hardy shrubs suitable for small railroad lawns around stations, just the common varieties. When is the best time to transplant, spring or fall? M. A. B.

The following can be recommended as hardy, reliable and satisfactory shrubs for the locations named: While nearly all these may be transplanted in fall, spring planting, if carried out as soon as the ground can be worked, will give excellent satisfaction. Good sized holes, plenty of good loam, spreading roots and careful and firm planting are some of the essentials of success. In deciduous shrubs some of the best common sorts are Lonicera Morrowi and L. Tatarica; Spiraea Van Houttei and S. Bumalda var. Anthony Waterer; Syringa Persica, Berberis Thunbergi, Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora, Rosa rugosa and Ligustrum Iota.

If anything in evergreens is needed, a few reliable and inexpensive sorts are Thuya occidentalis, Retinospora plumosa, R. squarrosa, R. obtusa and R. filifera. These latter might need a light covering of pine boughs over them in winter to prevent browning of the foliage, but the deciduous sorts named are all ironclad. W. N. CRAIG

Seed Trade News.

Pres., C. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 23rd annual meeting will be held on the St. Lawrence, June, 1906.

THERE is a big call for nasturtiums.

G. C. WATSON, Philadelphia, has made an assignment to W. H. Graham.

THE gardener who wants a pickle contract this year has to go to the pickle man's office to get it.

FROM some sections the mail order trade is reported slow. The weather is held responsible for this.

THE Pacific coast growers are pleased with the way surplus California seed products are being depleted.

THE year 1905 is likely to be referred to by the future old-timers as the best onion seed year that ever happened.

SEARS, ROEBUCK & Co. are doing a big business on their first catalogue. They make, print and fill their own packets.

It is pleasant to be informed that a variety of seed you supposed was plentiful is all sold when you want to buy it.

ANNOUNCEMENT comes from Pasadena, Cal., that John Lewis Childs will acquire property there for a branch of his business.

THE fellow who held off because nobody wanted the seeds he had to sell may be looked up before the season is over.

THE jobbing houses all report a very satisfactory year. In their judgment this should be a good season in all lines of the seed trade.

THE general snow storm March 14 put a quietus on the fast developing retail seed trade but the jobbing end is stronger every day.

THE growers of peas and beans are said to be hustling now in quest of reliable farmers who have available acres of the right sort.

ONION sets at Chicago, March 15, about the only source of supply just now, are: Whites, $3.25 to $3.75; red and yellow, $2.75 to $3.

A SHORTAGE has developed in many lines of sweet peas, particularly the cheaper sorts. One jobber sold ten tons to a single customer, who would take more.

SPEAKING about high onion prices, it may be said that the onion set, although smaller than the market onion, is nevertheless holding its end of the plank well up in the air.

REPORTS from the local seed dealers of the smaller towns show that there is an increasing tendency of seed buyers to patronize the home store in preference to sending off for supplies.

THE board of general appraisers has determined that pumpkin seed is dutiable at thirty per cent ad valorem. This was on a contention that it was free as "seeds which are drugs and are in a crude state."

REPORTS from Wm. Henry Maul, Philadelphia, indicate a good catalogue trade. Prizetaker onion continues a leading specialty with this house.

As an evidence of the increasing interest in gardening it is cited that nearly all the Chicago daily papers and those in many other cities now have gardening departments, with directions for seed sowing, etc.

THE seeds exported by the United States in 1904 are classed as follows: Cotton seed, $141,174; flax seed, $820,668; clover seed, $600,626; timothy, $480,946; other grass seeds, $299,649; all other seeds, $240,262; total seeds, $2,583,325.

FARQUHAR & Co., Boston, report business ahead of all previous years to date, with prospects for a splendid season's trade. The only scarcity seems to be in beans, particularly the wax varieties. The newer varieties of sweet peas are in good demand.

says Richard Dean in the Horticultural Trade Journal, "I stated that they represent a great industry. It would be practically impossible to give full details of the various forms of employment which center about a leading wholesale seed house. At this season of the year the pressure of work is very heavy; seed orders are both abundant and urgent. The publication of elaborate retail seed catalogues before and about Christmas has created a demand for seeds much earlier in the season than was the custom a half century ago, and earlier sowing is much more generally followed than it was then, consequently retail houses which placed their orders with wholesale traders wish to have their goods delivered as early as possible. It is therefore of importance to bring the bulb trade to an end as early in the autumn as possible, so that preparation be made for the execution of seed orders in December. One can imagine what a task it is to get the huge bulk of leading vegetable seeds, such as onion, cabbage, carrot, radish, etc., ready by the end of the year. It would appear invidious to place on paper statistics of quantities required by any one house; but if it were done, the figures would be startling.

"Take pea picking as an employment for instance, which for weeks is in full swing. A consignment of peas of some leading sort comes in from a grower after they have been duly threshed and winnowed. The character of the samples depends pretty much upon the condition of the weather at the time of harvesting. On reaching the warehouse the bulk is passed through sieves, to take out any broken fragments, etc., and then they are hand-picked by women. Probably as many as more than 100 women may be employed at this work. They sit at a long bench divided into partitions; near to the front of the partition are openings to the mouths of two sacks, placed underneath. A measure of peas is placed upon the bench, and then with a dexterity rapidly acquired by practice, and with the employment of both hands, the sound peas are drawn into one sack, and those unfit for sale for sowing into another. As a rule, though there may be exceptions, payment is made according to the quantity picked during the day, and the price varies according to the sample. The refuse is not wasted, but is sold on the market as cattle food. Beans of various kinds are similarly treated. Some of the women are permanently employed; others for the season only, and experienced pickers return to this kind of employment winter after winter."

STRING BEANS.

Though this cannot be classed as a staple crop, they can sometimes be run in as a sort of catch crop and, when near a good local market, profitable returns can often be realized. A soil in which almost any other crop has been grown would be all right if it has not been impoverished, in which case the addition of some fertilizer would be necessary. It is best to sow in rows about twenty inches apart, planting the beans about two inches apart in the rows. In a minimum temperature of from 55 to 60 degrees they will grow best. A rise of about 20 degrees by sun heat should be allowed. When the plants are well up it is a good plan to draw the soil up around the neck of each plant so as to give as much support as possible. They require a plentiful supply of water when once well under way and overhead syringing is frequently necessary to keep down red spider, which is one of their most troublesome enemies.

We have often found it necessary to give the plants artificial support, so that they could be syringed without throwing them down too much. For this purpose small tree branches are as convenient as anything we have tried. If these are set among the plants before they are too far advanced in growth the plants will grow up through them and if the twigs are not too large the foliage will almost hide them from view.

Any of the early, quick maturing varieties may be employed. The hardiest one, most suitable for growing when the temperature is apt to run a little low, is Mohawk, but where a temperature as above recommended can be maintained we consider Ne Plus Ultra the most productive.

When the soil is poor the yield can be considerably increased by giving a top dressing with fertilizer or an occasional watering with liquid manure but it is best to delay this application until the first of the beans are well set. I may also add that during the setting period syringing should be withheld as much as possible or, if it must be done at this stage, choose bright days when plenty of air can be put on, so that the moisture will be dried from the flowers as soon as possible, or setting might be considerably retarded.

CLUB ROOT.

Is club root on tomatoes in green-houses the same as the club root caused on other vegetable life by nitro-culture? If so, will it not be a bad thing for growers of tomatoes under glass? Soil from fields where the nitro-culture is used is sure to be put into the houses sooner or later. We have been free from club root, but thousands of dollars loss has been borne by growers in and near Kennett Square, Pa. We do not expect to use the nitro-culture, but if this is any relation to club root on tomatoes, which looks like it, would it not be well to sound a word of warning to growers?

R. B.

I cannot see how the soil taken from fields where the nitro-culture germ is used can in any way affect tomatoes. The bacteria used in the nitro-culture acts only on plants of the leguminosa order, forming nodules on the roots, which act as store houses for nitrogen, and since the tomato is not a leguminous plant the bacteria would have no effect

Danger In cheap seed. Why not get the best?

Kate Lock.

Has Been Grown 48 in. High

Blooms from 5 to 6 in. in diameter with very high centers; stems from 36 to 40 in. Shown at largest exhibitions in Canada and took everything before it. Colors—White, Daybreak and mixed, $2.00 per 1000 seeds. Not less than 1000 seeds sold. No agents. Don't send checks.

on it. Club root in tomatoes is not the work of bacteria, but the work of a microscopic insect belonging to what is commonly known as the eel worm family. The generally accepted theory regarding club root in tomatoes is that it is caused by lack of drainage, sourness, or what might be called an unsanitary condition of the soil.

DREER SEASONABLE SPECIALS

Stokesia Cyanea, the Corn Flower Aster. When making up your planting plans for summer cut flowers you should not overlook this hardy gem. It will please you and prove profitable. The plants we offer are from very strong 3-inch pots which will give excellent returns under ordinary treatment, but if you can take them now and shift them up into larger pots their season of bloom will begin much earlier. $1.00 per doz.; $5.00 per 100; $40.00 per 1000.

The Baby Rambler Rose. Strong one-year-old imported field-grown plants which have recently been potted up into 4-inch pots. $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100.

Dreer's Royal Exhibition Pansies. A fine lot of strong sturdy plants, wintered in cold frames of this famous strain. 75c per 100; $5.00 per 1000. Seed of this strain 50c per trade pkt.; $1.25 per 1/2 oz.; $3.00 per oz.

Myosotis Palustris Semperflorens. (The Everblooming Forget-me-not.) A nice lot of cold frame-grown plants, suitable for 4-inch pots, which, if brought into a cool greenhouse, will furnish readily salable plants for retailing or will quickly produce a profitable crop of flowers for cutting. 50c per doz.; $3.00 per 100.

Rhododendron Everestianum for Easter Flowering. We have a fine lot of this splendid crimped pink variety which can readily be forced for Easter. Elegant plants 18 inches high, bushy and well set with buds, 80c each; $9.00 per doz.; $70.00 per 100.

Dahlia Kriemhilde, the Finest of all Cut Flower Varieties. Perfect in color, free and early, good stems, and the ideal Dahlia as a fine cut flower. Field roots, $1.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100.

The New Paris Daisy, Queen Alexandra. A gem, either for cut flowers or as a pot plant. It bears double, semi-double and single flowers on the same plant. The double flowers resemble an anemone flowered chrysanthemum, but all are handsome. Strong 2 1/4-inch pots ready now, 20c each; $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

Azalea Mollis for Easter Forcing. This hardy azalea is gaining in favor every year. It is profitable stock for the retailers to handle; bushy plants 15 to 18 in. high, full of buds, $4.50 doz.; $35.00 per 100.

Primula Cortusoides Sieboldi. Try a few of these for early flowering: you will be surprised how much attention they will attract. We offer strong corms which, if potted up and placed in a carnation house temperature, will flower in four or five weeks' time. Four colors—pure white, blush, salmon rose and crimson rose with white eye, $1.25 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

The New White Hybrid Perpetual Rose, Frau Karl Druschki. It seems almost incredible that such a fine rose should have been introduced seven years ago and its many good points only now become known. However this may be, the fact remains that this is the first really white hybrid perpetual rose that we have, and furthermore it is a gem in every way, perfect in form, a vigorous grower and remarkably free flowering. Strong two-year-old imported plants, $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100.

The Scott Fern. This is not only the new Boston fern which has come to stay, but a variety which will displace that old favorite. We have a good lot of 2 1/4-in. pots. $2 doz.; $15 100; $125 1000.

The Club's Exhibition.

The regular monthly meeting of the Kentucky Society of Florists was held at the conservatory of Nanz & Neuner, March 7. This meeting had been designated as rose and carnation night and introducers of new varieties all over the country were invited to send samples of their productions and they responded most liberally. A very large crowd was in attendance to inspect them.

J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., sent five varieties of carnations, among them their grand new red, Robert Craig. The Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, sent Cardinal, White Lawson and five standard varieties. H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., sent My Maryland, a fine white. R. Witterstaetter, Cincinnati, O., sent his two new pinks, After Glow and Aristocrat, which is appropriately named. It was the center of attraction during the evening. F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., sent a vase of Victory, Variegated Lawson, White Lawson and Daheim, the latter a fine crimson. John N. May, Summit, N. J., sent The Bride, a last year's white. Baur & Smith, Indianapolis, sent Indianapolis and Flambeau. The Indianapolis Flower & Plant Co. and John Hartje, Indianapolis, sent Candace, a pretty pink. John E. Haines, Bethlehem, Pa., sent a fine new red and Star of Bethlehem, a yellow. W. J. Palmer & Son sent Red Lawson. Davis Bros., Bloomsburg, Pa., sent Crisis, a fine scarlet, and Mary Albert, white. Patten & Co., Tewksbury, Mass., sent Mikado, and Pink Patten. Anders Rasmussen, New Albany, Ind., sent Lawson, Enchantress and Hoosier Maid.

John Breitmeyer's Sons, Detroit, sent the celebrated new rose, La Detroit, a delicate pink of nice shape and magnificent stem. Peter Reinberg, Chicago, sent Sunrise, a novelty here. This is of a bronze shade and the foliage is a very dark red. He also sent Uncle John, a new rose of the most delicate light pink. Chas. Rayner, Anchorage, Ky., sent magnificent flowers of Bride, Ivory, Golden Gate and Bridesmaid.

Jacob Schulz, Louisville, showed a vase of his seedling carnations. Nanz & Neu-ner, Louisville, showed a vase each of mignonette, daisies, forget-me-not, three vases of carnations and fine specimens of the Ivory and Perle roses. Charles W. Reimers, Crescent Hill, Ky., showed some fine mignonette, forget-me-not and a collection of seven varieties of carnations. Leo Zoeller, Louisville, showed three vases of carnations.

Various Notes.

Business the past week has been very good, owing to a great deal of funeral work. Roses continue rather scarce. Carnations are coming in very finely. Some extra Prosperity and Enchantress are to be seen and find a ready sale. Bulbous stock is coming in in large quantities and is a glut on the market.

C. H. Kunzman, of the West End, is sending in some extra fine Prosperity.

Wm. Walker has made a beautiful display in his show window, of azaleas, hyacinths, tulips and some fine vases of Lawson carnation.

The Market.

A continuance of bright weather is causing stock to come in lively. Beauties are of very poor quality but Bride, Chatenay, Gate and Maid are good. Meteor and Perle are fair. Carnations are better than for some time. Enchantress, Lady Bountiful and Lawson are very fine and prices are stiff. Mignonette, heliotrope and sweet peas are coming in larger quantities and are selling well. The demand for violets is healthy and prices good. The quantity of bulbous stock is increasing and the lateness of Easter will be the means of bringing in very nearly all the stock held by local growers and Easter week will find the largest growers without any stock worth speaking of. Azaleas will be in the same condition. Advance orders are being placed by local growers, with outside growers for stock sufficient to fill local orders. Some fine tulips, narcissi, daffodils, Roman and Dutch hyacinths and jonquils are seen. Prices are holding up steadily and demand is good in spite of the Lenten season. Pot plants in endless variety are selling well and the opinion of the older florists is that the amount of business done up to date is in excess of any time during the past eighteen years.

Various Notes.

Your correspondent visited the establishment of E. A. Humfeld and it was well worth the time taken. Mr. Humfeld has about 12,000 feet of glass and every foot of it in use. Three houses are in carnations in fine shape and the rest is devoted to bedding stock and palms. Although only established three years in the present location, the business has increased wonderfully. Alex. Kerr has charge of the greenhouses.

The Kansas City Floral Co. has purchased the establishment of John Schneider, 821 Walnut street, and is refitting it in first-class style. Mr. Schaeffer, the president of the company, is sparing no expense to make it one of the finest stores in the city.

R. S. Brown & Son, of Prospect avenue, are swamped with orders these days. A visit to that establishment found Mr. Bridgeland, the efficient foreman, pushing things along at a lively rate to keep up with their large trade. The Messrs. Brown do an almost exclusive catalogue trade.

Mr. Heite has some very fine seedling carnations. He has been experimenting along that line for some years and expects to put on the market a white and a pink that will have a commercial value.

Some of the finest roses on the market at present are those of Al. Broman, of Independence, which are handled exclusively by Miss Dalley.

Samuel Murray is showing some very fine stock. Mr. Murray reports business as first-class and predicts an unusually brisk trade this spring.

A. F. Barbe, of Elmwood, was among the retailers last week and reports business as first-class. NARCISSUS.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—Wm. Edlefsen says business has been good right along, with plenty of funeral work.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.—Wm. Henry Evans is going ahead with his plans for the erection of a good sized range of greenhouses for cut flowers for wholesale. He already has the material on the ground for six houses.

Your Desire

Is to always have your decorations attractive. RIGHT RIBBONS help wonderfully in attaining this end. The tones are as near nature's colors as human hands can produce them—samples will prove this fact.

SMALL FERNS.

The retail florists who have a trade in fern dishes, report a scarcity of small ferns and other material for filling these receptacles. In the central west it is said that this stock is very hard to find and that large quantities of Asparagus plumosus in from 2-inch to 3-inch pots are being used to make up the deficiency.

SUMMIT, N. J.—John N. May is still in the south, but enjoying somewhat improved health.

CARNATIONS

We offer first-class stock of the finest varieties.

Strong Rooted Cuttings

Variegated Lawson This variety which we are introducing this season we are sure will prove to be the very best variegated sort. Pure ivory white with delicate carmine pencilings. Mr. W. N. Craig, an authority on everything pertaining to horticulture, says that he knows that this variety will out-bloom the favorite, Mrs. M. A. Patten, three to one. It has the Lawson habit and stem, and is bound to give satisfaction. $12 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Red Lawson A bright red sport of Lawson that is bound to be popular, and will be grown where Lawson is popular. $10.00 per 100; $75 per 1000.

Cardinal Bright cardinal, or crimson-scarlet. Won first prize for best 100 scarlet, first prize for best 50 carnations any color, first prize for best 50 scarlet seedlings, Chicago. $12.00 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Fiancee The queen of pink carnations; in a class by itself. Magnificent flowers, strictly fancy in every respect. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

White Lawson We consider this variety, which we introduced last season, the most profitable white carnation ever sent out. We think it will outbloom any other white two to one. It has given great satisfaction. When the flowers are left on the plants until fully developed they are much larger than Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson. We believe this will occupy among white carnations the same place that Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson does among pink carnations. Remember that we are headquarters for it. Splendid stock ready for immediate delivery. $7.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

Fred Burki Recommended as an extra free-blooming white variety and a claimant for popular favor. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Lady Bountiful A magnificent white of last season's introduction. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Daheim Dark crimson. Grand stiff stem. Oalyx never bursts. Free and abundant bloomer, developing very quickly. We consider this the best all-round crimson carnation. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Mrs. M. A. Patten This grand variegated carnation has given splendid satisfaction. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Enchantress Freest blooming, bringing highest market prices. In great demand. $4.00 per 100; $30.00 per 1000.

Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

Prosperity A magnificent fancy carnation. $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

We are now prepared to book orders for 1906 for the Coming Scarlet Victory This is a real bread and butter variety. An early, free and abundant bloomer, with good stem; a magnificent keeper and shipper; flowers of the largest size, commanding the very highest price. This is going to be a money-maker. Orders will be filled in rotation, as received. Delivery beginning December next. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

SWEET PEAS.

After my sweet peas were planted from pots I was taken sick and, not being able to look after them as they ought to have been, they have made a very strong growth from the bottom. I have read in the REVIEW that Mr. Scott says to keep that bottom growth pinched off. Will my peas bloom? If they will, about what time? They are about three and one-half feet high. Now, in speaking about that bottom growth, why would it not be good to plant them deep enough to cover the two lower eyes, or joints, as that is where that growth sprouts from. If those eyes were under the soil would they be apt to sprout? We often read about planting peas outside in a deep trench and as they grew up to hoe the earth up around them. Why not do the same thing inside? I would like to hear what Mr. Scott has to say about it.

G. A. R.

The advice to keep the strong growths which start from the base of the plant pinched was meant for the plants sown in September and expected to flower at Christmas. It is not necessary to do so after New Year's. You will be pretty sure to get a fine crop of flowers for Easter and you can do nothing now but keep them tied up and supplied with water. We can not say without trying how the deep planting would result. It is true our garden sweet peas can and are treated as you say, but I scarcely think it prevents a vigorous bottom growth which is all with them.

There seems a great difference of opinion and method about these peas for a nice winter crop. For Christmas cutting some growers sow in early August and get large growth before the dull weather. They start to flower in November or December and continue for two or three months, and these had no pinching or thinning of any kind. For several years we sowed in September and planted on the edge of a carnation bed at the iron supports of the purlins, letting the first growth be smothered by a vigorous growth from the bottom of the plants. We never picked a pea till the middle of April. This year we picked fine peas at Christmas. I think also that too much root room has something to do with flowering time. Sure it is that we once sowed several rows of peas in a very light house. They were sown October 1 in nine or ten inches of good soil placed on the greenhouse floor. They grew and grew and went up eleven or twelve feet to the roof and did not flower until May, and none too good at that. So from that experience we don't want any more unlimited root room.

W. S.

PACIFIC COAST.

SANTA CRUZ, CAL.—J. P. Parker is building another orchid house, 18x50, and is rapidly adding to his stock of orchids. He finds the San Francisco market as eager as ever for good orchid flowers. He has been quite successful in preventing slugs from getting to the plants by placing rock salt in small shelves surrounding the bench supports and on the sill at the back of the bench.

HANDLING BEDDING STOCK.

An abundance of bright sunshine and high temperature makes the grower begin to get ready to shift a considerable portion of his young, soft-wooded stock out into the open. There is a possibility, of course, that we may yet have a few nights of frost, although the chances are against it in central and southern California. At any rate we will have some warning of it should it happen our way. I have put outside all my achryanthes, alternantheras, lobelias, salvias, gaillardias, heliotropes, asters, cosmos and other stock grown both from seed and cuttings. There is no advantage in keeping them under glass as soon as the warm weather comes, as this class of stock grows so tall and weak that it is not fit for sale. As people in California and the Pacific coast expect to have all such stock permanently planted by the first of April, it is time to harden it for that purpose. It is well to shade for a short time and be especially careful that the plants do not get dry for the first few days at least, as stock of this kind grown under glass makes but a small amount of roots in proportion to the top.

Young carnations intended for retailing should be shifted from the bench, pinched back and planted into 4-inch pots, as they are much easier handled in this way than out of the ground, as we did formerly. Many growers sell quantities from thumb pots but there is no advantage in this, as they can be handled as readily in flats and can be retailed for the same price.

In boxing almost all varieties of annuals I have found the best plan is to fill the flat with about an inch of well rotted manure on the bottom and over this place about one and one-half inches of light soil. This brings out a good, rich color in a few weeks and furnishes a well knitted ball that will cling to the roots of each plant and go a long ways toward giving them a start when replanted in the garden.

Roses that are intended for retailing during the summer and spring should be potted at this time and if they have made any growth it is always well to pinch them back and put in the shade for a few days. The majority of gardeners plant their roses in pots that are too small for the plant. The rose is a heavy feeder and to keep them through our rainless summer the pots should be plunged in the ground deeply. It is surprising how many people leave their garden planting until June or July and it always pays to have a few hundred well grown roses in pots for them to select from.

Pelargoniums are now ready to shift into 4-inch pots and it is perfectly safe to put them in frames outside. Of late years the demand for this beautiful plant has decreased considerably, probably because they belong to the geranium family, to which family Californians have never taken very kindly.

Speaking of shade houses, it is surprising to me that growers do not build more of them. In this climate, when we often have from seven to eight months of dry weather and when it is necessary to do so much artificial watering, it is impossible to overestimate the value of a good lath house. I have visited many of our largest growers and during the summer and fall you will find they have to give more attention to the watering of their hardy outside stock than anything else. As water often comes high here, this is quite an item. It is possible to keep plants in much better salable condition and at the same time use not over one-fourth of the amount of water and not over one-fourth of the amount of time required in the watering, if such stock is protected in a lath house in the spring, summer and fall.

G.

CLEARBROOK, WASH.

George Gibbs has three acres planted with bulbs, including many varieties, and is meeting with great success in his endeavors to put American bulb growing on a commercial basis. He is doing especially well with Lilium candidum and has 45,000 coming on. The weather here is far different from in the east. Roses, daisies and mignonette were in bloom in the garden on Christmas day. Crocus bloomed in late February and in early March the hyacinths and narcissi began. Mr. Gibbs says all Washington grown bulbs flower from two to three weeks earlier than bulbs from Holland. The weather is now ideal, about 70 degrees in the day and not below 40 or 35 degrees at night.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The hot weather of the past ten days has brought an unusual cut of everything and this, as well as the fact that we are now in Lent, has had rather a demoralizing effect on business in general. Funeral trade has been the exception and a goodly number of retailers have had their hands full. Violets are daily becoming scarcer and in another week they will be practically through blooming. There are some good double Marie Louise and Swanley White in town but they do not cut much figure in business. Carnations and roses have dropped fully twenty-five per cent in price during the past ten days and we can look for an avalanche very soon. Daffodils are getting scarcer but Narcissus poeticus is very plentiful. Freesias are gone, likewise tulips and hyacinths. Smilax is scarce and in good demand.

Various Notes.

Miss Wollenberg is now located on Sutter street, near Polk.

T. Duffy, on Golden Gate avenue, one of San Francisco's oldest florists, is making considerable improvement on his premises.

Podesta & Baldocchi deserve considerable praise for their artistic window displays in the Sutter street store. The quality of flowers and decorative plants carried is second to none in town.

A visit to Suto Heights shows elaborate preparations are being made for the replanting of the spring and summer flowering annuals which make this place one of the sights of San Francisco. J. T. Murphy is head gardener, a position he has held for many years.

J. T. Nivens, formerly manager of the Thermal Vale Nurseries, Oakland, is now engaged in landscape gardening in Berkeley.

The Realty Syndicate, of Oakland, is engaged in growing many thousands of young forest and ornamental trees at their nurseries in Piedmont for planting on their various tracts of land which they are improving with the intention of selling at some future time. J. T. Furtado has charge of this branch of their business.

N. Roller has given up the store he recently purchased from Howard Prentice, on Washington street, Oakland, and will devote his time to the wholesale business.

A visit to the greenhouses of E. Lacazette, at Fruitvale, shows an abundance of good healthy stock being cut at present. Mr. Lacazette will replant his carnation houses to roses for the coming season and will give up carnation growing entirely. He is cutting large quantities of Emperor daffodils the past two weeks.

HYACINTHS IN COLD FRAME.

Would it be possible to get hyacinths into bloom for Easter in a cold frame where they will get the sun for four hours a day? I have no room in the greenhouses. They are outdoors and well rooted.
 H. C. O.

Most decidedly you can flower them in a cold frame. I should think that in eastern New Jersey, where your letter is dated, they would be almost in flower by that date in the open ground. The early appearance of the robins, street pianos, muskrats and Dutch bulb salesmen all point to an early spring. Something depends upon how forward the plants are now, but if well rooted they will not want more than ten days in a cold frame and they may need a shading on bright, warm days. We remember an Easter some sixteen years ago about as late as this one and we had to put hyacinths, tulips and narcissi into a cold frame with air and shade to retard them.
 W. S.

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS.

The exports of cut flowers from the United States, all or so nearly all that the others need not be considered, go to Canada. In 1903 we sent out cut flowers valued at $5,290, and in 1904 our exports of cut flowers were valued at $5,076. Practically all the cut flowers imported, too, come from Canada, the only exception of any consequence being the annual cargo of Easter lilies from Bermuda. In 1903 the United States imported cut flowers to the value of $31,577, and in 1904 the aggregate value of cut flower imports was $42,612.

Among carnations they find the greatest call for Enchantress and Mrs. T. W. Lawson. Flamingo has proven to be a good one and they will increase their planting of it the coming season, also a bright red sport of their own which they have tested for the past two years and find very satisfactory.

The Market.

Business has been about up to the average. While nobody is boasting about the many millions he has cleared up, there is no one who has had to make a compromise with his creditors, so we would conclude that business is in what might be called a very healthy condition. We note that carnations have been on the whole more plentiful this season than ever before, and there is a feeling that perhaps the greenhouses are going up faster than the requirements demand; this may or may not be the case, but we note that some very cheap stuff has been sold by our department stores and others that handle cut flowers in large quantities.

The Easter supply of cut flowers seems to be quite a problem to the growers at present, and it is hard to make any reasonable forecast as to what the supply will be. One thing we feel sure of, that roses and carnations will be plentiful. We note one of our largest growers making an effort to get the large growers of Easter lilies together and make a fixed price. But some say that when valley is wholesaled so that the retailer can sell it for ten cents per dozen there is not much hope for the prices being maintained on Easter lilies should the grower get stuck.

Various Notes.

During the week a couple of large funerals have used large quantities of flowers. One procession was headed by three wagons containing the flowers. These wagons belonged to one of our city florists and were placarded on both sides with his name.

A visit during the week to a number of greenhouses in and around the city showed stuff in fine, healthy condition, especially the roses. The roses of the Toronto Floral Co. were never better at this season of the year and promise some very fine stuff between now and Easter. This firm is contemplating putting up more glass the coming season and re-building the present carnation houses. They intend to discontinue growing carnations and grow roses in larger quantities.

W. J. Lawrence's place is in fine condition and, while his roses are somewhat off crop, yet the prospects are favorable. Carnations with him are doing fine, bulbous stock excellent.

The Rose Night.

The club met March 7 and out of consideration for those members who do not smoke it was suggested that smoking be prohibited during the business session. Roses were the subject for discussion and we had a grand display, both from our home growers and abroad. The exhibitors from out of the city were Peter Reinberg, Chicago; John Breitmeyer's Sons, Detroit, and the Washington Floral Co., Washington, Pa. The home exhibitors were Blind Brothers, L. I. Neff, John Wyland, Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co., Mr. Zimmerman, Mr. Jenkinson, A. R. Peacock's gardener, and Mr. Frazier, H. C. Frick's gardener. Schenley park exhibited some fine specimen flowers of cineraria, also some bulbous stock. Taken as a whole the stock was superb and one could hardly make any comparison, although some were disappointed in not getting a chance to see Richmond. The bulb stock was taken up last, as there were three agents of the Dutch bulb growers present and they wanted to be given an opportunity to tell us a few things about bulbs. President Langhans installed a question box, but the time was too short to answer the many questions; they will be given at the next meeting. He also had one of the Helios-Upton registering thermometers in order to let the members examine it. He believes the club should endeavor to educate the members in anything that is new or to their advantage to know.

Various Notes.

There can be no complaint about the first week of Lent only that prices are about as low as one would care to see them go.

We understand a scheme is on foot to start a growers' market in this section, where they can rent stall room and sell their own stock.

The roses sent to the club by outside parties were turned over to Mr. Falconer for use at the Botanical Society which met last Thursday night.

John Orth, of McKeesport, is branching out and will incorporate as the McKeesport Floral Co. They will build two 300-foot houses at once. Hoo-Hoo.

CAPACITY OF BOILER.

I have a return tubular boiler ten feet long and three feet in diameter, with twenty-eight 3-inch tubes. It heats 5,500 feet of glass, 1,650 feet of 4-inch pipe, to 50 degrees at night. Will it heat 2,000 feet more glass, or 450 feet more 4-inch pipe? The boiler is two feet below the level of the ground, using the up-hill system. J. C. F.

The load you propose for your boiler is a little too heavy for it in severe weather. It will undoubtedly handle the additional 450 feet of piping during ordinary weather, but it will give it a severe test to maintain the heat in 2,100 feet of 4-inch pipe during extreme weather. The boiler is capable of carrying about 2,000 feet of radiation and 2,100 feet of 4-inch pipe is equivalent to 2,457 square feet of radiation, an overload of about 460 square feet of radiation. It will be noted from this that the piping you already have is only slightly short of the full capacity of the boiler. L. C. C.

Additional special prizes are offered for competition at the annual exhibition to be held in Boston, March 23 to 26, as follows:

The Fumigating Kind Tobacco Powder

All That Use It Say—"THERE IS ONLY ONE."

MCGEE, GEARY & CO., OF SALEM, MASS., write—"Send a bag of the Fumigating Kind; inquired in Boston for it; found they did not keep it. Said theirs was better, but yours has been recommended to us. Rush it."

WE SAY: Now don't let them fool you—buy direct; you are jobber, retailer and consumer with us; there is no middle profit man on our line. Seedsmen don't like us overmuch.

A FREE trial five-pound bag will cost you nothing more than the express charges on it. The trial bag will prove our assertion that it is the most effective, cleanest and quickest as well as the cheapest (10 cents per 100-foot house) article to fumigate with. All aphids killed in one night—our booklet tells of it; we mail one on request.

PLAN FOR PIPING.

I have a house 18x70 and ten feet to the ridge. The center line of the house is forty-five feet west of the boiler. How shall I pipe this house cheapest and best to maintain 60 degrees under Massachusetts weather conditions? R. S. H.

It is unfortunate that your boiler is located so far from the room you wish to heat. The forty-five feet from the boiler to the entrance of the house is a great factor in the problem. Under good conditions it is not desirable to carry hot water on a gravity system over 100 feet. Here you have to carry the heated water nearly half this distance before using it to warm the greenhouse in question. The whole length of the run in this case is 115 feet. It will undoubtedly be best if it can be so arranged to heat this house with water under pressure. Carry a 2½-inch riser from the boiler under the ridge of the house you wish to heat to the south end, and there divide it with three 2-inch pipes to return in three coils, one under each side bench and one under the center bench. If you use 1½-inch pipe in the returns place five pipes in each side coil and four in the center one, making fourteen pipes in all. By connecting a fifty or sixty-gallon expansion tank with a ¾-inch supply pipe to the main return near the boiler and elevating the tank at least ten feet above the highest point in the flow pipe, you should have a satisfactory system at a minimum of cost for installation. If the forty-five feet of flow necessary to reach the house pass through a shed or room where the heat is not needed, cover this pipe with asbestos and it will save heat. L. C. C.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

The Need for Space.

Until Easter relieves the congestion we are usually very crowded, and particularly so this spring, as Easter is so late. Now, if we can add only ten per cent to our bench capacity it will be a great relief, for it will enable us to give a little more room to all our fast-growing, soft-wooded bedding plants. By the first of April you can trust any cold-blooded plant like carnations in a cold frame. In fact, there is no better place for them, and lots of other things, providing you have mats or shutters for the cold nights.

The Good Old Hotbed.

There is a dislike with many florists for the old-fashioned hotbed. It is labor, but what can you get worth having without labor? The material of the hotbed, after its usefulness is over, if thrown up in a pile and allowed to decompose, is worth to you for material at the potting bench far more than all the labor of making the beds and cost of manure, etc. Some may say "we can't have those hotbeds on our place; they are too unsightly."

There is no unsightliness about them if neatly made. It seems at the writer's age that so simple a thing as making a hotbed should be known to every man who owns a light of glass, yet looking around we see some who do not know. If your subsoil is gravel and you can excavate eighteen inches or two feet without fear of water lying in the pit, then that would be the best method of making a hotbed, because there would be less cooling, but seldom without a drain can we excavate even one foot in the spring without being troubled with water. However, making the beds on the dry surface of the ground will be found quite satisfactory.

You will know the size of the sash and also how many sash you want to put up. Suppose you want twelve sash in a row and three rows, allowing eighteen inches between each run of sash and two feet all around the whole exterior. You can figure this out to a few inches and if you want to be nice and tidy put in some 2x4 posts every three or four feet and two boards high, and all your heating material is inside this enclosure.

The Material for Heat.

The material can be straw manure from the stable and the fresher the better, but not just brought from the stable, dumped into a pile or leveled off and thought to be a hotbed. If you did it that way it would heat most violently for a week or two and then quickly subside. The manure should be turned over at least twice before it is allowed to burn.

Now is the time to add other material to the stable manure. Leaves of last fall can be added, if not too much decayed; and refuse hops, if conveniently procured, are a great thing to heat and will also retain the heat. Half stable manure, one-fourth hops and one-fourth leaves is an ideal mixture, but you can get along with the stable litter alone. Spread six inches of the material evenly over the whole space and tread it well down; another six-inch layer and so on until you have a depth of two feet. However well it is trodden, it will be sure to sink six inches in a few weeks. One important item do not forget: If in spreading these layers of material any of it is the least bit dry, give it a good sprinkling with the hose. The whole mass should be moist.

Size of the Frame.

The frame to hold the sash we make fifteen inches deep in front and eighteen inches at back and of a size to hold four sash, with a rafter for the sash to run on. If you do not put in the rafters you will every now and then have a sash dropping down on your plants. Rest the frames on the manure in their place and see that they don't "wind" and are square. Exercise a mechanic's eye for once. Then we tread in a few more inches of manure in the frames. Use a foot of well trodden down manure in the paths between the frames and all around the outside of the frames. Then lay a foot-board in the paths to walk on.

In two days put in six inches of soil; any old, light soil that has previously been used will do. This is for plunging the plants in. Some might say they plants into them, only never neglect ventilation when the beds are new, for when the sun shines and the bed has a brisk heat there is in a short while such a temperature as only a cast-iron salamander could endure; but that would be neglect, not gardening.

Covers for Cold Nights.

Provide yourself with some means of covering these sash on chilly nights, for the plants are only a few inches from the glass. Double sash is an excellent thing, but shutters, old carpets, or best of all straw mats may be used. The difference between plants plunged and those just stood on the surface is remarkable for robustness and rapid growth. There is also some other influence at work with these plants in a hotbed more than just heat and moisture and that must be the effect of ammonia on the foliage. In fact, so rampant is the growth of some plants that it is a mistake to put them in a hotbed. The petunia is one that makes altogether too much growth.

Since the erection of acres of permanent glass structures in the north for the exclusive use of growing lettuce, cucumbers, etc., in winter and spring, and the shipping of early vegetables from the sunny south, this primitive greenhouse, the hotbed, is not so much seen with our market gardeners, but that interference does not occur with our tender bedding plants and I claim that a greenhouse man who grows a general stock can add largely to his income by having a number of good substantial cold frames and from April 1 to June a good lot of hotbeds. Not only do they considerably add to your growing capacity, but some plants do so very much better in them.

Uses for the Hotbed.

Zonal geraniums, which should now or shortly be shifted in to the 4-inch pots,

(William Anderson, Gardener.)

would for this purpose use tan bark or ashes or saw-dust. Either will do, but the compost you are going to get from these spent hotbeds would not be as good as if you used loam. These beds may heat very strongly for the first four or five days, but in a week you can put we do not put into the hotbeds because they would grow too much to leaf and too little to flower. In early April you can put into the hotbed all other geraniums, the sweet scented varieties, also the variegated and bronze and the useful little Mme. Salleroi, ageratum, lemon verbena, lobelia, common verbenas, and a little later your divided or propagated alternanthera. The latter will make as much growth in three weeks as it will in three months on the benches of any greenhouse. Coleus and achyranthes in 3-inch pots in the hotbeds by the end of April will make far finer and more useful plants for bedding than any greenhouse-grown plants.

Advantage of Hotbeds.

There is a period, in our climate usually from early in May to planting out time, when firing is often neglected. We have dropped it on account of a very warm spell and when it turns cool and rainy we say, "Oh, this won't last. We won't bother to fire up," and during this time there is immense damage done. Petals drop, foliage damps and such plants as coleus, that have been enjoying the artificial heat, just stand still or rather they go back. Now this does not occur with plants in a hotbed, even if the heat is pretty well spent. There is full light, air and some warmth at the roots and they do not feel these cool, damp days.

Another advantage with these plants in the hotbeds and cold frames is that on warm days and nights after the plants are as large as you want them, you can remove the sash entirely and harden off these common plants and prepare them for bedding out better than are those from a greenhouse. Some flowering plants, notably the verbenas, will root through into the soil and grow so fast they will be slow to flower and early in May it may be necessary to lift each plant, rub or cut off the roots which have grown through the pot and replace the plant in the same hole. This is little more labor than moving over plants on the bench, which you would be sure to have to do at least once inside.

Valley for Easter.

There is one important flower, lily of the valley, that requires a good three weeks to fully open and a few days more will be all the better. You do not give them quite as much bottom heat now and they will take as long to develop as they did in January. They should be cut a day or so before sold and if you were a few days early they keep cut finely, so do not be late.

Murillo Tulips.

So much depends on weather, but what ever we get, do not get late with that grandest of all tulips, Murillo. Either in pans or cut it is the Easter tulip. They are in perfection when fully out and turning from white to the lovely blush pink. They are better brought along cool, so bring them in twenty-three or twenty-four days before Easter.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

the market. With the thermometer up in the sixties in the shade and the sun shining brightly the carnation buds fairly burst open and the cut is doubled in spite of everything we can do. If you had enough to supply your trade before, you will be sure to have too many under such weather conditions and it keeps the grower guessing what to do with them. You can not store them long this warm weather, and besides, there are more coming each day. The sun is getting too strong to leave them on the plants after they have opened, so the only thing you can do is to cut every day, just as though you had orders for every bloom that is open, and use on your orders what you need. Put the surplus in as cool a room as you have (a dry cellar is an ideal place) and hold them ready for possible orders. But be careful that you do not send out blooms that have been held too long. You will find that blooms which have been in a cool cellar three or four days will not stand handling like fresh cut stock which has been in water a few hours. You may think they look very fine and large, and so they do, but they are soaked full of water and every little knock causes a bruise and very little handling will knock them to pieces. The difference is that the freshly opened bloom is still growing and producing tissue, while the other is already starting to deteriorate.

Light Shading Necessary.

All the bright colored varieties, and I might say all the colored sorts, will be benefited now by a little shade on the glass, especially Lawson, Enchantress and a few others that bleach easily. You do not need much shade but just enough to break the sun a little. Too much will make your stock soft and inferior. Remember that you are not putting on the shade to benefit the plants, because it is not of the least benefit to them, but rather a detriment. The plants would prefer the full sunshine. So you want to get along with just as little shading as possible, always. A little you must do, however, to save the color in the blooms. This early you should not put on a permanent shade. There may come weeks in a stretch of rainy weather, when you will want all the light you can get, so it is best to put on something that will wash off easily, and put on another coat the next bright spell, until you get bright, warm weather for good.

Don't use a mud shade, as it darkens too much and, if applied several times within a short time, it will form a film on the glass which will have to be scrubbed off except in freezing weather. We use air-slaked lime and put it on with a sprayer. You can do ten houses this way in the same time it would take to paint a strip down each row of glass with a brush, and it is better, too. A little practice will teach you to handle the sprayer so you will get it on about the same all over.

Airing and Spraying.

Give all the air you can but avoid draughts on the plants, as that will cause them to flag. Spray lightly overhead between ten and eleven o'clock each morning and wet down the walks where the sun strikes them. Don't let this spraying be in the form of a syringing, as there is a great difference between the two. It would not be wise to syringe every day, as you would have your plants

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Late Propagation.

While January and February are the two months in which ideal conditions prevail for successful propagation, it is now by no means too late to increase stock of most varieties. I do not wish to be understood as advocating late propagation, but it is often impossible with a limited number of plants to secure the desired amount of cuttings unless at the expense of quality. Under these circumstances there need be no hesitation in the matter, as cuttings taken from the sand during the first half of April, and grown right along, will at lifting time prove very desirable stock.

Even though you may have enough already rooted to meet your needs, an extra thousand or two propagated at this time, being but a short while in the house and requiring little added labor in the field, may be said to cost next to nothing and are very likely to turn out a valuable asset. Having a surplus to select from at housing time you are able to obtain a more even stand of plants, a decided advantage over being obliged to use undersized or ill-shaped specimens, which at best usually drag along like a cow's tail—always behind.

I do not mean to advise growing these in any sense as a catch crop but to use the same care in selection of cuttings, etc., as would be exercised earlier in the season. Experience has taught us that late propagated stock can be handled very nicely by pricking into flats. When ready to plant out, take the flats to the field, cut out the plants, setting immediately. Given a swallow of water, they will not skip a minute.

I have seen cuttings subjected to the heroic treatment of being taken from the sand and at once planted in the field but never saw anything very startling in the way of plants or bloom produced by this method.

Treatment of cuttings in the sand will not materially differ from the usual mode of procedure, although as the season advances due allowance must be made for more rapid evaporation. When inserting in the sand give about double the usual space between rows, also in the row, and if you are not in the habit of trimming the leaves of your cuttings, at least try the plan on your last batch.

Lawson.

Leaving out all theory, it is a matter of fact that there is a limit to the strain that any carnation will stand and American eagerness to get all there is, in the shortest possible time, will prove the rule. Lawson will be no exception. This variety is by no means perfect and its defects will be overcome in the varieties destined to take its place.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

The Spring Cut.

During the last week or two we have been having very spring-like weather and it has had its effect on the stock and wet too much, but hold the nozzle high over the plants and make a fine mist merely to charge the air with moisture. It should show very little water on the plants when you finish.

Water carefully and watch along the edge of the beds, especially on the south side. There is no longer much danger of over-watering, for several reasons. The plants are large and need lots of water to keep them going, while the roots are all through the soil, and together with the sweetening sunshine they will keep the soil from souring. At the same time you do not want to become careless, but try to keep them just well supplied. A severe drying out during such weather as we are having now will soon tell on the quality of your stock.

Feeding.

An occasional dose of liquid manure will help, too, to keep up the quality. A half bushel of cow manure tolerably green to fifty gallons of water is about what you want. If you have a tank and steam pump, as many large growers have, you will find it a less onerous task. Even a hand force-pump will facilitate the work wonderfully. Apply once each week, but do it regularly if you commence it. Otherwise it will be better to put on a mulch of half rotted cow manure about an inch thick.

CARNATION MELODY.

Melody is one of the numerous sports of Mrs. Lawson. It originated in 1903 at the establishment of the late W. C. Hill, at Streator, Ill., and is a pleasing shade of Daybreak pink. It has shown no tendency to revert to the Lawson color and when shown at recent Chicago exhibitions has made a very favorable impression. As with other Lawson sports, the claim is made for this that the flowers are larger, stems longer, blooms earlier and more freely than the original variety. It is a good keeper and shipper and holds its color well. The Hill Floral Co. reports no burst calyxes up to March 15, and the houses were run more often at 52 than 54 degrees. Melody is to be sent out next season by the Hill Floral Co. and the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co. The three principal varieties to be planted this year by the Hill Floral Co. will be Melody, White Lawson and Mrs. Lawson.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

Registering Sports.

Prior to the advent of Lawson, carnation sports were of such rare occurrence that when one did occur, it could be named and claimed by the grower with whom it occurred as his origination, or at least as his exclusive stock.

Since Lawson and its descendants have come into existence, all claims to exclusiveness in the ownership of a sport must be laid aside, as it no longer exists. Much evidence of this fact could be supplied, but it is not necessary to go beyond the White Lawson. With how many growers did this appear in one year? Answer this for yourself and you have the answer to all the others. Today we are having the same thing in Enchantress and M. A. Patten.

The three Lawson sports that are being sold commercially are through the wisdom of the men introducing them being sold exactly for what they are, White Lawson, Red Lawson and Variegated Lawson.

There are true pink Lawsons and light pink Lawsons and Enchantress sports and Patten sports galore to come and it is to be hoped that the growers will consult their own interests and avoid confusion by leaving off all special names and selling them for Pure Pink Lawson and Light Pink Lawson, following with a description of their color, etc.

Two of these light pink Lawsons have been registered through an oversight of "yours truly" and several more are claiming recognition, so that there would be endless confusion in this color alone if they were given independent names with each grower with whom they occur, and on the strength of these facts this society cannot in the future register any sports excepting under a descriptive and uniform name.

The three Lawson sports being offered commercially have also been shown at the meetings of this society and at various club shows. This is not only commercial wisdom on the part of the owners, but the only way in which they can be properly disseminated.

To show them before this society is the one and only way in which to get them before all of the best carnation growers at one time, and next to that, in order to reach a still greater number, the various club shows can be used.

As an illustration, if Smith shows his Light Pink Lawson at Boston next meeting and it strikes me as a good thing, I would buy my cuttings from Smith, no matter if Jones, who claimed to have the same thing, but did not show it, would offer it at half the price asked by Smith. ALBERT M. HERR, Sec'y.

HANDLING CARNATION BLOOMS.

[A paper by John Birnie, read before the New York Florists' Club, March 13, 1905.]

I don't suppose you expected me to read a paper to you tonight, but I was afraid I would be in the same fix as the old Scotch elder, who on one occasion went out with the "boys," got a little "under the weather," and got home just in time for family prayers. He knelt down beside his wife, but nothing being audible, she asked him what was the matter. He replied, "Nothing is the matter with me, but I canna min' a word of my prayers." So, being afraid I would not remember what I wanted to say, I wrote it down.

The question put to me is: "What is the most valuable characteristic of the carnation?" I say without hesitation, its keeping or lasting qualities, for of what value are all its other characteristics, color, fragrance, etc., if it goes to sleep a few hours after leaving the grower's establishment?

That is the specific answer to the question but I do not consider that the answer would be complete without touching briefly on the cause or causes of the carnation going to sleep. Much has been said on this subject, so that it is pretty hard to say anything new. However, the fact remains that some carnations go to sleep, and it is up to those who grow and those who handle the carnation to find out the cause and apply the remedy.

That the grower himself is responsible

Carnation Melody.

(A Daybreak pink sport of Mrs. Lawson.)

in some cases cannot be denied. Over-feeding, especially with chemical manures, will put the carnations to sleep even on the plants. I have seen instances of it. Heavy fumigating has the same effect. Allowing inexperienced help to pick the flowers, improper ventilation, keeping the houses too hot, either night or day, and injudicious watering, are some of the causes that the grower is responsible for.

Of the causes above I think over-feeding is the most common. The keeping qualities are sacrificed in the attempt to get large flowers. Next comes over-heating. I read lately that Enchantress gave the best results at 56 or 57 degrees night temperature! I am sure carnations grown under those conditions must suffer, both in strength of stem and keeping qualities.

Picking the flowers is also an important matter. Some varieties can be left on the plants until fully developed, while others are better when picked before they are quite open. This the grower finds out by studying the varieties he grows. Flowers in which the female organs are abnormally developed are more apt to go to sleep than those without that peculiarity, more especially in fall and spring, when considerable ventilation is necessary, and the pollen is carried around by the wind or by insects.

But the trouble does not all rest with the grower by any means. The commission man has to take his share of the blame. A visit to the average wholesale store in the morning rush hours will give the grower a jar, for there he will see the flowers he has watched over and cared for for months, to the best of his ability, handled in no gentle manner. The flowers that he picked and made haste to get into water, packed as carefully as he could, the boxes put on the express wagon as if they were full of eggs, the expressman told that he must be extremely careful, are in some stores lying on the counters and under the counters in heaps. Sometimes they may lie for hours, and if eventually they are put in water, so many are put in a pot that the flowers have no chance to develop and the limit is reached only when the vase will hold no more stems.

That the carnation will recuperate and improve after being taken from the shipping box goes without saying, a case in point happening in our own club some years ago when we met in Elks' hall. A carnation was sent from near Boston to be judged by our award committee. It was unpacked in the ante-room, taken into the club room and received 85 points. About an hour after one of the committee called the attention of his colleagues to the fact that the flower was better than when it was passed upon. They therefore re-examined it and gave it 87 points. This happening before the advent of the canteen, due weight can be given to the circumstances.

One important matter which does not seem to be fully recognized, either by the grower or commission man, is the fact that some carnations are more delicate than others and require far more care, both in packing and handling. Enchantress is one of these, I believe, if it is properly picked, packed and handled it will stay awake as long as the average carnation. I have kept it in my own sitting-room for ten days in good shape. Marquis was another good flower that had to succumb to rough handling.

The carnation is no doubt the most popular flower in commerce at the present time, and will certainly retain that popularity if due care is given to the handling of it. The grower is constantly improving his methods at great expense to himself, as is shown by the improvement in the carnation in the last fifteen years. Is the distributor improving his methods at the same rate? Is he as particular about ventilating his store as the grower is about ventilating his greenhouse or flower room? Does he put the flowers consigned to him into water as soon as he can after receiving them? Does he pay any attention at all to the temperature of his store? Does he understand that all carnations, in fact, all flowers, require gentle handling? Does he see that his employees handle the flowers as they should be handled? In short, does the average distributor give the same care to the flower as does the average grower? Are we still "looking," as Mr. Simpson said last rose night, "for some Moses to lead us out of the land of Egypt!"

CULTURE FOR RED SPORT.

A. B. Davis & Son, Purcellville, Va., send out the following cultural details:

We have had numerous inquiries from parties who have bought rooted cuttings of Red Sport (of Maceo); and from others interested in the variety, as to the best method of culture for this carnation to insure a full crop of bloom for Christmas.

Fair success may be had with this variety from field-grown plants if housed by July 25, but it takes good cultivation in the field to make large plants by early housing time, but after brought inside it takes hold very quickly.

Red Sport is an ideal carnation for all house culture, which fact we accidentally discovered. We had a batch taken from the sand too late to plant in the field, so they were planted on the bench from thumb pots in June. This batch gave us an average of better than two fine blooms to the plant for Christmas.

Plant in a moderately enriched compost 8x10 inches apart on the bench, and as soon as the plants are making good growth, mulch with a half inch of leaf-mold or well rotted manure.

Keep well stopped back until the first of September, by which time the plants will have made fifteen to twenty-five strong leads, a large proportion of which will bloom around the Christmas holidays and the early winter months. We grow it in a night temperature of 52 degrees. This variety requires 36 inches of head room.

BEST COMMERCIAL SORTS.

I notice in today's REVIEW Mr. Totty's notes entitled "Best Mums in England" and am much interested but would suggest that an even better subject would be the "Best Mums in America." By this I do not mean the best exhibition sorts; not one florist in a hundred exhibits for prizes the blooms he grows. But tell us the best sorts to grow to meet market requirements and don't list a lot of novelties; we cannot afford to stock up on expensive sorts. Tell us what sorts made the most money for the growers for the wholesale market last season. There is another large class of growers who retail their own cut. Most of them do not have "fancy" trade and what they want is the varieties which will pay best. And the head room needed is another important item, for many of us grow our mums in old, low houses.

H. O.

I will do my best to answer H. O., though in so doing I do not suppose that everyone will agree with my list of varieties, nor does it follow as a matter of course that what suits one market will suit all. The kinds here submitted are what seem to be most largely grown for this market (New York), though it does not follow that the kinds most largely grown are the most profitable. On the contrary, a grower who has a new thing or a variety not generally handled is far more likely to make money on his flowers, providing they have merit, than the man who will not touch any but the cheap, standard kinds, and this remark applies equally well to growers of other flowers.

While it is true that Bonnaffon and Appleton are well liked by the wholesale trade, since they can be handled roughly with impunity, one can have too much of even a good thing and the flower buying public are sick and tired of the eternal Bonnaffon long before the mum season ends and gladly turn to something different if it be brought before them, even though the price be higher. In accordance with the request, I have omitted any of the high priced novelties. Duckham and Enguehard were novelties last year, it is true, but they are now so widely distributed that they can be bought as cheaply as any.

While indiscriminate buying of novelties is very poor business policy for a commercial grower, I have noticed for some years that the growers who are wide-awake and take in the shows and having, after due deliberation, made up their mind to "take a flyer" on some particular variety that seemed to suit them, these same growers are the men who have the least to say about there being no money any more in mums.

To return to our list, I have placed the varieties in the order of their flowering and the height to which they attain under ordinary commercial cultivation.

The height of a variety depends a good deal on the conditions under which it is grown. When plants are set very closely in the bench they pull up more and make a longer jointed growth, and also when terminal buds are taken instead of crowns, it means a foot more of growth on the plants, often more. Old dark houses also, owing to the smaller amount of light, cause plants to make a taller growth than they would in a more modern house. Consequently the heights as given are only approximate.

The three colors given represent the bulk of the flowers sold, though some run more or less on odd colors and seem to do well at it. Thus in the bronze section, Kate Broomhead, Donald McLeod and Harrison Dick are ready sellers, as they light up finely. In crimsons, while Shrimpton is most largely grown, there is not so much call any more. H. J. Jones has brought us in good money in this class.

The variety that sold for the highest price in New York last fall was W. Duckham, which wholesaled as high as $9 per dozen. I have been informed that results with commercial growers around Chicago were not so satisfactory because many of them took the late bud instead of the crown. This could easily be remedied another year. All the other varieties are well known and need no comment.

In closing I would suggest to H. O. not to stick too closely to what the other fellow grows. Try a little variety on your own account. If you see a sort being generally admired by the ladies in an exhibition it is reasonably safe to predict that they would buy it quickly enough if they had a chance. I know one grower who is going to grow W. R. Church largely just for that reason, and those growers in particular who retail their own flowers would not be far wrong in following his example.

ISMENE CALATHINA.

Through the REVIEW I would like to hear from some one who has forced Ismene calathina, how it is done and the returns for same. T. N.

The writer has never seen these bulbs grown commercially for cut flowers and is of the opinion that they never will be, although a very interesting and beautiful flower for the private conservatory, as we see the crinums grown and to which they are closely allied. The species calathina flowers in late spring and summer and, therefore, would rest in fall and winter. A medium temperature suits it best and its resting should not be a drying up of the foliage, only less water and cool. Fine flowers as this species throws up, we cannot think it will ever be a commercial flower of any profit. W. S.

E. SUTERMEISTER.

One of the best known of the bulb growers for the Boston market is the genial E. Sutermeister, of Readville. In addition to growing large lots of bulbous stock, Mr. Sutermeister handles quantities of bedding plants, spireas and other pot plants. A perpetual smile seems to lurk on his face and the camera has caught him in a characteristic mood. W. N. C.

UNITE TO DISCIPLINE SHIPPERS.

At a meeting of the New Orleans Horticultural Society a discussion arose as to what redress the receiver of a worthless shipment of cut flowers or plants would have. Most of the florists receive their shipments C. O. D., without the privilege of inspection. In many cases flowers arrive in a damaged or worthless condition, the express company collects the money and the consignee is the loser.

Experience teaches us that when flowers are in proper condition for long distance shipping and care is taken in packing they arrive in good condition and will last in a good refrigerator for several days. Carnations and roses have often been held for a week in salable condition. This proves beyond a doubt that something was wrong with the flowers that arrive in bad condition with the ice compartment intact on arrival. The express company, which usually gets the blame from the shipper, is exonerated as long as a piece of ice arrives in the box. Either the flowers were not long enough in water before shipping or they were too far advanced when cut. The latter seems to be the main trouble and can easily be avoided.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society has taken action on this question.

Bulbous Stock at E. Sutermeister's, Readville, Mass.

A committee of three was appointed, to whom every case is to be submitted when flowers or plants arrive in bad condition. The committee will inspect the shipment and fix the blame, if possible, and will assist the receiver of bad lots to recover his loss, be it partial or total. The names of shippers, good and bad, will be brought before the meeting and their methods discussed. Impartiality and justice are the principles on which the committee will act. A great improvement of conditions, for which there is ample room, will be expected.

A shipper of an honest package cannot reasonably refuse inspection of goods before he demands payment. When American Beauties arrive with a beautiful purplish hue they are ripe for the dump and the shipper of such flowers knew full well how old they were when packed. When the outside petals of Brides and Maids are decayed and the flower opens fully the moment it is lifted from the box, it is time to rush it to some charitable institution as a gift, provided it does not drop before it gets there. We know that with carnations there are a number of circumstances not altogether within the control of the shipper that may cause the flowers to go to sleep; but in many cases loss can be avoided by careful selection for long distance shipping and as far as New Orleans is concerned shippers will have to be very careful in the future if they want to hold and increase their trade in the Crescent City. New Orleans is a large buyer of cut flowers and relies for her supply entirely on the North. Not a rose or carnation is grown in New Orleans. The receiver of a bad lot cannot go to the wholesaler and buy; he is utterly helpless, loses his stock and is unable to supply his trade. These are the conditions that compelled the New Orleans florists to take some action in the matter for mutual information and protection. Personal letters to some of the larger shippers have been fruitful of good results, promises have been made, which, if adhered to by the shippers, are bound to increase their New Orleans trade.

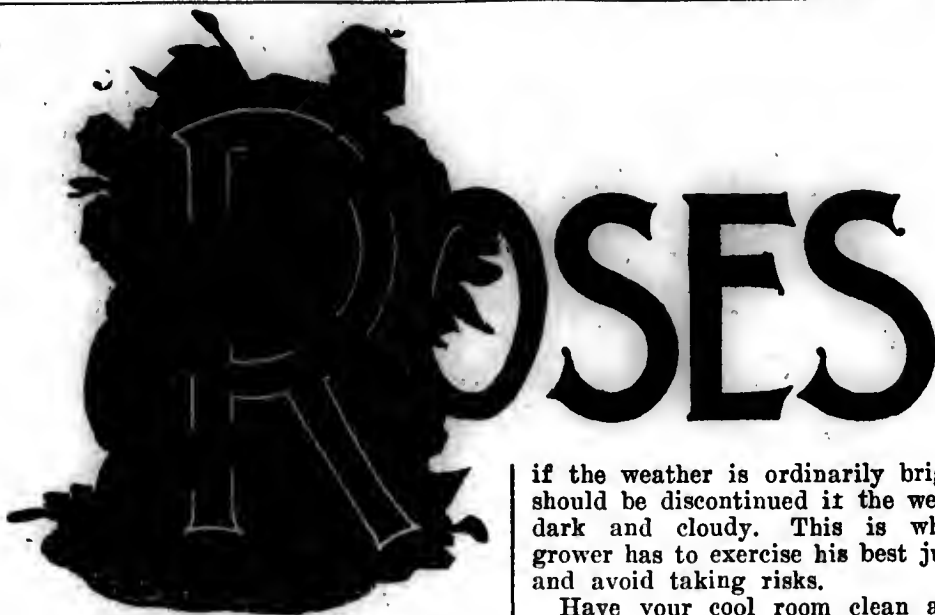

What has been said in regard to flowers holds good for plant shipments. Express rates to extreme distances are high and a lack of judgment on the part of the shipper has cost us many a hard-earned dollar. Many a time we pay expressage at the rate of $4 to $5 per hundred pounds on boxes three times their necessary weight, and for balls of beautiful, rich soil, sawdust and paper, doubling and trebling the original cost of plants. And now the plants themselves! How do they sometimes compare with the high-sounding adjectives of the dealer? It is for such cases that the committee is appointed and no doubt its vigilance will effect an improvement in existing conditions.

[New Orleans, being without a home supply of roses and carnations, is utterly dependent upon the northern wholesalers. If the committee of the Horticultural Society is arbitrary in its action it may place the New Orleans florists in a position where their orders will be ignored, especially in times of scarcity. As a matter of fact, every wholesaler is ready to treat a reasonable customer fairly, but the methods which have been practiced by some buyers (we hope and believe they are not members of the fraternity in good standing there) had some time ago caused certain shippers to decline all New Orleans business except when cash came with the order. Where a buyer refuses a C. O. D. it tends to discredit not only that party but any other buyer in the town who is not well known. The spring is a good time to try on the plan of the society, but it may prove a two-edged sword next fall.—Ed.]

PROPAGATING IN THE OPEN.

Would you please instruct a beginner how to root rose cuttings in the open ground?

G. W. J.

Select a piece of ground which would be shaded during the warmest part of the day. Dig it and pulverize well, then make a narrow trench about seven inches deep and put about one inch of clean sand in the bottom.

Select half-ripened wood from the current year's growth. This can be secured about two or three weeks after the plants have commenced to bloom. The cuttings should be from six inches to eight inches in length, with none of the eyes removed. Place the base of the cutting on the sand and fill up the trench with soil and tread it firmly. These can either be lifted and potted as soon as the roots are formed or be allowed to stand out during the winter and transplanted early in spring.

SEASONABLE NOTES.

Preparing for Easter.

The work of the next few weeks will largely consist of caring for the young stock and preparing for the Easter trade. In order to make as good a showing as possible tying and training should not be neglected and particularly so where Beauties are the crop, as these, if the stems are allowed to become crooked, lose considerably in value and present but a poor appearance, however handsome the bloom may be.

Teas and hybrid teas also require considerable attention now that the spring growth is on. They should be carefully gone over and tied up so that each flower stem and bud may be exposed to the light and sunshine and all laterals removed while they are young and soft and before they have had a chance to destroy the symmetry of the stem or use the nourishment which should be employed for the development of the bud.

One of the most essential features to help make a good Easter showing is proper feeding at the proper time. When the young flower stems are six inches in length and until the buds show color, feeding can be indulged in once a week if the weather is ordinarily bright, but should be discontinued if the weather is dark and cloudy. This is where the grower has to exercise his best judgment and avoid taking risks.

Have your cool room clean and well ventilated and keep it at an even temperature, as it is just as necessary to be careful in this matter, if we wish the stock to ship in good shape, as it is to keep the temperature and ventilation right in the rosehouse if we desire high grade blooms.

Above all make a resolution not to pickle the stock. Easter being late this year, pickled stock will be easily detected as soon as it is unpacked, thus causing disappointment to your customer, discredit to yourself and general all-round trouble. Stock which has been cut forty-eight hours and well handled is about the limit for safety.

THE GARDEN ROSES.

[A paper by Thomas Pewtress, read before the Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club, March 6, 1905.]

The subject that most appeals to my mind at the present time is that of the rose for outdoor cultivation, or what we may call hardy roses. By hardy I mean those varieties that I consider will stand the climate of Canada, in the Province of Quebec, and come through the winter to bloom as only the rose can bloom in the month of June. To take up this subject and treat it as it should be treated would occupy many nights and I will start with only a few simple facts concerning this very large, beautiful, and interesting family.

There are supposed to be about 250 species but they may be brought down to about thirty or forty distinct species. Those I remember most distinctly (and probably some here may share that memory) were the ones that used to grow by the lanes and in the hedge-rows of the Old Country, the soft young shoots of which we boys used to consider a dainty morsel, the Rosa canina, or dog rose. Since then I have spent days making cuttings from this same variety, which I consider the best stock for hardy roses, much better than the seedling brier or Manetti.

The species that interests us most is Rosa centifolia, or the old cabbage rose, from which has sprung so many beautiful varieties, and while on this subject I may say that I am of opinion that a class of roses could be raised from the wild Canadian rose crossed with Rosa spinosissima or Scotch rose, which is very hardy, and by again crossing with any hardy H. P., always using the native rose as seed bearer. A hybrid may be raised that would not require protection in winter. But this subject would have to be taken up and worked out by men with means and time, which the florists and gardeners have not to spare for it.

I will now pass on to the hybrids with which we are familiar. First in point of numbers come the hybrid perpetual flowering, but I should not put that first in importance, as I consider that the new hybrid teas are the roses of the future, for freedom of flowering and beauty of flower. They combine the H. P. and teas and I consider them an improvement on both, having the broad petals of the H. P. and the long bud of the tea, and they open out well in water when cut in the bud state in the morning. This is much in their favor, as roses do not stand the burning heat of a clear Canadian summer day very well. In addition to the H. P. and H. T. there are hybrid China, hybrid Bourbon, hybrid polyantha, hybrid rugosa and, last but not least, the hybrid sweet brier, handed down to us by Lord Penzance.

Of the hybrid perpetuals I consider the following the best for this place, having proved them for two years, and some have been here for ten years and are strong and healthy now and throw off some very fine flowers: Alfred Colomb, Augustine Guinoisseau, Duke of Edinburgh, Gen. Jacqueminot, Henrich Schultheis, Jules Margottin, John Hopper, La France, La France de '89, Frau Karl Druschki, Margaret Dickson, Marie Baumann, Marquis de Castellane, Mrs. John Laing, Prince Camille de Rohan, Reynolds Hole, Ulrich Brunner and Victor Hugo.

Among hybrid teas I choose: Belle Siebrecht, Bessie Brown, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, Mme. Chatenay, Caroline Testout, Sov. du Pres. Carnot, Duchess of Portland, Mildred Grant, Lady Moyra Beauclerc, Antoine Rivoire, Lady Battersea and Marquise Litta.

Of hardy teas and Noisettes I select Anna Ollivier, Catherine Mermet, Francisca Kruger, Hon. Edith Gifford, Jean Ducher, Mme. Hoste, Maman Cochet, L. Ideale and Mme. Pierre Cochet.

The best hybrid Bourbon is Mme. Isaac Pierre and the best hybrid China sorts are Laurette, Messimy and Mme. Eugene Resal. The best polyantha Ramblers are Thalia, Helene, Euphrosne Crimson, Aglaia and Dorothy Perkins. The best polyanthas are Anne Marie de Montravel, Cecile Brunner, Gloire des Polyantha, Mignonette, Perle de Or and Paquerette. The best moss roses are Blanch Moreau, Crested moss and Rosa rugosa. Among crimson and white are Striped Provence and York and Lancaster.

The new single tea roses of Messrs. Dickson are a class by themselves and are very free flowering; some of them are Irish Beauty, Irish Modesty, Irish Pride, Brightness, Star and Glory. They are also the beautiful sweet briars of Lord Penzance.

I know I have omitted a great many good things but the foregoing varieties would make up a very choice selection. As regards culture, I consider roses should have a garden to themselves in any place, large or small. They want a sheltered spot, but not under trees. Any situation that has a wind-break will suit them. They like plenty of air but will not stand the full force of a west wind blowing them and bruising their young shoots. The soil is a very important item in rose culture. If the natural soil is very light I would advise that some very heavy clay loam be well mixed with it. If the light soil can be removed altogether, so much the better, and a compost of loam and rotted manure made to take its place. The ground should be trenched two and a half feet deep and cow manure mixed with the subsoil and then eighteen inches of the compost put over the surface. The autumn is the best time to prepare the ground—and the spring to plant.

While planting have at hand a barrowful of soil well pulverized, make a hole for each plant and use the soil to plant in, taking care the roots do not come in contact with any manure. Many failures result from this cause, as when the plant throws out young roots they strike the manure instead of soil and, the manure being too strong for them, they just die away again. Deep planting should be avoided. This often causes failure. It is better too light than too deep. As far as I have been able to judge, the union of the plant should be about an inch below the surface of the soil. Of course I am speaking of roses on seedling briars or brier cuttings, stock which I consider the best to use. The roots should be cut back with a sharp knife to about nine inches, and bruised or broken roots removed altogether. After planting, the ground round the plants should be made as firm as possible by treading.

Now for pruning. This again requires care, and judgment. If the plant is pruned too hard there will be too many blind shoots robbing the plant and doing no good. If the plant be at all weakly it will require harder pruning, but a vigorous strong plant would possibly do best with lighter treatment. I think pruning should be done as early as possible; that is, as soon as they can possibly be uncovered. If the sap is flowing freely the plant will bleed badly and weaken itself. It is impossible to say exactly when to uncover the roses, but the end of March, a fortnight earlier or later, according to season, is about right.

I will not deal with insect pests, as you are all familiar with them, and the remedies. Our mode of covering for the winter has been to first bank up the plants with six or eight inches of soil, taken from between the rows, then peg down the shoots in a row, or tie the first one to a stake and tie each rose to its neighbor. Then put on a heavy mulch of strawy manure, with the droppings well shaken out of it. This is to prevent heating should the weather turn mild. It is better to uncover as early as possible after the snow goes. Roses will bear 15 to 20 degrees of frost.

THE LATE CHAS. T. SIEBERT.

Charles T. Siebert was born in Pittsburgh, June 28, 1852, and died March 7, 1905. Mr. Siebert, after leaving college, tried the jewelry business, but having a great love for plants and flowers, soon went with Peter Henderson to learn the florists' business. He started in the business for himself early in the seventies on Stanton avenue, Pittsburgh, and continued in the same location until his death. While he made a specialty of carnations, he took great pride in a finely constructed greenhouse and introduced many original ideas, among others the Siebert glazing point, which has been on the market for some years. He had been ailing with a nervous complaint for several years, but probably owing to his bright, cheery disposition, his death was never thought of and came as a shock to his many friends. He left a wife, two sons and one daughter. He left behind him the reputation of a man who never did another an injury, and who was always ready to forgive and forget any one who injured him.

SWEET PEAS DYING.

For several years my sweet and vegetable peas have died more or less in spots after having attained some growth, frequently just about the time they are beginning to bloom or later. Sometimes it may be caused by their being too dry, but not always, as they sometimes die during wet weather or when watered artificially. I try to change their location as much as I can, but this is difficult, as ground is somewhat limited. Do you think the quality or quantity of manure in the soil might have anything to do with it? Is it a good plan to mulch with manure or straw during hot weather? If so please state kind, quantity and time best for application. I shall be grateful for any information you can give me.
S. P. S.

We do not think it has anything to do with the weather. If it had, the trouble would not be in spots. It is more likely a cut worm feeding on the roots or the larvæ of some moth or insect brought there with the manure. The growers of the grandest sweet peas we ever saw prepare the trenches in the fall, working in to the depth of a foot a very liberal allowance of animal manure. Then in the spring the seed is sown just as soon as the surface of the soil in the trench is dry enough. If you want a large and continuous picking of the delicious green peas with your spring lamb, the ground is always well manured.

About the mulching, it is a great help to the sweet pea grower to spread two or three inches of straw litter from the stable over the whole surface between the rows of peas, not that there is much benefit from it as a fertilizer, but it is a mulch, keeps the ground moist and prevents it being trodden into a hard pan when picking the flowers. There is no need of putting this mulch on until just before the first flowers appear.

If it is a cut worm or grubs that eat the roots, then a heavy dressing of slaked lime just after digging may kill them or make them vacate.

MOVING LARGE PALMS.

The conservatories at Lincoln park, Chicago, have for many years been the Mecca for visitors from all over the world. The collection of plants is one of the largest and best in this country. Especially attractive is the natural effect in the large palm house, where a representation of a tropical forest excites much interest.

Many of the large palms in this house, planted thirteen years ago, have grown to enormous size and are grand specimens. They had so approached the glass and become so thick that their quarters were entirely inadequate and gave rise to the consideration of means by which the lives of valuable specimens might be prolonged. Some were removed and others were successfully lowered, thereby gaining headroom.

The accompanying illustrations show the process of moving a great Phoenix reclinata of forty feet spread which stood on a bank five feet above the level of the walk and has been lowered fifteen feet. It was a painstaking, yet simple operation. The first act was to remove about fifty of the enormous leaves, fifteen to twenty feet long from the point where they were severed. A heavy rope was then wound around the great stem just below the leaves and a rope and block attached on each side, the tackle being carried to the heavy iron girders of the roof, so as to partially support the plant. At the other sides two guide ropes were attached.

Then the excavation began. All around the plant a ditch was dug from two to four feet wide, leaving a ball of earth about ten feet in diameter. When this work had progressed to a depth of about eight feet the plant was carefully undermined, being allowed to settle inch by inch from its own weight, as supporting it by the tackle would have been an unnecessary strain on the house, for the ball and plant weighed fully ten tons. The ropes were necessary, however, to avoid all danger of the plant falling over at any stage of the work. Had it been desired to move the plant any distance this would have been the stage of the work at which to have introduced a truck under the ball. In this case, however, the excavation was continued, also the undermining operation, until fifteen feet below the starting point and the plant was in the desired position.

The roots, which had, of course, been severely cut back by the operation, were cleanly trimmed with a sharp pruning shears and as the soil was filled in around the ball a hose was kept running to wash the soil well in around the roots. Head gardener A. P. Frey, under whose supervision the work was done, says that the plant showed very little sign of suffering and that its life is assured for many years to come.

MASSACHUSETTS GARDENERS.

Dr. C. G. Weld, Brookline.

W. C. Rust has some fine ranges of glass on the Weld estate and his stock is in fine condition. In carnations Lawson, Patten and Enchantress are favorites and look well. In the rose house Golden Gate, Bride, Bridesmaid and Wootton are grown. Both Campbell and Princess of Wales violets looked fine. A house of cinerarias and cyclamens arranged for effect made a gorgeous show. The plants showed excellent culture. Hard-wooded plants are grown in quantity. Some fine specimen acacias and ericas were flowering. Others were being held back for the coming show. Quite a number of orchids are grown. A batch of phalænopsis looked especially good and were flowering well, especially Schilleriana.

Geo. F. Fabyan, Brookline.

This is a comparatively new place, but has already achieved some distinction, owing to the remarkably fine cyclamens, calceolarias and other plants shown at the Boston exhibition by the gardener, James Stuart. His stock this year is, if anything, finer than ever. Cyclamens are of great excellence, specimens carrying hundreds of flowers each. Cinerarias are equally good and will be hard to beat at the coming spring show. Calceolarias and pelargoniums are also promising some startling plants. Some fine acacias were noted in bloom, including A. pubescens. In the carnation house Enchantress, Lawson, Flamingo and Sunbird looked well. Batches of cattleyas and other orchids looked extremely well and everything on the place denoted that a good grower was in charge.

Vegetable Forcing.

VEGETABLE forcers will be interested in the note on W. W. Rawson's place in the Boston letter in this issue.

THE Chicago market has been heavily supplied with mushrooms this season and returns have not been satisfactory. Stock put up in fancy packages has fared the best.

AT about this season of the year there generally comes an advance in the value of lettuce in the principal markets. At Chicago the price of leaf lettuce has doubled within a fortnight, due to lighter receipts.

FORCERS of vegetables under glass will gain some idea, from the note on winter market gardening in Texas, published on the Seed Trade pages in this issue, of the competition they are now only beginning to feel, for the industry in the south is in its infancy.

IN the New York market there are gathered vegetables from widely separated sources. For instance, tomatoes are offered from Florida, Cuba, California and local greenhouse grown. The latter fetch from 10c to 30c per pound, as against $1 to $4 per carrier for the outdoor product.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

CHICAGO, March 22.—Head lettuce, $2 to $5 bbl.; leaf lettuce, 35c to 40c; cucumbers, 35c to $1.75 doz.; cauliflower, $2.75 bbl.

BOSTON, March 21.—Tomatoes, 50c to 60c lb.; mushrooms, $1 lb.; radishes, 25c doz. bunches; rhubarb, 5c to 6c lb.; cucumbers, $5 to $10 box; lettuce, 50c to $1.75 box of three doz.

NEW YORK, March 20.—Cucumbers, fancy, $1.25 to $1.50 doz.; head lettuce, 30c to $1.25 doz.; mushrooms, 25c to 65c lb.; radishes, $3 to $4 per 100 bunches; tomatoes, 10c to 30c lb.

CONFINING TOMATO ROOTS.

The consensus of opinion among tomato growers is that a certain confinement of the roots of tomato plants is necessary to the best development of the crop, but quite a diversity of opinion exists regarding the amount of root space required for each plant. Our experience is that with a depth of six inches of soil, in a space twelve inches square, the plants seem to do better than when more or less root space is given. In this they make a good, free growth without any tendency to grossness and reach a height of about six feet without any perceptible weakening of the growth. Six trusses of fruit can usually be set

When we allow more root space than this we find that there is a tendency to grossness of growth, which condition results in more or less trouble with the setting of the fruit, and in the development of windy or hollow fruits. When less root space than above designated is allowed we find that the plants begin to show a weakness of growth after a height of about four feet is reached and although setting freely enough, the fruit never develops so well, nor does it reach the same size as it would when an even strength of growth is maintained.

The growth could of course be assisted by fertilizers, either in the shape of a top dressing or in liquid form, but it is far preferable to have sufficient soil to sustain the plants until all growth is practically made and all fruit set before it is necessary to apply fertilizers in any form. These can be more profitably applied as an assistant to the development of the fruit and the plants will be in better form to utilize them for this purpose than they would be if feeding had been necessary previous to the completion of growth. W. S. CROYDON.

STARTING SWEET POTATOES.

Can sweet potato plants be successfully grown under glass in a greenhouse or is it better to start them outside in an ordinary hotbed? G. W. L.

The conditions in a hotbed are generally more congenial for the starting of the tubers, but they can be successfully started in a greenhouse. To insure success you would need a bottom heat of about 65 degrees and you would require to maintain a moist, humid atmosphere until the sprouts appear, after which more air and a less humid atmosphere will be found better, as a safeguard against the attacks of fungus.

W. S. CROYDON.

HEATING.

I am to build another greenhouse this spring, 20x50 feet. I expect to get a hot water boiler. Would you recommend cast-iron or steel? Soft coal is to be used. How many feet of 4-inch cast-iron pipe will be required to heat this house in weather often below zero?

G. W. K.

Cast-iron boilers are undoubtedly somewhat longer-lived than steel boilers under ordinary greenhouse conditions. There are so many good heating boilers now upon the market that one can hardly give an expression or their comparative merits. You should get a boiler of ample size. One with a capacity for 600 or 800 feet of radiation will be more economical than one too small, particularly with soft coal. You do not state the temperature desired, so I have assumed 68 to 70 degrees is the probable temperature, in which case your house should be provided with seven 4-inch pipes, or 350 feet. I think you could pipe the house more economically with 2-inch gas pipe if new pipe has to be purchased? The first cost of the gas pipe will be slightly less, as it would require 640 feet of 2-inch pipe to give the same results. The fittings and cost of instal-

I think you could pipe the house more economically with 2-inch gas pipe if new pipe has to be purchased. The first cost of the gas pipe will be slightly less, as it would require 640 feet of 2-inch pipe to give the same results. The fittings and cost of installation would make a still greater difference in favor of the small pipe.

FOULS ITS OWN NEST.

Our attention has been attracted to a discussion as to the "most valuable characteristics of a trade paper man." The nature of the comment leads to the belief that the publisher of the paper in which it appeared is ignorant of the fact that one of his accredited representatives has been regularly employed "on the side" as solicitor for a commission florist. To a man up a tree it looks as though a "most valuable characteristic of a trade paper man" were lacking in this instance; the ability to stick to subjects relevant to the trade his journal professes to represent.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The mild and pleasant weather of the past week should have been pleasing to the cut flower trade, but from the reports we hear from the retailers things are very quiet at present in all lines excepting funeral work. The wholesalers, too, have had their troubles. The fine weather has brought out quantities of cut flowers and extremely low prices prevail in roses, carnations and violets. Only the very choice stock is selling and the help at the wholesale houses is kept busy the rest of the day packing the left over stock in the ice boxes. Such were the conditions of the past week.

On Friday, St. Patrick's day, everybody was seen with green carnations. White carnations sold up clean on Friday, Saturday and Sunday and the retailer was busy with the dyeing process in order to have plenty for the demand. The daily press helped things along by making comment on the new green carnations, which they said originated in California and the retailer had all kinds of explanations to make regarding this new and rare variety.

Violets could be had at any price and from the amount seen at the wholesale houses can hardly pay the grower for the labor of picking and bunching them. All varieties of roses except white are too plentiful to sell well. Stock is of fine quality. Beauties, extra long, are enough for the demand and shorts are too many. The carnation is the flower that is a perfect glut. Many thousands were dumped last week and for low prices broke all records. With Easter five weeks off, what will become of the growers if this state of affairs keeps up? Bulb stock is beginning to show signs of running out although there is enough to supply all demands. Harrisii and callas are dragging, the supply greatly exceeding the demand. There are also plenty of tulips, Von Sions and lily of the valley. Common ferns have gone up a little in price. Smilax and other greens remain the same and are plentiful.

Various Notes.

Charles Ford, who represents Herrmann & Co., of New York, called on the trade last week. He has a new side line, New York life insurance.

Jos. Roelker, Jr., of New York, called on the growers the past week talking bulbs.

Mrs. Frank M. Ellis, champion lady florist bowler, wife of one of our commission men, will roll a match game with Miss Birdie Kern, champion lady bowler of the United States. The game will be played on the new alleys at Eighteenth and Olive streets, this week.

Dr. A. S. Halstead was in town Wednesday to preside over the meeting of the Growers' Club, which met on that afternoon at Louisiana Hall.

Charlie Kuehn reports a very good trade in florists' supplies and wire work.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers is making an exceptionally fine display of blooming plants this week.

Ed. Buechel, of the Riessen Floral Co., will next week again assume his duties after fourteen weeks in bed with a broken leg. This will be welcome news to his many friends in the trade.

Slater & Co. have opened a new flower store in the room recently vacated by Brix, at Fourteenth and St. Louis avenues, Mr. Slater being the owner of the building.

The Florists' Club trustees held a meeting with Otto Koenig and Fred Meinhardt last Monday evening at Theo. Miller's store. The talk of the evening was on the fall chrysanthemum show. The hardest problem with them is that of a hall. Work on the preliminary list is progressing.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club will be held on Thursday afternoon, April 13. There will be a talk by growers on Easter stock, so as to give the retailers a line on what they have to sell. At this meeting the new by-laws will be up for adoption. The officers say that all members should be present. The two oldest members of our club promised to be present. They are Carew Sanders and Wm. Schray. They have been confined nearly all winter to their homes, but are now out and enjoying the best of health.

A. Krug, leading florist and landscape gardener at Alton, Ill., has been appointed by the Civic Improvement League of that city to superintend the work of making Alton a beautiful city. Mr. Krug is old and an experienced landscaper and just the man to carry out this undertaking.

C. H. Foreman, one of the leading growers at Louisiana, Mo., spent Tuesday in the city calling on friends and the trade. Mr. Foreman has made application for membership to the St. Louis Florists' Club.

John Breitmeyer's Sons have incorporated with a capital stock of $75,000. The incorporation includes the Breitmeyer properties in Detroit and Mt. Clemens. GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The Market.

Bright weather is the prime factor in making flowers too plentiful at the present time, bringing on azaleas and a large percentage of the lily crop too fast. Yet, at the last minute, as usual, it will be discovered there is plenty when Easter arrives. Although lilies are somewhat plentiful, few go to waste, as the demand for them is steady.

Carnations, unless red and crimson, are plentiful, while roses are really no more than equal to the demand. When we come to violets, we pause; the purple beauty is a drug. Campbells are being sold in several of the largest dry goods stores in town at 5 cents per bunch of twelve, even grocery stores offer them for sale. The dark violet is held at a little higher price, but is not as plentiful as Campbell. Bulb stock moves slowly, the most salable being Romans, indispensable in fine funeral work. Valley also sells well.

Club Officers.

The Florists' Club held a meeting Friday night. An attempt is being made to get up an old time mum show, but meets with too feeble a support to bode well for its success. It is thought better to occasionally have a free show of whatever may be in season at the time at the Board of Trade rooms and invite the public to call.

An attempt to regulate the prices of bedding plants, balcony boxes, hanging baskets, etc., is meeting numerous obstacles. While bedding plants are too cheap, it will be difficult to formulate a list satisfactory to all conflicting interests.

Various Notes.

Nick Freyling is very low with cancer of the stomach.

Wm. Cunningham is much improved since he underwent an operation for appendicitis.

A car-load of glass recently purchased by the boys clubbing together indicates more building this season. G. F. C.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

According to the almanac spring arrived at 12:47 p. m. on Tuesday, and promptly with the advent of the vernal season the market took a relapse. An improvement had been apparent in the later days of last week, Friday bringing a great many orders for thousand lots from those who can use considerable material "at a price." The consequence was that Saturday saw the market well cleaned up and prices somewhat stiffer. Monday brought continued activity. There was no advance in quotations, but the legitimate demand was more nearly equal to supplies and sacrifice sales were less necessary. But Tuesday saw a stagnant market and a pessimistic lot of wholesalers, but the growers should not blame them.

The new crop of Beauties has not yet begun to influence the market. Quotations are, however, lower than recently, with the quality of stock available showing considerable improvement. There continue to be large receipts of very choice Brides and Maids, which clean up, but at what are very reasonable rates in comparison to the quality. The cool weather had an influence in checking the receipts of carnations for a day or two but there have at all times been ample supplies for all save those who wished to buy at 10 cents per bunch. Rates below $1 were accepted for large lots on Tuesday.

There continue to be very large receipts of New York violets. Home-grown singles are approaching the end of their season. The New York stock is still very good in quality, but supply is so much ahead of demand that average returns are very low, as little as 20 cents per hundred having been recently accepted for fresh stock. The receipts on Tuesday are always very light. It is the one day in the week when there is an active call. Bulbous stock is very plentiful, but good colored tulips are selling well. The white stock goes slowly at very low prices. Sweet peas are becoming more abundant and are used in the better class of work. Callas are fine but most Harrisii are not up to the standard quality.

There is an active demand for smilax, because some of the growers have their crops pretty well cut out for the present, but all orders can be met if a little time is given. Asparagus is more plentiful but the bunches of sprays do not long remain in stock.

The New Roses.

Bassett & Washburn are making plans to increase their planting of La Detroit for next season. They have about 1,800 plants this year and Wienhoeber and Samuelson take practically all the cut and like it. A house of 3,500 plants will be grown next year. They have about 9,500 plants of Richmond in 3-inch pots making splendid growth. But they think there is still a field for MacArthur, which is a good shipper and keeper. They will grow quite a little of it next season. Both La Detroit and MacArthur are grafted.

Easter Plants.

Frank Oechslin, who grows more Easter plants than anyone else in the west, thinks bulbous stock will be pretty well out of the way in another three weeks. He has a big lot of other stuff which will be right. Besides the place on West Madison street, at Austin he has eight houses from 10x100 to 20x100 and the pressure for space to spread bedding stock is so great that a new house 8x70 and two 29x105 are contracted to be finished April 1. Lilies ought to be right given 50 to 52 degrees for another month. There are good batches of Crimson Rambler, Baby Rambler and Souper roses. The latter may be a little early but will be fine for baskets. A big lot of azaleas, including many large plants, will be right for Easter. Mr. Oechslin says Van der Cruyssen is the best seller, and he has lots of it, but Prof. Wolters, pink edged white, is a fine sort. Hydrangeas will be especially good but too many of them are large; Mr. Oechslin says the retailers will buy a dozen at a dollar each where they buy one at $2. He has quite a stock of rhododendrons, primulas and Marguerites. Metrosideros he says isn't good; it drops the brush as soon as it gets a little dry. Primula veris, pale yellow, sent out by Dreer a couple of years ago is a fine thing when well flowered.

A Million Valley.

H. N. Bruns forces about a million valley pips each season. While valley has been abundant and cheap for the past two months, he says that is the usual condition at this season and that returns are better than a year ago. There has been little waste in wholesaling and he has flowered 100 per cent of his pips, which isn't always possible. Mr. Bruns has a trade in pips which extends from Pittsburg to San Francisco, from Galveston to Winnipeg. And he got it all by advertising, without a traveler.

Various Notes.

L. Coatsworth, of the Benthey-Coatsworth Co., is, so far as reported, Chicago's only representative for the Boston rose show this week. He left on Monday night, via New Castle.

Kennicott Bros. Co. is receiving blooms of White Argyle carnation from John Didier. They report it a magnificent keeper.

One of E. C. Amling's growers has mushrooms under some of his rose benches, and as South Water street returns have not been satisfactory, Mr. Amling has added mushrooms to his list of specialties.

There is report of another commission house to start shortly.

The prospects are for a very good trade flower show at Handel Hall this afternoon and evening. Especial stress is laid on the point that while the Florists' Club is giving the show, everyone in the trade is expected to visit it, whether a member of the club or not.

H. N. Bruns thinks that, with bulb stock pretty well out of the way, nicely flowered and decorated pans of valley should be especially salable at Easter.

C. Frauenfelder, on West Madison street, says business has slackened only a little since Lent began, not so much as in other years.

Harry Rowe had the St. Patrick's day banquet at the Auditorium again this year. The 500 favors were shamrocks and each guest was provided with a neat box in which to take his plant home.

A. L. Randall Co. reports having already booked many orders for lilies and violets for Easter delivery.

W. E. Lynch, at Hunt's, says Michigan violets are now better sale than the Hudson river stock because of the fragrance.

Mrs. Leonard Kill is at home again after seven weeks in the hospital and Leonard again wears his smile.

W. L. Palinsky says he expects to be right in line with flowering plants at Easter.

Wietor Bros. think there is no red carnation like Chicago, Red Bradt. It gives them strong stems, the lack of which is the variety's greatest weakness with most growers.

George Reinberg never had so heavy or so steady a cut as this year. It is his banner season.

Robert Miller, of Natick, Mass., recently at Butte, Mont., was a visitor homeward bound last Friday.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

Business was very good until the coming in of Lent. Then all dinners ceased; consequently down went the prices. The weather is fine and bringing out stock of all kinds in large quantities. If this weather continues for the next week it will be all off with bulbous stock for Easter. Roses of all kinds are bringing from 4 to 12 cents, carnations 1 and 2 cents. Tulips can be had from $1 to $2 per hundred. Jonquils fetch $1 to $1.50 per hundred. Lilies are $12 per hundred. Violets that are raised in Louisa county, Virginia, are being shipped here in immense quantities. On last Saturday there was shipped into the city 240,000 which flooded the market. They were sold as low as 5 cents per bunch of fifty, by the fakirs. The best only bring from $1 to $2 per thousand and about one-half go to the dump. From present indications lilies will be plentiful for Easter. It seems that all will hit them about right; that is, those that are growing multiflora. As for all other blooming plants, such as azaleas and rhododendrons, they are out of the race.

Club Meeting.

The most successful meeting our local club has ever held occurred March 17, when the election of officers took place. The following were elected: President, W. F. Gude; vice-president, Charles Henlock; secretary, Peter Bissett; treasurer, W. H. Ernest. After the election the secretary, Peter Bissett, was presented with a silver tray from the members of the club as a token of esteem for his faithful service rendered during the last year.

It was carnation night, and quite a surprise to see so many exhibits, which was brought about by the energy of our secretary. The following is a list of exhibits: F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., a vase each of Variegated Lawson, Daheim and White Lawson; John N. May, Summit, N. J., The Bride; J. L. Dillon, Bloomsburg, Pa., Crisis; H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., My Maryland; Guttman & Weber, New York, Victory; W. J. Palmer & Son, Lancaster, N. Y., Red Lawson; A. B. Davis & Son,

After the meeting the exhibits were carefully carried to the store of A. Gude & Bro. and were well advertised in the daily papers and very much admired by the general public.

Considerable business was transacted, principally pertaining to the coming convention. All committees reported progress. By a majority vote, George Cook was recommended to be superintendent of trade exhibits for the coming convention. The club may feel proud of the selection of a man like Mr. Cook, as he has had years of experience and no doubt will make his end a success.

The annual banquet, which takes place the latter part of March, promises to be quite a success. It was decided to hold the banquet during the week that the executive committee holds its annual session here.

The Market.

The decline in prices has continued steadily and the figures quoted on roses today are lower even than at this time last year, with many sales even lower. Fancy Beauties were halved in value in less than a week, the cut being very heavy. Other flowers depreciated in value to an extent only a little less than roses, giving the Greeks an opportunity that was somewhat marred by the weather.

There is some fine stock coming in town. The Leo Niessen Co. is getting superb valley from Carl Jurgens and they also have pretty Cottage Maid tulips. S. S. Pennock has more varieties of orchids. Celogyne cristata and Dendrobium Jamesonii, somewhat resembling Antoine Wintzer, genial, whole souled, enthusiastic in his profession, met the visitors with a cordial welcome and exhibited with modest pride two new houses filled with as pretty a lot of young roses as one could wish to see. "We struck 350,000," he said, "so many that we had to put 100,000 of them four in a pot (3½-inch, I think) until we could get room to pot them singly." They looked very nice in their unusually arranged quarters and will make good stuff after the first batches are moved. The success in propagating has been remarkable, house after house being filled with nice little roses in small pots in all stages from those just started to those ready for shipping.

Mr. Wintzer was literally surrounded by Babies, sweet little things. He is very fond of them and took us to see some shapely little fellows in "sixes".

with blooms a month old that had still fair color. Bridesmaid, Perle des Jardins and many other commercial varieties are grown in quantities sufficient to indicate a wholesale trade. Etoile de France is thought by Mr. Wintzer to be a red that may rival Richmond in the near future. It is a vigorous grower and apparently a free bloomer. The amount of stock already obtained is remarkable, when time and size of plants are considered.

Time to go came entirely too soon, when with kindly inquiries for the ailing Dennis and cordial invitations to return Mr. Wintzer bade his visitors au revoir.

Answers to Correspondents.

Review readers are invited to send any questions relating to culture or marketing of plants and flowers in Philadelphia, to Phil in care of the leading seed or commission houses or the Flower Market. Each question will be submitted to a competent person and answered under number. Correct name and address must always accompany inquiry, but will not be published.

36.—Why do certain commission men and certain carnation companies of Philadelphia supply several of the leading department stores of this city, Reading, Pa., with carnations during the past three months which they sell at 20 cents a dozen, such varieties as Lawson, Fenn, Pond, Queen Louise and Joost, when the retailer is obliged to pay $3 and $4 a hundred for them, or 36 and 48 cents a dozen? Even if he takes 2,000 lots, 50 cents is all that is deducted. Is this fair?

The wholesalers would sell to you at the same price as to department stores were you willing to accept the same quality and class of stock. These sales,

I am convinced that, looking at the question broadly, these cheap sales do not hurt the retailer. Many a person's love for flowers begins with these cheap bunches. When something nice in flowers is wanted the buyer does not go to 37.—Why do certain commission men sign leases for a certain number of years of store rooms and buildings in which retail cut flower stores are started?

I assume this question to mean, "Is it fair for a wholesaler to back a retail store in opposition to some of his customers?" There is no reason why he should not do this, unless it be that he might antagonize his customers. There are cases of wholesalers who have retail departments, notably in New York.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

At last spring is with us. The equinoxial on Sunday and Monday was a fitting climax to the most disagreeable winter of this generation. Peace be to its ashes, and most of us will gladly speed the parting guest. In the memory of the oldest wholesaler nothing like it has ever been endured. Such slaughtering of values, such complete change of public preference, such floods of shipments never were expected or believed possible. Severe cold, overproduction, a wave of economy, intense competition for the growing contingent, all combined to cause an abnormal season.

There can hardly be further recession before Easter. Last week's prices hold and the week opens with a more hopeful condition prevalent, while preparations for Easter's festival go cheerfully on. In fact, the retail stores everywhere already blaze with color and exhale an atmosphere suggestive of the vernal season. All offerings of cut flowers are still abundant and of superb quality. The lateness of Easter and the enormous quantities of flowering plants preclude the possibility of pickling and of anything more than natural in the enhancement of values for the holiday.

Of all the consignments of the present week, orchids alone, especially cattleyas, may be called limited in supply and optimistic as to price. The local

Various Notes.

St. Patrick's day was well celebrated and the florists generally felt its influence, especially in shamrocks and green carnations. Both plants and flowers sold universally and extensively. Bowe disposed of several hundred plants and his experience indicates the general trend. The wholesalers on Thirtieth street declare no more inspiring section of the great parade appeared than the Brooklyn Hibernians led by the genial John Mallon on a snow-white charger.

The street cut flower legion is not only rampant these sunny days, but the peripatetic nurseryman is at many a street corner down-town with a fine display of trees and roses and about everything for the garden. The auction sales are in full blast and the attendance increases. The seedsmen have filled their stores with additional helpers and are working night and day. There are no exceptions. Everybody is busy.

A wonderful sight are the greenhouses of the growers these days before the real time of packing, shipping and delivering begins. To specify would include every plantsman within a radius of fifteen miles of Twenty-eighth street. Ramblers seem to maintain their popularity. The new varieties are making a bid for patronage. Dorothy Perkins is here to stay. A beautiful pink grown by M. H. Walsh, called Wedding Bells, is attracting much attention. Wadley & Smythe have secured the entire stock of it. It is indeed a gem.

It will be Easter, so far as plant selling goes, from now on to April 23. The sale of plants this year will be enormous. The call is more urgent and extensive than ever before.

The retailers for some time have found funeral work the only sure basis of continuous trade. There has been an abundance of it and many very beautiful designs have done credit to the artistic taste of the experts. Last week Siebrecht & Son furnished a very beautiful pall of orchids and Wadley & Smythe two immense standing wreaths seven feet in diameter containing over 5,000 lily of the valley.

Leikens has had some fine decorations and a large dinner trade during the past month and is greatly pleased with his first season in the metropolis.

The flower market is expected to open April 1 and the lease will probably be completed, Mr. Birnie says, during the present week.

Louis Siebrecht, of Queens, is reported very ill.

The ribbon men are very busy with Easter novelties. Rodh, Schloss Bros. and Lion & Wertheimer all announce a very successful season. An orchid ribbon just introduced by Lion & Wertheimer is especially popular.

Galax is scarce, as well as wild smilax. Prosperity seems to abound with all the "green goods" men.

Quite a little interest is already manifested as to the summer outing of the club. President Traendly has again donated $25 for the lady bowlers, B. Suzuki $10 worth of Japanese novelties, L. B. Craw his usual generous offering and John Birnie a gold-headed cane for his special care, the press bowlers. Holt gives a rubber coat for a bowling prize and Theo. Lang a ball and bag. Kessler, Guttman, Fenrich, Mansfield, Ford Bros. and Will Siebrecht each donate a "V" to the fund, so that already about $100 is available in behalf of athletics.

John Seligman is established in the wholesale cut flower business at 56 West Twenty-sixth street. In many of its departments he has combined an experience of twenty years. He is popular, earnest and highly esteemed and deserves success.

Walter Reimels, Jr., has fully recovered and is again on deck at the Coogan building.

Frank Good, of Bowe's force, was called to Boston Monday on account of the dangerous illness of his father.

Bowling.

About all that was left of John Birnie's army at midnight on Monday was a memory of better days. The match between Hoboken and New York ended with a majority of 465 pins in favor of New York. Phil Kessler gave a Waterman fountain pen to the high score record and Theo. Lang won it with a total of 234.

On Friday evening at Newark the Madison team will take its medicine and then there will be nothing left to conquer except Philadelphia.

The Market.

Conditions are somewhat improved from our last report. Prices are lower in most cases, owing to the increased quantity being marketed, but as a rule goods have cleared out remarkably well for the Lenten season. Roses are more abundant and poorer grades inclined to be "druggy." Top quality Brides and Maids have dropped to $12. Those selling at $4 to $6 are in the best demand. Some very fine hybrids have been coming in of late from several growers. In addition to Brunners, some extra good Jacqs., Laings and Luizets are noted. Prices vary all the way from $5 to $30 according to quality.

Carnations are very abundant and selling lower. Mrs. Patten brings extra good prices, selling higher than Enchantress. Quite a number of Lawsons are coming in off color. Shading will be needed for this and Enchantress now as our days become hotter. Violets are still quite plentiful, although singles are easing off. Growers of good stock secure 50 cents readily. Callas and Easter lilies are both abundant. Sweet peas are extra fine and sell well. Bulbous stock is abundant but sells better than for some years.

Horticultural Society.

A discussion on vegetables closed the lecture season at Horticultural Hall on March 18. W. W. Rawson opened the discussion with a very interesting paper. He stated that over 1,700 vegetable growers ship their production to the Boston market, which is one of the most critical in the country. An animated discussion followed the reading of Mr. Rawson's paper, in which a number of prominent growers took part.

The star feature of the spring exhibition and rose show is undoubtedly M. H. Walsh's wonderful display of Rambler and other roses. Many of these are in tubs and seven to eight feet high. Such a collection has assuredly never been seen before at any show in America. Waban Conservatories, W. H. Elliott, Briarcliff Greenhouses and other prominent growers compete in the rose classes. Exhibitors in the numerous other plant and cut flower classes include Lager & Hurrell, Julius Roehrs, Colonel C. Pfaff, Geo. F. Fabyan, E. J. Mitton, Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Bussey Institution, E. A. Clarke, J. L. Ames estate, Wm. Nicholson, Patten & Co. and numerous others. A full illustrated report will appear in next week's REVIEW.

Florists' Club.

Some twenty-five members of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club made a postponed trip to Arlington on March 18 to inspect the vegetable houses of Warren W. Rawson. The party was met on arrival by Mr. Rawson, who conducted them over his extensive establishment. Everything in the houses was found in fine condition and the visitors marvelled at the magnitude of the vegetable growing industry as illustrated by one of the many plants located in Arlington. The two principal crops grown are cucumbers and lettuce. The strain of the former as grown here is admittedly without superior. The largest of the cucumber houses is 50x400, an adjoining one being 50x350, and all the remaining ones of large size. Extra large sized glass, 20x30, is used in the cucumber houses. Mr. Rawson stated that returns from his largest cucumber house have been as much as $10,000 in a season. Hives of bees are placed in the house at intervals to fertilize the flowers.

Many thousands of dozens of lettuce were seen in various stages, all being a selected strain of Tennis Ball. Some 1,200 hotbed sashes are also filled with them. In addition to cucumbers and lettuce, quantities of radishes, parsley and beets were noted. Heating for the vegetable houses is wholly by steam and water is warmed in the winter season ere being applied to the vegetable crops.

In addition to vegetables, numerous houses are filled with bedding plants, palms, ferns, Easter lilies, spiraeas and other plants. A large proportion of these are handled at the store in Faneuil Hall Square, Boston, while a retail flower store for handling most of the cut flowers is located near the greenhouses, a large business being done in funeral and other classes of work.

Those interested in live stock had an opportunity of inspecting 700 hogs of the Yorkshire breed. Some 3,000 more are kept at a farm in New Hampshire. Twenty-five splendid horses are kept to do the necessary teaming, ploughing, etc. Outside of the greenhouses 100 acres are planted to vegetable crops in Arlington. At West Bedford, Mass., sixty acres additional are planted and Mr. Rawson has several additional ones in Massachusetts and New Hampshire, all of which would go to prove that his various big enterprises show him to be a genuine hustling Yankee.

William H. Elliott, the well known Brighton rose grower was the speaker at a largely attended club meeting on March 21. Mr. Elliott described some of his experiences in a recent West Indian trip made in company with N. F. McCarthy. Several new members were elected and the meeting was an excellent one in every respect.

Various Notes.

Jos. Tailby, of Wellesley, is shipping in excellent Spanish iris, anemones and ranunculi to the Music Hall market.

Sidney Hoffmann has opened the store recently bought from Mrs. Sutherland on Bromfield street, after a thorough overhauling, and is doing a fine business there.

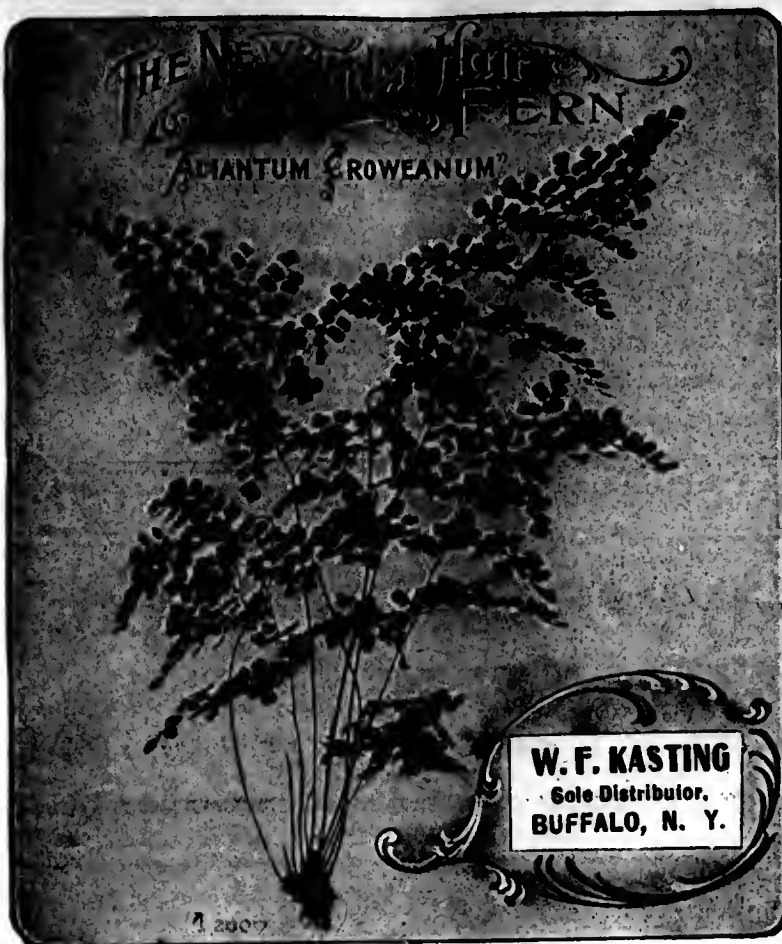

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club has received invitations to visit the well known pot factory of A. H. Hews & Co., in Cambridge and the establishment of E. N. Peirce & Co., Waltham, Mass.

Jeremiah Horrigan, of East Foxboro, died on March 17 of cancer of the stomach, after a long illness. Mr. Horrigan came to America from Ireland about fifty years ago. During a large portion of that time he worked on private places in Brookline and elsewhere. Twenty years ago he settled in East Foxboro and established what proved to be a flourishing florists' business, violets being his great specialty. In the culture of these he was very successful. Mr. Horrigan's widow and two sons survive him. Funeral services were held in Brookline on March 20, a delegation being present from the Park street market, at which he was a stallholder. A handsome floral souvenir came from his market confreres, who regret the passing of an honorable, well spent life.

W. W. Rawson says electric light will forward crops of lettuce and cucumbers about fifteen per cent and make them of better quality, more especially the cucumbers.

H. A. Stevens wears a pleasant smile these days. Mushrooms are selling readily at $1 per pound wholesale and as he has a grand lot of them in bearing of the pure culture brand, with others still to come, he naturally feels happy.

Carbone, on Boylston street, is showing some finely flowered tree peonies. He has some handsome specimens of the bright yellow Ghent azalea, altaclerensis, which sell well. He had a very pretty if deceptive window effect of Tulip La

At Half Price

Read The Reasons Given

Natural Business Laws justify higher prices on Novelties than stock in normal demand and supply can command.

An event unusual is that of a meritorious novelty—such as appeals sensibly to all growers of judgment—offered below half its normal price. Nevertheless, as the full time and attention of the introducer are now fully demanded with other lines of his business, in planning to directly close out the limited balance of the originally grown stock of it is now on sale at less than half price. As a standard novelty the sterling values of this fern develop more and more daily, hence this offering is no reflection on its true merits.

The following prices tell their own story:

Strong plants from 3-inch pots, $2.50 per dozen: $15.00 per 100: $125.00 per 1000. 25 plants at 100 rate: 250 at 1000 rate $100.00 per 1000 in 5000 lots.

In order to insure orders being filled, would-be buyers need to speak quickly.

McMulkin had a handsome white window the past week, all seasonable flowers and plants of that color being used. Gros Colmar grapes in handsome clusters were hung here and there.

Peirce & Son, at their big Waverly establishment, have a house 300 feet long of Enchantress carnation, which is a glorious sight at present. Another house containing 25,000 Lilium longiflorum in 6-inch pots at just the right Easter stage is as near perfection as possible. As many more are to be seen in the other houses.

J. A. Pettigrew read a paper on March 17 before the North Shore Horticultural Society at Manchester, on "Village and Wayside Improvement."

Geo. E. Fisher is with Geo. Patten, of Lowell, and not Patten & Co., as stated in a recent issue. The latter firm employs no salesmen.

James Wheeler was unable to preside at the club meeting on March 21, owing to his wife's illness. She underwent a rather critical operation on the previous day, but we are pleased to learn is progressing favorably.

BUFFALO.

Current Comment.

Winter not only lingers in the lap of spring, but he has taken a fresh "bolt on her" and is giving gentle spring a most amorous squeeze. This retards business somewhat at this time of the year. But let us have the wintry blasts now and balmy spring in April, especially that week beginning April 11, for on that week occurs the Sweeny flower show. Remember that, Buffalo and vicinity growers! The schedule of premiums is made especially to suit the commercial florist and the plants he grows. There is a prize for everybody and they are liberal and paid in cash the last day of the exhibition. We must look upon this also as a most excellent free advertising opportunity. Fifty thousand people will see your products and if your Rambler exhibit is the prize-taker the people will say, "Look. Mr. Porous Potts has the best roses. We will go to him for our Easter plants," and so on in all the Easter favorites.

Buffalo is not well off for private establishments, yet the few will contribute largely to the best of the displays. Mr. Fitzwilliams, gardener to Mrs. G. H. Lewis; T. Winneman, gardener to Geo. Urban, Jr., and Charles Sandeford, gardener to J. J. Albright, all have made special preparations. We called on Mr. Sandeford a few days ago, and every florist visiting Buffalo should give him a call, for never anywhere have I seen four small houses so gay with blossoms. From the orchid down to the modest baby primrose all is perfection. Gardenias are loaded with buds and flowers, carnations, roses, lilies and everything else desirable at this season, not blocks of plants, but every one a specimen.

I hear that James Buxton, for many years in business on Niagara street, is selling out and expects to return to his native land, England, to spend the evening of his life.

A few days ago we were more than pleased to receive a call from David Campbell, the park superintendent of the progressive city of Syracuse. Syracuse is among the few cities of the country which has a practical landscape gardener, as well as an all-round gardener, in charge of her parks. Mr. Campbell is all of this. How fortunate for Syracuse! Long may Mr. Campbell reign over his charge undisturbed by the green eyes and foul designs of the politicians.
W. S.

TYLER, TEX.—Up to Christmas Mrs. Frank Hewitt, who has a nice business, cut roses in her garden, but as late as February 13 every plant was weighted down by a coating of ice.

PEORIA, ILL.—The green carnations which Geo. A. Kuhl showed for St. Patrick's day received nearly a column of space in a local paper, which went to the trouble of interviewing nearly every florist in town to prove that green flowers didn't grow so.

CAMDEN, N. J.—Wm. Vogt, Jr., 120 North Fourth street, made a funeral piece March 15 for a stranger who gave him a check for $18 which was valueless. As he received no change it does not appear that the swindler profited by the florist's loss.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

A decided change in weather conditions has come to the relief of florists in this section. Two weeks ago it was cold and stormy. At this writing, March 18, it is as balmy as a day in June, the thermometer registering 70 degrees in the shade. There has been a great influx of stock of all kinds. Roses, which were very scarce two weeks ago and brought 10 cents for first grade, have taken a tumble and can be had at prices to suit the purchaser. Carnations are a real glut, many being sold for $10 to $15 per thousand. Bulbous stock is extra fine, going at ruinous prices. Sweet peas, valley and mignonette are plentiful.

Various Notes.

A visit to Adam Graham & Son, opposite Lakeview cemetery, found everything looking tip top. Roses are off crop but breaking nicely for a heavy spring cut. Carnations are extra fine, the benches being a mass of bud and bloom. Even with this heavy crop they are always cut close to meet the demand. Violets were superb, being perfectly healthy and in full crop. Princess of Wales, with stems a foot long and a mat of bud and bloom. Lilies look just right and are a clean, healthy lot. Azaleas are being retarded for Easter. Ramblers and H. P. roses are breaking nicely. The two new houses were completed late last fall and are being used for spring stock of all kinds. Next season many alterations are contemplated. The old range of houses will give way to a more pretentious structure of a modern character.

St. Patrick's day created a big demand for white carnations which were dyed green for the occasion. They sold like the veritable hot cakes. Shamrocks made their appearance in many of the retail stores, the sales being very satisfactory.

The many times millionaire, Andrew Carnegie, was a visitor here for several days, being a witness at the famous Chadwick trial. Many receptions and banquets were held in his honor, which called for decorations.

Ed. Holland, for many years with the Essex Greenhouses, has left for parts unknown.

The J. M. Gasser Co. is cutting very fine roses of good quality and color. Mr. Gasser at present is sojourning in a more agreeable climate.

James Eadie is cutting Beauties of fine quality. FOREST CITY.

CUTTING TULIPS.

Are tulip bulbs, blooming in the spring out of doors in a bed, injured by cutting off the blooms, especially when they are cut off right down to the ground?

W. H. S.

Most decidedly the bulbs are "injured." How can they be otherwise? For a month after blooming the leaves are helping to form the embryo flower for another year and if you denude the growing bulb of its leaves you suddenly arrest the forming of next year's bloom and you must expect only a feeble growth and poor flower, if any at all. If you want the best results, cut the bloom directly the petals begin to drop, but do not disturb the foliage until it has naturally ripened and withered. If it is the

J. O.

You will find in any Holland nurseryman's catalogue a list of the best forcing rhododendrons. Avoid too great a variety. Here are a few we know to be very desirable: Alba superba, white; Boule de Nieve, white; John Waterer, crimson; Alexander Adie, cherry red; Kate Waterer, rose; Mrs. Holford, salmon; Vesuvius, fine red; Michael Waterer, wine red. NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., E. W. Kirkpatrick, McKinney, Tex.; Vice-Pres., C. L. Watrous, Des Moines; Sec'y Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 29th annual convention will be held at West Baden, Ind., June, 1905.

At Mechanicsville, Ia., H. F. Colver and James Graham will establish a large nursery.

D. S. LAKE, Shenandoah, Ia., reports an unusually heavy sale on apple seedlings. They are putting up 35,000 to 40,000 apple grafts a day this season.

MRS. P. J. PETERSON, Chicago, is a member of the committee of the Illinois Federated Women's Club which is pushing the forestry bills before the state legislature.

KLEHMS' NURSERY, Arlington Heights, Ill., report prospects for a big spring season. They make a specialty of landscape work and have a number of large jobs of a public or semi-public character.

REPORTS from southern nurserymen indicate that early accounts of the damage to peach buds by the cold winter are not greatly overdrawn. In Florida the orange crop was cut, but the trees did not suffer severely.

An elaborate program is in course of preparation for the meeting of the American Association of Nurserymen at West Baden, Ind., in June. Among those who have promised addresses are C. J. Maloy, G. L. Taber, Prof. Geo. T. Moore, Howard A. Chase, J. C. Hale, H. L. Bird and others.

THE florist who starts out to establish a trade in nursery stock will make no greater mistake than to go to the cheapest source of supply for the stock to fill his orders. Say that you get a dollar for planting a shrub; you can buy it for 10 cents, but you will do better to pay two or three times as much and get three or four times as good a plant.

EVERY now and then some nurseryman emits a "wail" because the low price competitors are cutting into his trade. There are "price" houses and "quality" houses in every line and the cheap nursery stock is no more to be feared by the dealer in good stock than is the "price" house to be feared by the dealers in good merchandise in any other branch of business.

SUE ON EXCHANGE DEAL.

Suit was filed in the district court at Salt Lake City, March 11, by Harness, Dix & Co. against the Stark Bros. Nurseries & Orchards Co., to recover $404.46 alleged to be the balance due on a contract in relation to the sale and exchange of certain fruit trees between the parties to the action. Plaintiff alleges that it agreed with defendant to furnish to defendant a car-load of pear trees in exchange for a car-load of apple trees. The pear trees were shipped all right but instead of defendant shipping plaintiff a car-load of apple trees it is alleged it only sent a part of a car-load. Out of the total number shipped plaintiff alleges that 1,202 were diseased and of no value. Defendant has ever since refused to make good the balance of the trees, hence judgment is asked for their value.

AMERICAN APPLES IN ENGLAND.

Some interesting information relative to American apples in England appears in a report made by United States Consul Albert W. Swalm, of Southampton, England, dated January 25, 1905. He states that the reports from local markets as to the condition of the pack of American apples put on the English market is exceedingly creditable to the packers, and that it is seldom that the standard varieties popular in the English market have turned out so much in favor and to the taste of the buyers, the fruit being of that firm mold and solid condition generally required in the English market.

In 1903 the enormous amount of 11,000,000 bushels of American and Canadian apples were sold in the English market, and from present appearances that record will be nearly if not quite equaled from the crop of 1904.

DISTANCE TO PLANT.

I have a customer who wants me to plant a fruit garden this spring. How far apart should apple, peach, pear and cherry trees be planted, also grapes, currants, raspberries, blackberries and gooseberries? I have planted a good many geraniums in my time but the nursery line is new to me. H. O.

Apple trees of standard varieties would best be set thirty feet apart each way. The cherry and pear trees will need twenty feet each way, while peaches and plums may be set sixteen feet. The grapes should have seven or eight feet and if more than one row is planted make the rows ten feet apart. Raspberries and blackberries will do at three feet apart, but currants and gooseberries should have a little more space, say four feet. If you can spare the space make liberal allowance between the rows. A fruit garden with grass walks is a very attractive spot, but of course a space around the plants must be kept cultivated. T. S.

TULIPS FOR PANS.

What are the best varieties of double and single tulips for growing in pans?
J. O.

The varieties we grow for pans are those we grow for cut flowers. In single varieties La Reine is all we want in white. When out a few days it assumes a pink shading. Vermilion Brilliant is the best of all scarlet tulips, but expensive, and so we depend mostly on Waterloo. For pink Rose Grisdelin is all you want. Mon Tresor, Chrysolora and Yellow Prince are all fine yellows but we believe Chrysolora slightly the best for very early forcing, but Yellow Prince is the yellow mostly grown, and it is fine. Proserpine, sometimes called queen of the tulips, is a grand flower, excellent for forcing, carmine rose in color. Keizerkroon forces well and is red and yellow, very showy. Distinct colors sell best. If you want a variegated flower of great size and substance try a few Joost Von Vondel.

In double tulips we have found only a few varieties profitable and above all desirable varieties is the glorious Murillo, white turning later to a satiny rose, nothing finer in all tulips. Tournesol, red and yellow, and Tournesol Yellow, are white turning later to a satiny rose, both fine. Salvator Rose, white and rose; Imperador rubrorum, scarlet, and Couronne des Roses, rose and white, are all fine tulips, but of all the double tulips you force, let three-quarters of them be the useful and beautiful Murillo.

Seed Trade News.

Pres., C. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 23rd annual meeting will be held on the St. Lawrence, June, 1906.

SALVIA splendens is in hiding where nobody is able to find it.

EVEN the flat varieties of onion seed are scarce. That this would ever happen was not thought to be among the possibilities.

At Chicago all indications point to an early spring. This will be a novelty of considerable value to planters in this section.

THE seed jobbers report trade exceedingly brisk the past week. The retail trade must be accordingly satisfactory as there the final outlet is found.

ONION sets are reported to be pretty well cleaned up and there is yet a normal season of at least four weeks for the jobber to dispose of quantities.

It is about as hard to get some varieties of sweet corn this year as it was last. Somebody missed connections when all varieties were reported plentiful.

It is probably a safe assertion that there never was a year like this for onion seed. California growers are reported cleaned out on globe varieties.

W. R. GIBSON, melon grower at Las Animas, Colo., is advertising in farm papers a surplus of Rocky Ford canteloupes at a little more than half catalogue prices.

E. D. ADAMS, Wethersfield, Conn., died March 10 of Bright's disease. He had been in the seed trade more than a third of a century, with Comstock, Ferre & Co., and was secretary and treasurer of that corporation at the time of his death.

REPORTS from Nebraska indicate that the condition of seed corn in almost all parts of that state is the very best. A very long, warm, dry fall was experienced last year which permitted the corn to ripen thoroughly and to dry out well before cold weather set in. Germination tests are very satisfactory.

THE U. S. Department of Agriculture has just issued as Bulletin No. 66, Bureau of Plant Industry, a volume of 333 pages containing a list of the 4,396 varieties of seeds and plants imported by the Office of Seed and Plant Introduction and Distribution from September, 1900, to December, 1903. The list contains everything from a Russian radish to a Japanese juncus and an Egyptian sausage tree. These have in most instances been distributed to competent experimenters and many will no doubt find their way into the trade. Brief descriptions of many varieties are given in the present volume.

DEATH OF J. I. REYNOLDS.

J. I. Reynolds, for thirty-three years in the grain and seed business in Kansas City, died March 13 of Bright's disease. Mr. Reynolds was born at West Liberty, O., April 26, 1846. At the age of sixteen he entered upon a business career in the seed establishment of an uncle.

Radishes mature within an average of thirty-five days and three crops a season may be grown. Twenty-eight sorts were tested, plots of a tenth of an acre being used, planted December 10 with seed at the rate of eight pounds per acre. The largest yield at twelve to sixteen radishes to the bunch, was Market Gardeners' Long Scarlet, which gave 183 bunches for each 100-foot row. Early Short Top Long Scarlet gave 180 bunches, California White Mammoth gave 150 and Round Scarlet Chinese 140. Scarlet Turnip White Tipped, with 106 bunches, was one of the most profitable sorts. Seeds of all were from the Plant Seed Co. Early Round Dark Red from Maule gave 110 bunches.

The lettuce test was not satisfactory because of lack of water. Planted December 11 Grand Rapids, from the Plant Seed Co., and Early Prize Head, from Wm. Henry Maule, were ready for market February 15, Tennis Ball, from the Plant Seed Co., March 4, and sixteen other varieties a week or ten days later. Of Maule's Improved Hanson 100 per cent were marketable.

Seedsmen who wish copies of the bulletin can get them by addressing Texas Agricultural Experiment Stations, College Station, Texas, and asking for Bulletin No. 77.

OMAHA.

According to a statement issued by Mrs. K. Donaghue, about March 1 Alfred Donaghue, Jr., abandoned his business, leaving considerable indebtedness. The fixtures and stock on hand had been mortgaged February 11 for $500, to J. A. Tuthill, who states that he will immediately foreclose. For the protection of her interests Mrs. Donaghue has commenced business at the place formerly conducted by her husband. She acts on the advice of Attorney R. S. Horton, First National Bank building.

MILWAUKEE.

The B. G. Lambros store has passed from the hands of the sheriff to those of Henry M. Cane, receiver under a petition in bankruptcy filed in the United States Court. Mr. Cane is authorized to continue the business in the Herman building. When B. G. Lambros was closed up under a judgment held by his brother he was owing many sums to wholesalers. It was at first reported that John Lambros, who was supposed by many to have owned the place at the time credit was granted, would settle, but as nothing came of it the creditors thought it imprudent to let things go on as they appeared to be planned, and united in throwing the affair into the United States Court.

and carnations are, and have been, giving excellent results. Mr. Heckenkamp gives most of his time to the Western Catholic Union, of which he was elected supreme president last October. J. W. Canaga is in charge of the greenhouses. Gentlemann Bros. have their stock in fine shape and have been doing their share of the cut flower trade.

J. F. Kroner has built up a very nice business. He has been somewhat handicapped this winter by his water pipe being frozen up all through the severe cold weather.

Heller & Grossan are still doing business at the old stand.

There is some talk of organizing a florists' club here. It would be a good thing for us all.

ROME, GA.—John T. Taylor says business has been good but that the cut flower season is at an end, violets, daffodils, tulips and hyacinths being in bloom in the open. The plant season will open in a few days and promises well.

DREER SEASONABLE SPECIALS

Dreer's Royal Exhibition Pansies. A fine lot of strong sturdy plants, wintered in cold frames of this famous strain. 75c per 100; $5.00 per 1000. Seed of this strain 50c per trade pkt.; $1.25 per 1/2 oz.; $8.00 per oz.

Myosotis Palustris Semperflorens. (The Everblooming Forget-me-not.) A nice lot of cold frame-grown plants, suitable for 4-inch pots, which, if brought into a cool greenhouse, will furnish readily salable plants for retailing or will quickly produce a profitable crop of flowers for cutting. 50c per doz.; $8.00 per 100.

Rhododendron Everestianum for Easter Flowering. We have a fine lot of this splendid crimped pink variety which can readily be forced for Easter. Elegant plants 18 inches high, bushy and well set with buds, 80c each; $9.00 per doz.; $70.00 per 100.

Dahlia Kriemhilde, the Finest of all Cut Flower Varieties. Perfect in color, free and early, good stems, and the ideal Dahlia as a fine cut flower. Field roots, $1.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100.

The New Paris Daisy, Queen Alexandra. A gem, either for cut flowers or as a pot plant. It bears double, semi-double and single flowers on the same plant. The double flowers resemble an anemone flowered chrysanthemum, but all are handsome. Strong 2 1/4-inch pots ready now, 20c each; $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

Azalea Mollis for Easter Forcing. This hardy azalea is gaining in favor every year. It is profitable stock for the retailers to handle; bushy plants 15 to 18 in. high, full of buds, $4.50 doz.; $35.00 per 100.

Primula Cortusoides Sieboldi. Try a few of these for early flowering: you will be surprised how much attention they will attract. We offer strong cornea which, if potted up and placed in a carnation house temperature, will flower in four or five weeks' time. Four colors—pure white, blush, salmon rose and crimson rose with white eye, $1.25 per doz.; $10.00 per 100.

Stokesia Cyanea, the Corn Flower Aster. When making up your planting plans for summer cut flowers you should not overlook this hardy gem. It will please you and prove profitable. The plants we offer are from very strong 8-inch pots which will give excellent returns under ordinary treatment, but if you can take them now and shift them up into larger pots their season of bloom will begin much earlier. $1.00 per doz.; $5.00 per 100; $40.00 per 1000.

The Baby Rambler Rose. Strong one-year-old imported field-grown plants which have recently been potted up into 4-inch pots. $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100.

The New White Hybrid Perpetual Rose, Frau Karl Druschki. It seems almost incredible that such a fine rose should have been introduced seven years ago and its many good points only now become known. However this may be, the fact remains that this is the first really white hybrid perpetual rose that we have, and furthermore it is a gem in every way, perfect in form, a vigorous grower and remarkably free flowering. Strong two-year-old imported plants, $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100.

The Scott Fern. This is not only the new Boston fern which has come to stay, but a variety which will displace that old favorite. We have a good lot of 2 1/4-in. pots, $2 doz.; $15.00; $125.00 per 1000.

The Market.

Business is moving along in very good style in spite of a relapse to winter and the change in the weather will have very little effect on it. The demand for stock is good and all kinds are called for. Spring openings used up a large quantity of blooms, which were given away. Many plants and palms were also used. This helped out our market a little, but most of the cut flowers came from Chicago. St. Patrick's day was a very good one from a florist's point of view. As usual, the green carnation took the lead, thousands of them being sold at from 5 cents to 15 cents each. Fred Gear and H. D. Edwards, both of whom sold the dye to produce the green carnation, reported a large demand for it.

In roses the demand for Beauties heads the list and more could be disposed of. Liberty and Meteor are also scarce. Other sorts are about equal to the demand. Carnations are selling first-class, white going especially well. Violets are doing nicely also, with the prices slightly advanced. Bulbous stock goes moderately well, but Harrisii and callas move slowly while Romans scarcely pay for the bulbs. Some good lilac moves slowly.

Asparagus and smilax are not equal to the demand. Other green goods are plentiful. Fancy ferns are holding out well.

Various Notes.

There are a great many fakirs coming to this city, mostly from Chicago, and they are taking a chance at the street business here. But the wholesale men do not take very kindly to them, and their stay will be short.

Julius Baer is now in his new store at 138 and 140 East Fourth street. It is a beautiful store, with plenty of room to display stock. In its arrangements it is most artistic and I do not believe it has its equal anywhere in this part of the country. Our retail florists are fitting up the kind of stores that our city deserves and we are glad to see it.

turely. The cause of the sleepiness is too much heat, too much water and too much fertilizer. Look after these things and your blooms will give satisfaction." He also said that he had a white sport of Enchantress which will be quite an acquisition.

Ernest Alexander, formerly carnation grower for W. K. Partridge and lately employed by the Miami Floral Co., Dayton, has accepted a position in the horticultural department of the Lewis and Clark Exposition at Portland, Oregon. Incidentally in passing through this city en route, he went over to Newport, Ky., and was married to Mrs. Mattie E. Aubrey. After the fair he expects to return and erect greenhouses near Springfield, O.

The Market.

A week of sun has produced a great difference in greenhouse crops. Roses are coming in more plentifully and some fine Brides and Maids can be had, also good Gates. Long-stemmed American Beauties are coming in more freely and find ready sale. For the first time this winter are there roses carried over from day to day. The wholesalers report a fair trade in all lines except bulb stuff, especially callas. Double violets have been coming in heavily with not enough singles to go around. Strange to say, the street fakirs are handling good single violets at 20 cents per hundred, which is much less than they can be bought for here. Carnations were never better in quality and the demand seems greatest for white. In pink, Lawson is the one most called for, with plenty of the smaller grades of pink left over. The only thing that really is scarce is greens, of which there are not near enough to go around. Especially is this true of asparagus in bunches, which has been short all winter.

Various Notes.

The Gardeners' Club of Baltimore held its annual election of officers and banquet on March 13. It was one of the best attended meetings the club has ever had, largely due to the hot competition for president. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Philip B. Welsh; vice-president, F. C. Bauer; secretary, John J. Perry; financial secretary, George Talbott; treasurer, Fred G. Burger; librarian, C. M. Wagner.

A number of the local craft visited W. B. Sands, of Lake Roland, on March 9. After an inspection of the greenhouse plant the host led the way to the dining-room, where the tables were heavily laden with good things.

H. Weber & Sons are sending in some fine Harrisii lilies.

Wm. B. Sands is cutting extra good valley.

A. J. Fellouris, of New York, was a visitor last week and reports an increasing demand for all hardy green goods. B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., was in town last week and so was the salesman for H. Bayersdorfer & Co., who had a wagon-load of samples. A. F.

TORONTO, ONT.—The King Construction Co. reports a large amount of greenhouse building. They have orders from as far west as Denver.

CARNATIONS

We offer first-class stock of the finest varieties.

Strong Rooted Cuttings

Variegated Lawson This variety which we are introducing this season we are sure will prove to be the very best variegated sort. Pure ivory white with delicate carmine pencilings. Mr. W. N. Craig, an authority on everything pertaining to horticulture, says that he knows that this variety will out-bloom the favorite, Mrs. M. A. Patten, three to one. It has the Lawson habit and stem, and is bound to give satisfaction. $12 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Red Lawson A bright red sport of Lawson that is bound to be popular, and will be grown where Lawson is popular. $10.00 per 100; $75 per 1000.

Cardinal Bright cardinal, or crimson-scarlet. Won first prize for best 100 scarlet, first prize for best 50 carnations any color, first prize for best 50 scarlet seedlings, Chicago. $12.00 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Fiancee The queen of pink carnations; in a class by itself. Magnificent flowers, strictly fancy in every respect. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

White Lawson We consider this variety, which we introduced last season, the most profitable white carnation ever sent out. We think it will outbloom any other white two to one. It has given great satisfaction. When the flowers are left on the plants until fully developed they are much larger than Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson. We believe this will occupy among white carnations the same place that Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson does among pink carnations. Remember that we are headquarters for it. Splendid stock ready for immediate delivery. $7.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

Fred Burki Recommended as an extra free-blooming white variety and a claimant for popular favor. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Lady Bountiful A magnificent white of last season's introduction. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Daheim Dark crimson. Grand stiff stem. Calyx never bursts. Free and abundant bloomer, developing very quickly. We consider this the best all-round crimson carnation. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Mrs. M. A. Patten This grand variegated carnation has given splendid satisfaction. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Enchantress Freest blooming, bringing highest market prices. In great demand. $4.00 per 100; $30.00 per 1000.

Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

Prosperity A magnificent fancy carnation. $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

We are now prepared to book orders for 1906 for the Coming Scarlet Victory. This is a real bread and butter variety. An early, free and abundant bloomer, with good stem; a magnificent keeper and shipper; flowers of the largest size, commanding the very highest price. This is going to be a money-maker. Orders will be filled in rotation, as received. Delivery beginning December next. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

The past week has been one of unusual activity among the trade here. All stock is arriving in large quantities. Beauties are looking much better. Brides and Maids are of fine quality. All the stores are making fine displays of potted plants. Liberties are not quite up to the standard. Carnations are of choice quality and prices are about the same. Bulbous stock is looking well and supply is plentiful. Valley, violets and sweet peas are selling well. Lent has made no appreciable difference in the matter of trade. Several large decorations were handled by some of the shops here. A visit among the growers shows stock in very good shape. Orders are already being booked for Easter and the indications point to an unusually brisk trade.

Various Notes.

One of the finest decorations seen here in many a day was that of W. J. Barnes at a millinery opening of one of the leading dry goods stores. Twelve dozen palms, 500 carnations, 600 tulips, six dozen ferns and a large quantity of Easter and calla lilies were used.

Ed. Ellsworth has a remarkably fine display in his window, of rhododendrons, azaleas and bulbous stock.

The executive committee of Convention Hall has sent letters to the principal florists here calling for a meeting to discuss the chances for a flower show. It is hoped that our people will grasp the opportunity.

Geo. M. Kellogg, of Pleasant Hill, is showing an immense white carnation, a sport of Enchantress, which promises to be a winner. The flower measures three and one-half inches in diameter, is pure white, erect habit, strong stem and perfect form. Mr. Kellogg has refused some flattering offers for his plant.

Lawrence Schwager is showing some fine plants in his window these days and reports business as all that could be desired.

The opera Parsifal here the past few days caused a large amount of business among the florists, American Beauties, violets and valley being the choice with both singers and patrons.

Mr. Shaeffer, of the Kansas City Floral Co., is having the place repainted and thoroughly renovated and reports business as first-class. Miss Clara Motter has charge.

NARCISSUS.

PACIFIC COAST.

PROF. B. T. Galloway, chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture, is planning to visit the Pacific coast early in April.

DIFFICULTIES OF IMPORTING.

From the standpoint of a grower it is rather discouraging to import young nursery stock from Europe and have it arrive in the condition in which I noticed some cases were opened here last week. It seems that the French and Dutch nurserymen must be woefully ignorant of the distance and length of time it takes to ship plants from their countries to Pacific coast points. Said an extensive grower and importer to me a few days ago, "I have been receiving nursery stock from the largest French nurseries yearly for the past ten seasons and only about one shipment in three is properly packed. I wrote with each order I sent to the firm's agent in New York to notify his house to be particular with the packing and also to call their attention to the distance to be traveled as well as the length of time necessary to make the journey. He wrote me that he had done so and when the first lot of goods arrived I found that there was no paper lining whatever in the inside of the cases and as the weather had been exceptionally cold and the boxes had come overland, a great many of the young plants were completely frozen and I lost considerable money on the shipment. I complained to the New York agent and he told me it was probably an oversight and he would be particular it 'would not happen again.'

"The next season I purchased heavily from the same firm and suggested that the goods be sent to California by steamer from New York instead of overland. I have since found out that this is the best way to ship as they escape the terrible cold with which the eastern and middle states are blessed in January and February. But to return to my shipment. This lot, consisting of ten crates, I received in the middle of February. The crates were well lined with heavy paper, but the young stock was for the greater part worthless on account of the large amount of damp moss that had been packed in between the bundles of plants. Of the half hardy stock I did not save any and of the hardy shrubs and trees I saved probably fifty per cent. I again notified the agent of the condition I had received the consignment in and he promised to write to the nursery. I thought it might be a good plan to drop them a line myself and I did so forthwith describing in detail how the goods were received. The answer I received was rather a curiosity in its way. The writer was the proprietor of one of the largest nurseries in France and he told me that he personally remembered seeing my order packed and that he thought that it would not take over two or three weeks for the goods to make the journey and that consequently there was no danger of the plants heating en route. I answered and informed him that I rarely was able to get anything through in less than six weeks and sometimes longer. The following season I received the consignment in five weeks, during an exceptionally mild winter and they were opened and found in excellent condition.

"A year later I again imported from the same firm and this time the boxes were poorly made and between the boards some hungry steamer rats had gnawed their way and destroyed fully three-quarters of the contents of two of the cases. It was just as well, however, as in the other two cases my French grower had again neglected my advice about packing and had used no moss at all between the roots of his stock and I did not save over ten per cent of the shipment. I sat down and wrote him a good healthy note on his method of packing and received in reply a letter which was very courteous and sympathetic and also informed me that he supposed the stock was packed properly because he knew it was 'always warm in America and especially so in California.' I do not know how he received his information—but I think if he had seen his cases unpacked he would have changed his mind. I have since imported from various firms and they all seem to use the same brand of carelessness in their packing—either too much moss and moisture or too little moss and dryness and, as I stated before, only about one consignment in three arrives in good order.” G.

ASTERS IN CALIFORNIA.

At what time should I sow aster seed in Southern California to have the blooms in October and November? Could I make them bloom about Christmas? Our summers are hot and dry and I would like them to come in when it begins to grow cooler. A. L. H.

The aster is a plant with a distinct season and is always well out of bloom by the time the frost makes its appearance. To have them flowering as late as it is possible in this climate I plant the seeds in March, using some of the late branching varieties, and transplant them in the open ground in May. Being of a soft growth, it is necessary to keep them growing all the time, for if they get a set-back from any cause whatever they will be worthless for blooming. Consequently they must be well watered and cultivated during their growing season. I have found they can be made to bloom in this way as late as October and well into November but the quality of the blossoms was never as good as those I cut when I planted the same variety of seed in January and commenced to cut the last week in August. It will be found much more satisfactory to grow chrysanthemums for winter blooming than to try and keep asters flowering after their season is over. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business has quieted down considerably and the florists are having a rest. There is practically nothing doing in the social line and very little in the funeral way. Flowers are gradually getting cheaper in price and more plentiful. The weather is warm and we have occasional showers.

The only flowers that are scarce at present are good roses. Beauties are selling wholesale at from $2 to $3 per dozen for fancy stock and only a few to be had. I look for this price to lower considerably in a few days, when from all accounts there will be a good crop offered. Carnations are very plentiful and cheap. Narcissi of all kinds are practically over, as well as freesias. Valley is plentiful and of slow sale. Harrisii are in fair supply, with only fair demand. Fruit blossoms are used everywhere this season in decorations and, although a cheap flower, they net the florists a good profit. Wild flowers have commenced to be shown and in a week or two will occupy considerable space usually devoted to more expensive blooms. Violets are over for the season.

Various Notes.

L. G. Gardner, of Elmhurst, reports a very satisfactory season's business.

W. C. Hill, senior member of the W. C. Hill Floral Co., passed away March 11, after an illness of two weeks of cancer of the stomach. Mr. Hill was born in St. Louis, November 16, 1843. He served in the 20th Illinois during the Civil war and was married March 16, 1868, to Miss Emily Tompkins, who survives. Mr. Hill came to Streator in 1875 and embarked in the flower business. In 1884, the Hill Floral Co. was incorporated, since which time the firm has built up a prosperous and growing business, a few years ago moving their plant from South Park street to the west side, where the business has been conducted on a larger scale.

WASHINGTON.

"No flowers" will be the sign hereafter displayed in the United States senate chamber. The edict has gone forth that all blossoms shall be barred from those august portals.

Senator Lodge produced a crumpled piece of paper a few days ago and sent it to the clerk's desk. The clerk read this:

Resolved, That until further orders the sergeant-at-arms is instructed not to permit flowers to be brought into the senate chamber.

When Mr. Quay returned to the senate after a two-year absence caused by a deadlock in the Pennsylvania legislature, a good sized section of the senate chamber was taken up with a triumphal floral arch, which caused many senators (who didn't like Quay) to say the practice of giving flowers should be forbidden.

NEW ORLEANS.

In order to properly set forth the losses sustained by florists through many defects and delays in the transportation of cut flowers to this city the committee named for this special purpose by the New Orleans Horticultural Society reported at a meeting March 16 that articles were being prepared for all the newspapers.

The committee having the arrangement of the chrysanthemum show in charge reported progress, assuring the society that the show during the month of November would be on a much larger scale than ever before.

The exhibit committee was instructed to make all arrangements for a large display of roses at the April meeting. Richard Eichling, with U. J. Virgin, exhibited calla lilies, Lilium Harrisii, assorted Dutch hyacinths, narcissi, freesias, spiraea and lily of the valley.

H. Papworth presided. Twelve members were present.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Austin Pierce, a grower, has been arrested for deserting a six-days' bride.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—The Clark-Mitchell place, which has passed through many vicissitudes in the four years of its existence, has been sold to Elmer Law and James Wilson, of Butte, Mont., the reported consideration being $15,000. It is a fine plant and will be devoted wholly to carnations for the wholesale trade. Salt Lake is a splendid point for such a business, large quantities of stock being shipped in continually.

The Market.

The spring-like weather has forced in immense quantities of bulbous stock, as well as carnations, roses and violets. The result has been a buyers' market; especially if you are buying in quantity you make your own price. The retailers have not much to complain of. Trade has been very fair for the Lenten season, the warm weather bringing out lots of small buyers.

Various Notes.

Thos. M. Ulam was closed by the sheriff last Thursday.

John Foss had a bad scare last Thursday, when the large warehouse near his greenhouse burned to the ground. He escaped, thanks to the direction of the wind.

The growers in this section say there will be no azaleas or bulbous stock for Easter.

The recording thermometer and thermometer exhibited at last meeting of the Florists' Club was sent by the Parker Mfg. Co., 79 Summer street, Boston, Mass. I find in my last notes I mentioned the manufacturer's name of the instrument instead of the sales agent.

I overheard a conversation in one of the wholesale houses the other day, the truth of which struck me forcibly. The query at issue was: "Why do people expect more for nothing from florists than from any other class of tradesmen?" Even the salesmen in the store seem to forget the value of stock when putting up a box of flowers, for when they have put up a box to the full retail value and they see that a little something will improve the box or bunch, especially if for a regular customer, unthinkingly they will put the whole profit of the box or bunch into the order. The same thing is true in making a design and if the stock is not counted, in order to make the design look right to the man who is making it up, quite frequently the wholesale price of the stock is more than the price of the design. This is not true in any other business. Who ever heard of throwing in a 5-cent handkerchief because you bought a dozen, but it is not uncommon with the florist's clerk and even the proprietor and salesmen who would not touch a penny or a stamp, will take a few roses and never think of the greater value. The salesman in a hardware store will pick up a single nail from the floor, but the chances are the florist will kick a couple of daisies, worth 2 cents each, under the counter. Are florists more liberal than other business men, or don't they need the money?

The Allegheny river is on a rampage and as a result, the cellars of Mrs. E. A. Williams, L. I. Neff, Geddis & Blind Bros. and the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., are flooded, causing great inconvenience. Hoo-Hoo.

MOST every grower who has the land to spare plants enough potatoes for his own use. We do, and though there is not a fortune in the crop, there is some satisfaction in knowing that you have in your cellar, a winter's supply of potatoes of your own raising. If you don't believe this, you have never had the right stock; you have planted potatoes simply because they were potatoes and eaten them for the same reason. Don't wait any longer but send to us for a pound, peck or bushel of the new.

Temple, Davenport; vice-presidents, Henry Pauli, Davenport; Henry Gaethje, Rock Island; John Staack, Moline; recording secretary, Henry Meyer, Rock Island; financial secretary, T. WATER LILIES FROM JAPAN.

[A paper by Wm. Tricher, read under the general heading, "Our Horticultural Indebtedness to Japan," before the Germantown Horticultural Society, March 13, 1905.]

Among water plants none can rival the Nelumbium speciosum, commonly known to us as the Egyptian lotus. It is no more Egyptian than American. It has been imported from Japan several times, although some of the first to become established in the United States came by way of France, but it is of immense value in Japan as an economic plant. The tubers, or large fleshy rhizomes, are an article of diet with the Japs and the Mongolians, and are grown extensively for this purpose. In Japan several forms are known, varying in color from a pure white to pink and deep rosy carmine, but no yellow, although this will doubtless be well known there in the near future. I consider this very significant and marking definitely America as the home of Nelumbium luteum, the yellow lotus.

The Japanese varieties, besides being varied in color, are varied in size; there are giant forms much larger than any exported from Japan, and which are probably considered more sacred to the Japanese. As my informant assured me, they were grown in temple gardens. There are also pigmy forms, very beautiful, flowers about the size of an ordinary tulip, both white and pink, single and double, and only growing about eighteen inches high. The choicest in cultivation in the United States, with one or two exceptions, came from Japan; one is claimed to have originated in California, another from imported seed.

A singular instance is the fact that Japan has but one Nymphaea, or pond-lily, as known in the United States. This is Nymphaea tetragona or Nymphaea pygmyea. This is the smallest of the water lilies; the flowers, pure white, are about the size of a silver dollar. This is of great interest, being so diminutive and distinct from all others. Considered of little account, it has proven of immense value to the hybridist and is one of the parents of some of the choicest water-lilies in cultivation.

Japan has also its Nuphar or spatterdock, which doubtless fills its mission in Japan as does our native variety in the Delaware river and elsewhere.

A very interesting aquatic plant is Trapa bi-spinosa, the water chestnut, the seeds of which are offered by fakirs on our streets in spring and exposed in jars of water with a bit of green as evidence of sure growth, but which inevitably is sure death.

Sagittaria Sagittifolia, double and single flowered, are both ornamental and useful plants; the single form is identical with our own. The tubers, which are a culinary dish among the Japanese, are here a choice morsel with the muskrats.

There are other aquatic plants all more or less of great value among the Japanese. Scirpus and Juncus communis are purely ornamental plants with us, but largely used for mats and packing material. Zizania aquatica, commonly known as reed grass and occasionally used as an aquatic decorative plant, is of great value to them.

Another industry to which we owe the Japanese much is the culture of gold fish. There are large quantities of fish imported every year and an immense quantity raised annually in the United States. Where aquatic plants are cultivated it is necessary to have fish in the water, and it is of no greater trouble or care to raise twenty-five-dollar fish than it is twenty-five-cent ones, but you can take your choice.

PLAN FOR PIPE HEATING.

We have four houses running east and west. No. 1, with thirty inches of glass in the south wall, is 20x66, and connected with it without a wall is No. 2, 18x50, both for carnations. No. 3 stands two feet from No. 2, is 14x55 and used for propagating. No. 4 is also detached, 16x60, and used for roses. Nos. 1, 2 and 4 are ten feet to ridge, No. 3 eight feet to ridge. All walls are four feet. The east end is covered by the shed; the west gable is glass. How should these houses be piped for steam? What size of tubular boiler will be needed for weather conditions of western New York? We use soft coal.

M. L. H.

House No. 1, 20x66 feet, if piped with a 2-inch flow under the ridge will need ten 1½-inch returns, whether on the side walls or under the benches. House No. 2, which is connected with house No. 1 and which is 18x50 feet, will require a 2-inch riser under the ridge and seven 1½-inch pipes on the side walls or under the benches. If the piping is to be placed on the walls it will be well to place six of the ten pipes of house No. 1 and five of the seven pipes of house No. 2 on the outside walls. This will leave seven pipes to be placed on the posts under the common gutter to houses No. 1 and 2.

House No. 3, which is 14x55 feet, I have piped so as to maintain a temperature of 70 degrees. A 2-inch flow under the ridge and eight 1½-inch returns under the benches or along the side walls, preferably under the benches, will serve the purpose. It will be a good plan to place valves at each end of two of the lines of pipe on each side of this house, as during mild weather the piping will be too heavy.

House No. 4, which is stated to be 16x60 and which is to be used for roses, should be piped for 70 degrees. A 2-inch flow under the ridge and ten 1½-inch returns will be sufficient to carry this temperature unless the house is exposed to hard winds, in which event it would be well to place eleven 1½-inch returns in the house.

The precaution noted for house No. 3, i. e., to place valves on four or more of the returns in each of the houses, is a good one, as it will simplify the problem of firing and of meeting sudden changes in the weather. If no immediate addition is contemplated a boiler containing about 160 to 175 feet of heating surface will be ample for your needs. Such a boiler would be rated as twelve or fifteen horse-power and would be about thirty-six inches in diameter and eight feet long. For setting such a boiler see FLORISTS' REVIEW, February 16, page 705.

A PROMISING MUM.

The floral committee of the French N. C. S. has held during the past season a number of meetings at Lyons and at Montpellier, where many new seedlings, etc., were exhibited. The raisers, in many instances, are hardly known by name to most of our growers but we can never tell what good thing may come from unexpected quarters. One of the exhibitors gained a certificate for a sport from Madame Paolo Radaelli, which appears to be a good thing. The raiser describes it as ochre-yellow, washed and striped with red, reverse paler yellow. The name of the novelty is Madame Guillaume Ridol. The parent is such a popular favorite with the English exhibitor that there is every reason to suppose the sport will be equally valued.—Gardeners' Magazine.

HENRY ECKFORD.

While no one can take exception to the names of the three persons who have just been selected as Victorian Medalists of Honor in Horticulture, I am led to greatly wonder why the name of the veteran Henry Eckford, of Wem, is so constantly passed over; a horticulturist who has put in some sixty years of most useful practical work, a keen florist, cultivating, exhibiting and raising dahlias a half century ago, improving the zonal pelargonium, the verbena and other flowers; always industriously and intelligently experimenting with culinary peas and other vegetables, but whose great work has been improving the sweet pea, and by which he has given touches of exquisite beauty to every garden, not only in almost or quite every part of the British Empire, but in very many foreign lands also. The name of Eckford is known far and wide, and he is still at his favorite work. His name could have fittingly headed the list of the hundred medalists originally selected. Veteran as he is, he cannot be said to have outlived his reputation, for his name appears in every seed catalogue and is in every one's mouth who loves his garden.—RICHARD DEAN, in H. T. J.

ANNUAL HOLLYHOCKS.

It may interest your readers to hear that I make a specialty of growing the new type, which are annuals. The quick and luxuriant growth of the plants is not favorable to the establishment of the fungus. The seeds may be sown about the end of March, but if sown later of course they will not commence flowering so soon. Young plants transplanted about the beginning of May will commence to bloom about the end of July. They will remain in flower until late in the autumn. The branches that have borne flowers must be cut away, otherwise all the energy of growth will be devoted to the ripening of the seeds. It is also worth while mentioning that the plants are just as hardy as those of the other types of hollyhocks, therefore plants may stand another year, but I prefer to grow them year by year. It is necessary to mention that the double strain is still not yet so perfectly double as those of the best varieties of Chater's Prize strains, but nevertheless the flowers are pretty nearly double, and ultimately I trust to have a strain that will compare with the best of any type of the biennial class.—Frederick Roemer, Quedlinburg, in Gardener's Chronicle.

The Fumigating Kind Tobacco Powder

All That Use It Say—"THERE IS ONLY ONE."

Jewett City, Conn.—I have used your Fumigating Kind Tobacco Powder for some 4 or 5 years and find it the best fumigator I know of. I use nothing else, as your kind is easy to handle and does the work thoroughly.—A. A. YOUNG.

Tamaqua, Pa.—Until three years ago I was always hunting for something better to kill the green fly, without injury to bloom and foliage. Then I started to use The Fumigating Kind Tobacco Powder. I have used it ever since; it is good enough for me.—NELS NELSON.

A FREE trial five-pound bag will cost you nothing more than the express charges on it. The trial bag will prove our assertion that it is the most effective, cleanest and quickest as well as the cheapest (10 cents per 100-foot house) article to fumigate with. All aphids killed in one night—our booklet tells of it; we mail one on request.

HOT WATER OR STEAM.

We have three attached houses, the north one 20x102, the middle one 18x102 and the south one 10x102. The north wall is four feet high and tight; the south wall has two feet of glass. The gables are glass. We want 58 degrees in the north house and 70 degrees in the middle one. We have used a flue but shall change to either steam or hot water. The boiler we have in mind has nine sections, with a fire box 24x54 inches and rated for 2,400 feet of radiation. Will this do and how shall we pipe for 10 degrees below zero? S. F. C.

If you wish to heat the plant with steam it will require a boiler with a minimum rating to carry 1,500 feet of radiation. If hot water is to be used the capacity of the boiler should be sufficient to carry at least 2,000 feet of radiation. In either case the boiler specified should be ample for your present plant. If steam is used 1½-inch pipe can be used for all returns and 2-inch for all flow pipes in the houses and if each flow is carried direct from the boiler 2-inch will be sufficient for the whole length. If hot water is used the returns should be 1½ or 2-inch pipe and the flows 2½-inch in each of the larger houses and 2-inch in the small one. For steam the house 20x102 should have ten 1½-inch returns, but for hot water it should have eleven returns of 2-inch pipe or fourteen 1½-inch. The house 18x102 should have ten 1½-inch returns but for hot water it should have eleven 1½-inch or nine 2-inch returns. The house 10x102 takes six 1½-inch returns for steam or with hot water either six 1½-inch pipes or five 2-inch return pipes. L. C. C.

DENVER, COLO.—The Colorado Society of Florists will meet here March 24. Papers will be read by John A. Sked, John Berry and W. W. Wilmore. John Sotherwaite is president and J. A. Valentine, secretary.

FAIRMOUNT, W. VA.—H. Glenn Fleming now has two separate establishments, but as soon as the weather will permit he will tear down one place and remove it to the other, increasing the glass area to about three times the present.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

THE BOSTON MEETING.

The annual exhibition and meeting of the American Rose Society, held in conjunction with the spring show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, at Boston, March 23 to 26, proved, in spite of some previous pessimistic talk, to be a most successful one, far outclassing the meeting of the Chrysanthemum Society in November in variety of interesting exhibits and enthusiasm.

The Rose Society is still an infant, but as a result of what was seen and heard at the recent exhibition we anticipate for it a field of far wider and more practical usefulness than it has filled in the past. In fact, in some respects the S. A. F. and the more lusty Carnation Society might profitably copy some of its prospective work. As was truthfully stated by President Montgomery, the lack of rose novelties of American introduction, as compared with carnations, is one of the chief causes of the apparent lack of interest on the part of many rosarians. As increasing attention is now being paid to this by a number of hybridizers, the near future should give us a more distinctively American race of roses than exists today and interest in these meetings will be stimulated. Another thing which will vastly strengthen the society is to be not too exclusively commercial. Its aim is, or should be, to gather into its fold many of the increasing army of wealthy amateur rose lovers, particularly of hardy varieties, as is done by the powerful National Rose Society of England. The issuing of bulletins, which is to be started ere long, will do much to strengthen the society and if carefully followed should eventually make the Rose Society what it ought to be, the strongest organization of its kind in America.

The Rose Society is of eastern birth and its exhibitions have been confined to the cities of New York, Philadelphia and Boston. We think the decision to remain in the east until it grows to be a more lusty youngster, and then travel westward, is a good one and while some of our western friends may not agree with this policy, we believe they will eventually be brought to see its wisdom, but we are digressing and must return to the exhibition.

There have been larger displays of cut roses at other shows, particularly in the west, but the quality at Boston was remarkably fine. Then, when it came to pot roses, no other show in the country could compare with it. This opinion seemed to be universal. The fifty American Beauties which won the executive committee's prize as well as the Lord & Burnham trophy and Welch Bros.' prize for the best vase of roses in the hall, and which came from the Waban Rose Conservatories, were magnificent. Briarcliff Greenhouses, W. H. Elliott, F. R. Pierson Co. and others also showed grand Beauties. The Queen of Edgely, from the Floral Exchange, and Ivory, from the same firm, were excellent.

Brides and Bridesmaids were especially well shown by Waban Conservatories and W. H. Elliott. The Montrose Greenhouses also had some superb vases, showing very high culture. Liberty from A. Farenwald and Elliott attracted even more notice than the American Beauties. Breitmeyer's vases of La Detroit and Mme. Hoste came in fine shape, the former, especially, being much admired. Gen. MacArthur from John N. May, came in for much favorable notice, as did Wellesley from Waban Conservatories, which won the prize for the best American seedling not in commerce. Killarney, shown in pots as well as in vases, seemed to be a great favorite with the ladies.

There was a good display of hybrid perpetuals, George Melvin, gardener to Col. Charles Pfaff; M. H. Walsh and John McFarland being the chief exhibitors, Brunner, Frau Karl Druschki, Mrs. John Laing, Margaret Dickson, Clio, Jacqueminot, Baron Bonstetten and Merveille de Lyon being especially good.

was the most remarkable feature of the show and attracted the admiration of the throngs of visitors. Some of these were in pots, but the majority were in tubs. The task of conveying this big collection from the shores of Cape Cod to Boston must have been quite an arduous one. The most admired plants in Mr. Walsh's group were his Lady Gay, very similar to Farquhar in color and beautifully flowered. Other varieties, such as Wedding Bells, Hiawatha, La Fiamma, Sweetheart, Debutante, made up a magnificent collection, alone worth a journey of hundreds of miles to see. In addition to the F. R. Newbold prize for best group of Ramblers, Mr. Walsh won the three prizes offered by the society and first and third prizes for the best individual specimens.

The following are the awards in full:

Teas and hybrid teas, twenty-five cut blooms, open to all: American Beauty, second prize to W. H. Elliott. Bride, first, W. H. Elliott. Bridesmaid, first, W. H. Elliott; second, Montrose Greenhouses. Queen of Edgely, first, Floral Exchange.

Alexander Montgomery.

(Re-elected President of the American Rose Society).

Roses in pots and tubs were quite extensively shown by W. W. Edgar, F. R. Pierson Co. and M. H. Walsh. The first named had quite a collection of large specimens of hybrid perpetuals. F. R. Pierson showed a fine lot of Mme. Norbert Levavasseur. M. H. Walsh showed a large group of Urania, one of his novelties, which promises to be a useful hybrid perpetual, also many other standard sorts. His collection of Rambler roses, practically all his own seedlings, Business Session.

The annual business session of the American Rose Society was held in the directors' room at Horticultural Hall, Boston, on Friday, March 24, with a good attendance, President Alexander Montgomery in the chair. The president read his address as follows:

President's Address.

We have met again to take note of our progress and do homage to our queen and, although we have hardly made the progress that the Rose Society is entitled to, considering the vast amount of capital invested in the business and the number of able men who make the cultivation of the rose their life work, yet I think that we are beginning to see light ahead. There have been suggested various reasons to account for the slow progress which this society has made. It has been charged against us that we are not national in that we have failed to cover the principal cities of the country, but, with patience on the part of our critics, and with the coöperation of those to whom this society has a right to look for its support, we will yet visit them all. The few pioneers who have done so much to nurse this society along are entitled to our gratitude for work done, and when the time comes for the Rose Society to start on its peregrinations I think I do not err in saying that it will have the hearty coöperation of those who have stood by it thus far. Distance will not diminish their interest in the flower of flowers nor the society which stands for its advancement.

The rose has not lacked for enthusiasts any more than the carnation, but it has missed that incentive to bring rose men together that the carnation men have had, namely, something new. The shows have had but little variety. Practically the same few varieties were forthcoming year after year, a little larger or smaller as we happened to carry them in our minds, or whether they happened to be our own or the other fellows' flowers, but evidence is not wanting that this will all be changed in the near future and we expect to again hear the cry go forth as it did in '61, but this time, thank God, it is not the soldier but the enthusiastic rosarian who raises the cry, "On to Richmond."

The American rose grower has at last awakened to the fact that if a race of roses adapted to his needs is to be forthcoming, it must be done by himself. He has paid in the past thousands of dollars for European varieties that were seldom suited to his requirements, notwithstanding that they might be all that the raiser claimed for them when growing under their own conditions. This applies in large measure to roses for outdoor cultivation, as well as to those grown under glass, and I am inclined to think that the former is the larger field for the hybridist, and with a reasonable amount of encouragement, I predict that the near future will see commendable progress made in a truly American type of roses adapted to the climatic conditions found here.

It should be the duty of this society to encourage in every way possible the rose hybridist, as in large measure the future of the Rose Society will depend on him for the stimulating interest created by having something new. The commercial man ought to be alive to the fact that if the rose is to hold the place of honor and profit he must have something to keep the buying public from becoming tired of seeing only the few familiar old varieties, however meritorious they may be.

A proceeding that I think would be of especial benefit to the introducer and buyer of new roses would be for this society to appoint local committees at the large centers, after the method of the Chrysanthemum Society, to whom flowers could be sent to be judged, according to the scale of the American Rose Society. For convenience this could be done at the various fall shows, and being judged by the official scale would be of value to all. The same committees could visit the new claimants in their home quarters and report on their winter qualities. These judges could be appointed by the executive committee and the chairmen of these committees or as many of them as were required could be the judges at the annual show.

Now a word about the show itself. The schedule needs to be practically rewritten and adapted to the particular section of the country to which the show is to go the following year. A preliminary schedule should be sent out in the fall, otherwise the growers of pot roses are largely eliminated, and it will be in evidence at the Boston show that this can be made both an interesting and educational section of our shows. If possible, a meeting of the executive committee should be held during the convention of the Society of American Florists, otherwise it will be almost impossible to get a majority of them together later in the season, as they are, and should be, men from wide apart sections of the country and find it difficult to leave their business later on.

In conclusion I would ask one and all to stay and take part in this meeting, and if they can offer anything for the good of this society, it is their duty to do so. To the young men I would extend a pressing invitation to take part in these proceedings and if with their young and progressive ideas they can show us wherein a part of the machinery of this society has worn out or become obsolete, I promise them that to the best of my ability I will assist them to have it replaced by more modern works. Progress should be the hailing sign of this society, for the only place the American rosarian can afford to sit is in the very prow of the vessel, even at the risk of an occasional wave splashing over him.

The secretary's report was read by W. J. Stewart and was as follows:

Secretary's Report.

I have the honor to make the following report as secretary since the resignation of Mr. Barron last fall.

The number of members on the list when it came to my hands was 191, of whom thirty-six were life members, and 155 annual members. The majority of the latter had paid no assessments for two years or more. Bills were sent to all and the returns have been quite satisfactory, everything considered, as the treasurer's report will show. In the meantime five new life members and sixteen annual have been added.

Silver medals won two years ago, at the Anandale Rose Show by Crumwold Gardens and at Lenox, Mass., by Giraud Foster, have been struck off and sent to their owners. Through an error in the schedule, a silver cup was awarded at Poughkeepsie the same year, instead of a medal, to F. Heeremans, of Lenox. F. R. Newbold, who was president of the American Rose Society at that time, has generously provided the cup and it has been forwarded, suitably engraved, to Mr. Heeremans.

The sentiment all over the country towards this society is extremely cordial so far as I have been able to learn, and the outlook is most encouraging for the organization and the objects for which it stands.

The treasurer's report in the unavoidable absence of John N. May was read by the secretary. It showed a balance in the treasury of $709.55 as compared with $971.12 a year previous.

M. H. Walsh, who was introduced as the wizard of Cape Cod, then read a paper for which H. A. Siebrecht moved a vote of thanks. Mr. Siebrecht stated that he hoped the result of this paper and its discussion would be to bring the society to the standard for which it was organized. He advocated the appointment of a publishing committee to get up a Rose Society bulletin at intervals and disseminate useful information and thus do a greater and broader work than is being accomplished. The motion was unanimously adopted.

In the discussion on Mr. Walsh's paper, James Wheeler said he thought American growers were slow in taking hold of hybridizing, the surest way to popularize the rose. We must raise kinds adapted for our climate and import less kinds of doubtful value from Europe. Robert Simpson said people needed education. People persisted in buying cheap, trashy Dutch roses year after year and become discouraged.

A. Farenwald said the society needs more spirit. Let it follow the lead of the carnation men, who poke their noses in at every show. The exhibition was much better than Philadelphia, but he thought the New York growers had not contributed their share. Members should be influenced to take more interest. Just now carnations are running roses a close race for supremacy. In a heavy market the former will sell while roses go to the dump heap. Frank R. Moore said that if we disseminate good practical information the buying public will put their money in and we can furnish the brains.

Asked as to the six best hardy roses to withstand a vigorous climate, M. H. Walsh said much depended on the situation. Living and growing are two different things. Growing means thriving under right conditions. Land location might be good for growth, but not for maturity of wood. Keeping insects away is second only to soil. It is useless providing good soil and then letting insects eat them up. Bulletins should tell people how to care for roses, when and how to spray. Cottagers really have more love for roses than the wealthy classes. We should help amateurs and give them simple, rudimentary instruction. For six hybrid perpetuals he would recommend Baroness Rothschild, Clio, Ulrich Brunner, Prince Camille de Rohan, Baron Bonstetten and Captain Hayward. In hybrid teas the best half dozen are Captain Christy, Caroline Testout, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, La France, Maman Cochet and Mme. Abel Chatenay. The last named had stood the last two winters with him without any protection. In Ramblers some of the best are Lady Gay, Sweetheart, Debutante, Philadelphia Rambler and Farquhar. Mr. Walsh condemned the marsh-grown Dutch stock.

H. A. Siebrecht said Baroness Rothschild did poorly with him. Magna Charta he preferred to treat as a shrub, like Mme. Plantier. He considered that the society should strike at cheap Dutch roses as not being adapted to our climate. M. H. Walsh said existing laws were such that he could not ship goods direct to Holland. They must go to England first. On the other hand the Dutch could ship directly here. This should be rectified. Roses should be budded not over two inches above the roots.

W. N. Craig did not favor some of the H. P. varieties recommended. He said a reliable half dozen are Mrs. John Laing, Mme. G. Luizet, Jacqueminot, Brunner, Paul Neyron and John Hopper. As a climber Dorothy Perkins might be added to Mr. Walsh's list. W. J. Stewart spoke a good word for Paul's Carmine Pillar.

After a few remarks from Harry May, Benjamin Hammond arose and offered to pay for 10,000 bulletins to be distributed by the society. Mr. Hammond was thanked for his generous offer, which was accepted on motion of W. H. Elliott. A. H. Langjahr recommended the issuance of annual reports to the members.

The next place of meeting now came up for discussion. Chicago, Utica and Syracuse were mentioned, but finally Boston was again selected, it being deemed best to stay in the east until the society becomes stronger.

Mr. Siebrecht moved that a committee of two retire and bring in nominations for officers. Their selections were: President, Alexander Montgomery; vice-president, Robert Simpson; treasurer, Harry May; secretary, W. J. Stewart. The officers nominated were unanimously elected. Regret was expressed at John N. May's inability to be present or continue to hold the office of treasurer, owing to sickness. W. N. Craig was appointed on the executive committee in place of Robert Simpson. M. H. Walsh, F. R. Newbold and A. Farenwald were also elected members of the same committee, Messrs. Walsh and Farenwald to serve for three years.

Messrs. Walsh and Siebrecht recommended the sending out of advance premium lists not later than November 5. Mr. Montgomery thanked the members for re-election and assured them he would spare no effort to make the Boston meeting in 1906 a much better one than they had seen that week. There being no further business the meeting adjourned.

The Banquet.

The banquet tendered by the horticultural interests of Boston to the visiting members of the American Rose Society was held at the Hotel Thorndike Friday evening. Over 100 were present, including a number of ladies. James Wheeler, president of the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club, presided. The banquet room was beautifully decorated. American Beauty roses were especially prominent. These and other flowers were contributed by Waban Conservatories, W. H. Elliott, M. A. Patten, Wm. Nicholson and other prominent growers and were used with great taste by Elijah A. Wood, who had charge of the decorations.

James Wheeler welcomed the guests in a few well chosen words and introduced W. J. Stewart as toast-master. He commended the members for honoring Mr. Montgomery with a re-election and introduced that gentleman as the first speaker. Mr. Montgomery spoke briefly and feelingly, thanking the members of the Rose Society for the confidence in him and for help at the show.

F. H. Traendly, president of the New York Florists' Club, was called on to speak for the American Rose Society. He said he considered it in the nature of a joke to be called on for a speech, but he much appreciated the hospitality shown. A. Farenwald spoke for Philadelphia and district. He said he had admired the thought the New York growers had not contributed their share. Members should be influenced to take more interest. Just now carnations are running roses a close race for supremacy. In a heavy market the former will sell while roses go to the dump heap. Frank R. Moore said that if we disseminate good practical information the buying public will put their money in and we can furnish the brains.

Asked as to the six best hardy roses to withstand a vigorous climate, M. H. Walsh said much depended on the situation. Living and growing are two different things. Growing means thriving under right conditions. Land location might be good for growth, but not for maturity of wood. Keeping insects away is second only to soil. It is useless providing good soil and then letting insects eat them up. Bulletins should tell people how to care for roses, when and how to spray. Cottagers really have more love for roses than the wealthy classes. We should help amateurs and give them simple, rudimentary instruction. For six hybrid perpetuals he would recommend Baroness Rothschild, Cléo, Ulrich Brunner, Prince Camille de Rohan, Baron Bonstetten and Captain Hayward. In hybrid teas the best half dozen are Captain Christy, Caroline Testout, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, La France, Maman Cochet and Mme. Abel Chatenay. The last named had stood the last two winters with him without any protection. In Ramblers some of the best are Lady Gay, Sweetheart, Debutante, Philadelphia Rambler and Farquhar. Mr. Walsh condemned the marsh grown Dutch stock.

H. A. Siebrecht said Baroness Rothschild did poorly with him. Magna Charta he preferred to treat as a shrub, like Mme. Plantier. He considered that the society should strike at cheap Dutch roses, as not being adapted to our climate. M. H. Walsh said existing laws were such that he could not ship goods direct to Holland. They must go to England first. On the other hand the Dutch could ship directly here. This should be rectified. Roses should be budded not over two inches above the roots.

W. N. Craig did not favor some of the H. P. varieties recommended. He said a reliable half dozen are Mrs. John Laing, Mme. G. Luizet, Jacqueminot, Brunner, Paul Neyron and John Hopper. As a climber Dorothy Perkins might be added to Mr. Walsh's list. W. J. Stewart spoke a good word for Paul's Carmine Pillar.

After a few remarks from Harry May, Benjamin Hammond arose and offered to pay for 10,000 bulletins to be distributed by the society. Mr. Hammond was thanked for his generous offer, which was accepted on motion of W. H. Elliott. A. H. Langjahr recommended the issuance of annual reports to the members.

The next place of meeting now came up for discussion. Chicago, Utica and Syracuse were mentioned, but finally Boston was again selected, it being deemed best to stay in the east until the society becomes stronger.

Mr. Siebrecht moved that a committee of two retire and bring in nominations for officers. Their selections were: President, Alexander Montgomery; vice-president, Robert Simpson; treasurer, Harry May; secretary, W. J. Stewart. The officers nominated were unanimously elected. Regret was expressed at John N. May's inability to be present or continue to hold the office of treasurer, owing to sickness. W. N. Craig was appointed on the executive committee in place of Robert Simpson. M. H. Walsh, F. R. Newbold and A. Farenwald were also elected members of the same committee. Messrs. Walsh and Farenwald to serve for three years.

Messrs. Walsh and Siebrecht recommended the sending out of advance premium lists not later than November 5. Mr. Montgomery thanked the members for re-election and assured them he would spare no effort to make the Boston meeting in 1906 a much better one than they had seen that week. There being no further business the meeting adjourned.

The Banquet.

The banquet tendered by the horticultural interests of Boston to the visiting members of the American Rose Society was held at the Hotel Thorndike Friday evening. Over 100 were present, including a number of ladies. James Wheeler, president of the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club, presided. The banquet room was beautifully decorated. American Beauty roses were especially prominent. These and other flowers were contributed by Waban Conservatories, W. H. Elliott, M. A. Patten, Wm. Nicholson and other prominent growers and were used with great taste by Elijah A. Wood, who had charge of the decorations.

James Wheeler welcomed the guests in a few well chosen words and introduced W. J. Stewart as toast master. He commended the members for honoring Mr. Montgomery with a re-election and introduced that gentleman as the first speaker. Mr. Montgomery spoke briefly and feelingly, thanking the members of the Rose Society for the confidence in him and for help at the show.

F. H. Traudny, president of the New York Florists' Club, was called on to speak for the American Rose Society. He said he considered it in the nature of a joke to be called on for a speech, but he much appreciated the hospitality shown. A. Farenwald spoke for Philadelphia and district. He said he had admired the wonderful skill shown by the growers of cyclamens, roses and other plants at this show, the finest he had ever seen, but Philadelphia could grow palms and ferns better than anyone.

C. W. Parker spoke on behalf of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society as an amateur grower. Prof. Louis C. Elsen, of the New England Conservatory of Music, who was next called upon, is a first rate orator. He said that there was something in the culture of flowers which adds to the culture of human nature. He was not sufficiently posted to know the difference between the Lawson pink and a Standard Oil plant, although he believed the latter was secured by grafting. He was struck by the close connection between flowers and music.

Peter Crowe, of Utica, being called upon, said the esteemed president was his first teacher of rose growing twenty-seven years ago and still remained his master. H. A. Siebrecht said flowers were life and joy to him. He always loved to come to Boston. New York might be the great commercial and money-making center, but Boston was the horticultural pivot. Jackson Dawson spoke on his special work among the small roses to get a better and more attractive hardy class.

Peter Fisher was called on to speak in lieu of James Hartshorne, who was not present when called upon. Mr. Fisher said he would as soon take a licking as make a speech, but made a capital one all the same. He said the rose was once his special hobby, it was and always would be the queen, but the carnation would run it a close second. He himself had induced Mr. Montgomery to join the Carnation Society and in turn had joined the Rose Society. He hoped to see the Rose and Carnation Societies go hand in hand and work for the advancement of horticulture.

Benjamin Hammond, who responded for the ladies, made one of the best speeches of the evening. He is a born orator and needs no prompting. He considered that the $30,000 paid for Lawson carnation did much more good than if placed in a missionary box. Speaking of the S. A. F. he said the "Ornamental Horticulturist" appendage reminded him of a dog with two tails, in which sentiment his hearers agreed.

Other speakers were J. K. M. L. Farquhar, who spoke for the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Theodore Wirth, John B. Nugent and M. H. Walsh. During the banquet most of the special prizes were presented. All agreed that the occasion had been a most pleasurable one.

Spring Exhibition.

Entirely apart from the exhibition of the American Rose Society, there was a splendid spring show this year. The arrangement of the plants and cut flowers could hardly have been better. The exhibits of the Rose Society and carnations were staged in the lecture hall. The main exhibition hall was devoted to groups, cyclamen, cinerarias and foliage plants; the small hall to bulbous plants and orchids.

For best pair of palms Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Wm. Thatcher, gardener, and G. F. Fabyan, James Stuart, gardener, won. For three orchids G. F. Fabyan, E. W. Converse, Robt. Marshall, gardener, and E. J. Mitton, Joshua Lawson, gardener, took prizes in order named. E. A. Clark, W. A. Riggs, gardener, had the best pan of hard-wooded plants. Dr. C. G. Weld, W. C. Rust, gardener, took both first and second for acacias. For group of roses M. H. Walsh took all prizes. For hardy primroses W. Whitman, M. Sullivan, gardener, had first and third and Mrs. Gardner second.

For ten cyclamens Fabyan won, Mitton second. For ten plants in not over 7-inch pots Fabyan was first and third, and Dr. Weld second. For single specimen Fabyan was first and Clark second and third. For six cinerarias Fabyan was first, also for three specimens, Converse second. Mrs. Gardner was first and second for Cineraria stellata. This class seemed to take the fancy of visitors much better than the large flowering type.

In the numerous classes devoted to hyacinths, tulips and other bulbous plants the chief prize winners were E. A. Clark, Mrs. Gardner, Bussey Institution and W. Whitman. For best display of Easter plants Clark was first, E. McMulkin second. For display of bulbous plants all classes Bussey Institution won, followed by Clark.

In the rose classes W. H. Elliott won the special prize offered by Mrs. Ames for fifty Mrs. Oliver Ames, Waban Conservatories second. For twenty-five mixed roses Col. Pfaff, Geo. Melvin, gardener, won, W. H. Elliott being second. The last named won first for Brides, Maids, Liberty and "any other." J. McFarland had the best Brunners and Arthur Griffin best Beauties.

Competition was keen in the carnation classes. For 100 of one variety F. R. Pierson won with Enchantress, Patten & Co. and Peter Fisher being second and third. For dark crimson Peter Fisher won with his new seedling, Ruby, Wm. Nicholson and Patten & Co. following with Harry Fenn. For dark pink Peter Fisher won with Lawson, Patten & Co. second on Nelson Fisher and Nicholson third for Lawson. For light pink Nicholson won in a strong class with Enchantress, Fisher and Patten & Co. following. For scarlet Guttman & Weber won with Victory, Fisher and F. R. Pierson being second and third with Flamingo. Fisher won on white with superb Lady Bountiful and was third for his seedling Princess, Patten & Co. second for Lady Bountiful. For yellow Backer & Co. were first with Eldorado and third for Dorothy Whitney, Patten & Co. being second for the latter variety. For white variegated Patten & Co., H. A. Stevens Co. and Peter Fisher won in order named, all showing Mrs. Patten.

In the violet classes H. F. Woods was first for Princess of Wales and Campbell, N. F. Comley first for any other variety single and second for any other double, and F. R. Pierson first for any other double. For cut orchids F. L. Ames estate, W. N. Craig, gardener, won the Appleton silver gilt medal, showing 125 species and varieties. Col. Pfaff won the bronze medal.

The miscellaneous exhibits were very numerous and many of them of great merit. Lager & Hurrell had a fine group of orchids, the dendrobiums being extra good. Cypripedium glaucophyllum received honorable mention. Julius Roehrs Co. had a nice group. A beautiful specimen of Cymbidium Lowianum carrying eight spikes received a cultural certificate and Ficus Cannoni honorable mention. Geo. McWilliam had fine spikes of Cymbidium eburneo x Lowianum, one carrying ten flowers. M. F. Plant, T. W. Head, gardener, received a certificate of merit for a beautiful specimen of Phalenopsis amabilis Rimestediana. E. O. Orpet secured a silver medal for Cattleya x Orlivia (C. intermedia x C. Trianae) raised by himself.

E. W. Converse had a nice group of flowering plants and Farquhar & Co. palms and spring bulbs. Robert Cameron had a splendid group. E. McMulkin had a group of palms and bay trees. M. H. Walsh had a fine group of his seedling roses. H. H. Barrows & Co. received a certificate of merit for Nephrolepis Barrowsii, in the way of Piersoni. L. H. Foster estate had a group of their new Nephrolepis Dorchester, dwarfier than Anna Foster with no tendency to revert; a very promising variety. F. R. Pierson Co. received a certificate of merit for Baby Rambler. They also showed Tarrytown fern. M. H. Walsh received honorable mention for a new double white seedling rose. Bayard Thayer, Wm. Anderson, gardener, showed a fine pan of Phlox divaricata of a pleasing light blue color.

Quite a number of new carnations were shown. Guttman & Weber had Victory in first-class shape. F. R. Pierson showed Winsor. W. J. & M. S. Vesey had a sport from Glendale, which received honorable mention. R. Witterstaetter showed Aristocrat and Afterglow, which did not, however, arrive in good shape. The Chicago Carnation Co. showed Cardinal, which did not arrive well but merited honorable mention. My Maryland from H. Weber & Sons received the same award. They also showed Jessica. John E. Haines from J. E. Haines arrived in grand shape and stood up splendidly. It received honorable mention, as did Fred Burki from John Murchie. L. E. Small showed his white seedling No. 3. E. A. Wood showed Red Lawson. Patten & Co. had Mikado and Pink Patten. Nicholson had splendid Prosperity.

Wm. Sim showed magnificent vases of Mont Blanc, Earliest of All and Earliest Sunbeams sweet peas. The last named, in the way of Mrs. Eckford, should prove valuable, being of a lovely primrose color. Carl Jurgens had fine lily of the valley and M. A. Patten equally fine mignonette. The Misses Eldridge showed a quantity of fine sprays of Bougainvillea spectabilis, which were much admired. James L. Little had fine antirrhinums and Mrs. E. M. Gill a general display.

Convention Jottings.

Lady Gay was the most admired of Walsh's seedlings. Next in favor came Hiawatha and La Fiamma.

The attendance of the public broke all records for spring exhibitions in Boston. The number of gardeners and florists was also greater than at the chrysanthemum show, perhaps owing to the more varied and interesting class of exhibits.

Geo. F. Fabyan, of Brookline, generously furnished an orchestra of thirty pieces to provide music each afternoon and evening of the last three days. It helped to swell the attendance very materially.

Many regrets were expressed that E. G. Hill and John N. May were each prevented by sickness from attending. We all hope they can come in 1906.

Richmond rose arrived the second day, but not in as good condition as we have seen it. Liberty seemed to outclass it. Next year there should be a grand tussle for supremacy between the two.

Some of the visitors wondered why no cigars were passed round until the close of the banquet. The Gardeners' and Florists' Club decided that ladies do not like fumigation any better than some men, so thought cigars would do to carry away in the pockets as souvenirs.

As a rule when men are heard to declare that they cannot speak in public we may expect something good. James Wheeler is a shining example of this truth.

Waban Conservatories, Elliott and other nearby establishments were visited by the visiting rose men, who found things in apple-pie order.

There is nothing slow about "Slug Shot" Hammond. As a speechmaker he is right up to the top notch.

The judges of the Rose Society's exhibits were Peter Crowe, J. F. Huss and W. F. Sheridan. We did not hear any "kicking" over their decisions.

Visitors.

Some of the visitors: Paul Dailedouze, A. H. Langjahr, F. H. Traendly, A. J. Guttman, August Rolker, John B. Nugent, New York; Harry May, J. F. Struck, Summit, N. J.; Thomas Knight, Rutherford, N. SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

The annual meeting of the executive board will be held at the New Willard hotel, Washington, D. C., on Tuesday, April 4, 1905. Members of the society or others having suggestions to make whereby the usefulness of the organization may be increased and the good of the profession promoted in any of its branches, are cordially invited to send such suggestions in care of the secretary and they will receive careful attention. WM. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

generally weighs either too little or too much. With a brush you can put it just where you want it, and in the proper quantity without waste.

It is good policy to apply the permanent shade gradually and instead of leaving every other strip of glass clear at first, I would prefer coating more lightly two-thirds of the whole, using no more material. As the season advances the clear spaces can be filled in until the whole glass space is covered.

Remember that shading produces an unnatural condition and that there is great danger in overdoing the matter, especially early in the season.

A GOOD RED.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph taken at the establishment of James E. Beach, Bridgeport, Conn., showing a bench of a new scarlet carnation which he has been growing very successfully. It is a seedling of Mrs. Geo. M. Bradt and Estelle, the color being ideal for Christmas and the size from three to three and one-half inches. Mr. Beach says he has had a continuous cut all winter. On the back bench is Enchantress only a little higher.

CARNATION TWITTER.

I am sending you a part of a carnation plant with some insects on it that I know as the "carnation twitter." This little insect has destroyed nearly all my plants. Please give me a remedy for it. E. W.

I have never been troubled by the "carnation twitter," as you call it, and I cannot say positively that any of these remedies will destroy it. I do not know, either, what you have done except to fumigate. Perhaps the most effective method would be hydrocyanic-acid gas and if you decide to try this I would advise you to send to the Department of Agriculture, Division of Entomology, for Bulletin No. 27, new series, revised edition. This will tell you all you want to know about how to use it and what precautions to take, etc. Spraying with To-bak-ine Liquid might help materially, too. The specimens of foliage you sent were of no use whatever when they reached me. All foliage and plants should be packed so as to keep fresh until they can be examined, as one

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Shading.

The operation of shading demands more attention or study than it would at first thought seem to merit. There are a number of things to be considered, such as situation of houses, roof construction, sizes of glass and the varieties grown.

If the houses run north and south less heavy shading is required at the beginning than in the case of long span to the south houses. The modern greenhouse being much lighter in every way, it follows that shading must be applied earlier in the season than on the old-style structure of many heavy bars, rafters and small glass. Varieties of delicate color quickly lose their chief attraction if exposed to powerful rays of light, and this is also in a measure true with any shade of color.

Now, while the principal reason for shading may be to temper the sun's effect on color, there is the added advantage of a reduction in temperature. In mid-summer I have noticed a difference of 35 to 40 degrees. In early spring and in some cases during mid-winter it is desirable to shade without materially affecting the temperature, so we employ light cotton cloth or, better still, cheese-cloth suspended some distance over the beds.

By this arrangement it is obvious that the sun's rays being allowed full play through the glass the inside temperature is not reduced to any such extent as if the shade were on the glass surface, but being prevented from striking the benches with full force, there is a slight reduction, though this is offset by the gain in color. This method of shading is used temporarily or at times, the cloth being easily and quickly removed during the cloudy or stormy weather, so likely to occur before settled weather.

For permanent shade, white lead and naphtha mixed to the consistency of milk has been found to give invariable satisfaction. There are various prepared mixtures on the market but not having tried them I cannot speak from experience. However, I should judge them too expensive for the commercial grower.

It is more economical and better all around to apply with a brush. Spatter work is all very well in its way but it can tell but little about a disease or injury on a lot of wilted or dried up foliage.

EVERBLOOMING LORRAINE.

It does not appear to be very commonly known, says a writer in the Gardeners' Magazine, that by cutting away the exhausted flower trusses and very lightly cutting back the growths of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, that plants may be caused to freely break into fresh growth, and again blossom as freely as in the first place. By treating batches of plants in this manner in succession, a lengthy and splendid show can be easily maintained, even up to midsummer. Careful watering, a cool stove temperature, and shade from bright sunshine, are all the cultural requirements. We find plants either grown in pots, or baskets, when suspended in a warm house afford a gorgeous display well into the summer.

ture to keep them going until the flowers are faded. This you can do with any of these lilies, tall or dwarf, but with the very short ones it helps out wonderfully and we realize almost as much as if sold singly. "What beautiful lilies! A new variety, I suppose," exclaimed many ladies. "Yes ma'am, quite new." This Easter we should not hesitate to tell our patrons that these beautiful little lilies are the "Kurokiensis" variety!

Sweet Peas.

Don't forget that the favorite sweet peas should be sown just as soon as you can work the ground. Two years ago we sowed in the open ground on March 9. That was very early for these parts. If you prepared the trenches last fall and dug in a liberal allowance of manure, you have a great advantage now, for you have only to draw a drill three inches deep with the hoe, and in goes the seed. If that were not done then too, heavily manure and plow the whole patch where the peas are going. This must be done directly the land can be worked. Let the rows be four feet apart and sow thinly. Go up and down the row with the hoe, making a broad, deep trench. You need not fill in all the soil at once. When you hoe after the peas are up a few inches you can pull in the remainder of the soil. If possible let the rows run north and south and when the peas are four or five inches high put brush both sides of the rows. Don't wait until the vine is sprawling on the ground. Brush from the woods may be difficult to procure on the fat prairies of Illinois or the spruce covered rocks of Colorado, but I cannot think of anything equal for supporting peas.

Pansies.

This has been a most favorable winter for those universal favorites, the pansies. Many of the beds in the Buffalo parks were filled with pansies last October and with a light covering of straw the plants are now large and thrifty and soon will be showing their saucy faces to the public. Usually, if not hurt by the winter blasts, the plants are heaved up, and sometimes there is an inch or two of wiry stem. As soon as the ground is at all dry go over all the plants in your beds and with two fingers and one thumb press the little plants firmly into the ground. It will be the making of them.

Pruning Shrubs.

About now the florist who does a general business and wishes to accommodate his good customers in all their reasonable demands is called upon to prune shrubs. They are often victims of men who go around asking for the job, "professors" with a pair of gloves, a knife and saw, who know as much about it as they do of the flora of Neptune. Anybody can cut two feet off the shoot of last year's growth, but that is not pruning. Anywhere towards spring, or before the leaf or flower buds start, is the time and in our latitude now or for the next few weeks is the ideal time.

While on this subject let me say that deciduous trees can seldom be improved with pruning and do not need it. Their natural form is their beauty and, unless imperative, leave pruning of these until they have made their growth. If grow-

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Bulbous Stock for Easter.

Several correspondents mention in their notes of last week that bulbous stuff is likely to be scarce at Easter on account of Easter arriving so late. I should think you would have to cross the Rockies or go far south for this to occur. If you have kept your tulips, hyacinths, and narcissi out of doors, covered with a few inches of soil and the same of straw manure, there has been such a covering of snow that little if any frost has touched the soil in the flats and every day now they will be reaching up to daylight. The greatest trouble now is to keep the stems from becoming long and crooked. When tulips begin to hang over the flats and stems are weak and twisted, they are no longer very salable. Another thing to consider is that if they are left out much longer they will be through the covering of litter and their leaves will quickly expand and then it is a terrible job to get the flats cleaned of the covering.

These bulbous flowers are not such a very important flower at Easter, but you may as well have them right, after all the labor and expense. We feel sure that two weeks on the greenhouse bench will be all the time necessary to give the single tulips, Dutch hyacinths, Von Sion narcissi or any of the Trumpet narcissi. If making too much growth outside, then put up a cold frame not less than two feet deep, raise the sash bar back and front, so that a draught of air will pass over them, and heavily shade the sash. If the flats are cleaned and placed in such a frame it will retard them more than if left in the beds and if the weather should be bright and mild they will want no greenhouse at all.

Making Up Pans.

If you neglected (I was going to say forgot) to put the bulbs in pans last fall you can still have hyacinths and tulips in most acceptable shape in any sized pan you choose and it is no imposition on your customers. I have seen tulips pulled out of flats this winter, very ruthlessly made up into pots and pans and delivered right away. They last in bloom just about as long as those grown in the pans. Yet don't do it carelessly. Get all the roots you can. Never mind if all the soil shakes off and always do this transplanting when the soil in the flats is wet. Hyacinths we transplant just as they are showing color, tulips and narcissi a little later, about when they are full grown, but the petals not expanded. This plan is very workable with Dutch hyacinths and with narcissi and tulips if they have straight, stout stems, but if your Yellow Prince or Cottage Maid have assumed the graceful form of a swan's neck, don't attempt it, for it cannot be done.

This is also the very best plan to make up a pan or pot of lily of the valley. Let the bells be nearly all open. As they make no root in the sand that you forced them in, they do not suffer in the least from a change to the pan and you can select stems of equal growth. Fill the pan as thickly as you like.

Speaking of pans and pots, the ordinary pan is rather shallow for some of these things, valley for instance, and the ordinary pot is deep for its width and rather unsightly for the purpose for which these arrangements are often used, table decorations perhaps, so we use what may be called the half pot, but which we know as the azalea pot. Where you put four or five longiflorum lilies into a 10 or 12-inch azalea pot it is just the thing, while the ordinary pot would look unwieldy.

Lilies for Easter.

Now that I have mentioned this important plant we may as well finish all that can be said about it for Easter. If when you read these lines some of the largest buds are turning white, you are all right. When once the buds are white they will open in a cool, shady house and flowers that are open will last ten days in a cool, dark shed. The darkness is of importance. Plants that are later, say with buds from two to three inches long, will come along very fast now and be there in time if you give them 60 to 65 degrees at night.

The first year we grew the black-stemmed giganteum many came very dwarf, as they are again this year, but they were not a failure. You can take a big sharp knife (your wife's carving knife suits best) and slice down the ball of a plant grown in a 6-inch pot until it is only four inches square and then you can squeeze three of these plants into an 8-inch azalea pot, or five plants into a 12-inch, and so on. The plants will open every bud and be in appearance equal to one undisturbed. They have lost roots, lots of them, but the fresh cut roots take up enough moising or getting too dense, prune at the end of July. You will see better then just what is necessary to cut away. Evergreens, so-called, also want little pruning unless used for hedges, and this is better done in July.

The time to prune a hedge of a deciduous shrub will depend entirely on what the shrub is. If it is privet, then now is the time to prune and it should be pruned back to within five or six inches of where the growth started last spring. A chapter could be written on the mismanagement of these privet hedges. It is more often due to the impatience of the owner, who wants a fine hedge in about two years. The increase in its size must be slow and gradual. It should be broad at the base, narrowing to the top. It is more times seen the reverse and when that is the case there are only naked stems for a foot or two, as ornamental as a board fence!

The beautiful little Berberis Thunbergii, so hardy and neat, should be pruned now. It is not right to attempt to keep this plant as formal as a privet. Cutting back the strongest growths with a knife is all that should be done. The cydonia (Japanese quince) makes a most beautiful hedge. Don't touch it until it is out of flower; then prune. The African tamarix is also used for a hedge where formality is not wanted. It should not be touched in the spring until its innumerable little pink blossoms are gone; then cut hard back.

When to Prune.

Broadly speaking, nearly all shrubs can be classed into two groups as far as pruning is concerned; viz., those that set their flower buds in the fall and those that flower on the current or spring and summer growth. We will take the common lilac as an example of the first group. The lilac sets its flower buds the previous summer and fall and is ready to burst into bloom at Gen. Spring's summons. Now, to cut back severely the last summer's growth would result in your getting a strong growth but little flower. So all this class, if pruning is necessary at all, and it does amount to a necessity with some, should be pruned directly the bloom has dropped.

As an example of the other group, or those which should be pruned in early spring, we will take the popular hardy Hydrangea paniculata. If you left all the last year's wood you would get a growth from every eye, but it would be crowded and weak and the flowers would be small. By cutting last summer's growth back to, say, four or five eyes you would get plenty of strong growths and large flowers. There are also shrubs that, when well established, want to be left alone. Here are a few familiar shrubs and the time to prune them.

Prune after flowering: Pyrus Japonica, forsythia, tamarix, Prunus triloba, dwarf almond, Spiræa prunifolia, deutzia, lilac, hardy azaleas, staphylea.

A very good guide is that the early flowering shrubs should be pruned after flowering and the late flowering kinds before they start in the spring.

A PLEA FOR VARIETY.

We are in receipt of the following communication from a Philadelphia reader who addresses his letter "Dear REVIEW" and refers to himself as an amateur florist, which he certainly is not. He probably meant amateur contributor, but his ideas are worthy of consideration, and we take pleasure in printing the letter:

"I trust that it may not be thought conceited for me, an amateur florist, to give some ideas to professionals. I have learned much from you; the articles you print have helped me much in my little business, but to the point.

"The carnation from the buyers' point of view is losing its value. It was fashionable, it became popular and now it is getting out of date. Still the growers devote much space and time to its cultivation. The papers are full of pictures of new sorts and the best methods of raising them. The florists and growers appreciate their size and beauty, but the public does not. To them Lawson and our great Fiancee are the same, both pink carnations, nothing more.

"I arrange decorations. Recently when we were discussing flowers for a dinner table, the lady threw up her hands and exclaimed: 'Not carnations! I would as soon give my guests plain boiled potatoes, as the carnations one sees everywhere.'

"There is a great demand for flowers one does not see everywhere and has not seen for a number of years past at all the private and public entertainments. I have tried to get camellias and primroses enough to make up into many bouquets, without much success. In Paris I could have been supplied with any amount of them in their season. Stocks can tell but little about a disease or injury on a lot of wilted or dried up foliage.

EVERBLOOMING LORRAINE.

It does not appear to be very commonly known, says a writer in the Gardeners' Magazine, that by cutting away the exhausted flower trusses and very lightly cutting back the growths of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, that plants may be caused to freely break into fresh growth, and again blossom as freely as in the first place. By treating batches of plants in this manner in succession, a lengthy and splendid show can be easily maintained, even up to midsummer. Careful watering, a cool stove temperature, and shade from bright sunshine, are all the cultural requirements. We find plants either grown in pots, or baskets, when suspended in a warm house afford a gorgeous display well into the summer.

ture to keep them going until the flowers are faded. This you can do with any of these lilies, tall or dwarf, but with the very short ones it helps out wonderfully and we realize almost as much as if sold singly. "What beautiful lilies! A new variety, I suppose," exclaimed many ladies. "Yes ma'am, quite new." This Easter we should not hesitate to tell our patrons that these beautiful little lilies are the "Kurokiensis" variety!

Sweet Peas.

Don't forget that the favorite sweet peas should be sown just as soon as you can work the ground. Two years ago we sowed in the open ground on March 9. That was very early for these parts. If you prepared the trenches last fall and dug in a liberal allowance of manure, you have a great advantage now, for you have only to draw a drill three inches deep with the hoe, and in goes the seed. If that were not done then too, heavily manure and plow the whole patch where the peas are going. This must be done directly the land can be worked. Let the rows be four feet apart and sow thinly. Go up and down the row with the hoe, making a broad, deep trench. You need not fill in all the soil at once. When you hoe after the peas are up a few inches you can pull in the remainder of the soil. If possible let the rows run north and south and when the peas are four or five inches high put brush both sides of the rows. Don't wait until the vine is sprawling on the ground. Brush from the woods may be difficult to procure on the fat prairies of Illinois or the spruce covered rocks of Colorado, but I cannot think of anything equal for supporting peas.

Pansies.

This has been a most favorable winter for those universal favorites, the pansies. Many of the beds in the Buffalo parks were filled with pansies last October and with a light covering of straw the plants are now large and thrifty and soon will be showing their saucy faces to the public. Usually, if not hurt by the winter blasts, the plants are heaved up, and sometimes there is an inch or two of wiry stem. As soon as the ground is at all dry go over all the plants in your beds and with two fingers and one thumb press the little plants firmly into the ground. It will be the making of them.

Pruning Shrubs.

About now the florist who does a general business and wishes to accommodate his good customers in all their reasonable demands is called upon to prune shrubs. They are often victims of men who go around asking for the job, "professors" with a pair of gloves, a knife and saw, who know as much about it as they do of the flora of Neptune. Anybody can cut two feet off the shoot of last year's growth, but that is not pruning. Anywhere towards spring, or before the leaf or flower buds start, is the time and in our latitude now or for the next few weeks is the ideal time.

While on this subject let me say that deciduous trees can seldom be improved with pruning and do not need it. Their natural form is their beauty and, unless imperative, leave pruning of these until they have made their growth. If grow-

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Bulbous Stock for Easter.

Several correspondents mention in their notes of last week that bulbous stuff is likely to be scarce at Easter on account of Easter arriving so late. I should think you would have to cross the Rockies or go far south for this to occur. If you have kept your tulips, hyacinths, and narcissi out of doors, covered with a few inches of soil and the same of straw manure, there has been such a covering of snow that little if any frost has touched the soil in the flats and every day now they will be reaching up to daylight. The greatest trouble now is to keep the stems from becoming long and crooked. When tulips begin to hang over the flats and stems are weak and twisted, they are no longer very salable. Another thing to consider is that if they are left out much longer they will be through the covering of litter and their leaves will quickly expand and then it is a terrible job to get the flats cleaned of the covering.

These bulbous flowers are not such a very important flower at Easter, but you may as well have them right, after all the labor and expense. We feel sure that two weeks on the greenhouse bench will be all the time necessary to give the single tulips, Dutch hyacinths, Von Sion narcissi or any of the Trumpet narcissi. If making too much growth outside, then put up a cold frame not less than two feet deep, raise the sash bar back and front, so that a draught of air will pass over them, and heavily shade the sash. If the flats are cleaned and placed in such a frame it will retard them more than if left in the beds and if the weather should be bright and mild they will want no greenhouse at all.

Making Up Pans.

If you neglected (I was going to say forgot) to put the bulbs in pans last fall you can still have hyacinths and tulips in most acceptable shape in any sized pan you choose and it is no imposition on your customers. I have seen tulips pulled out of flats this winter, very ruthlessly made up into pots and pans and delivered right away. They last in bloom just about as long as those grown in the pans. Yet don't do it carelessly. Get all the roots you can. Never mind if all the soil shakes off and always do this transplanting when the soil in the flats is wet. Hyacinths we transplant just as they are showing color, tulips and narcissi a little later, about when they are full grown, but the petals not expanded. This plan is very workable with Dutch hyacinths and with narcissi and tulips if they have straight, stout stems, but if your Yellow Prince or Cottage Maid have assumed the graceful form of a swan's neck, don't attempt it, for it cannot be done.

This is also the very best plan to make up a pan or pot of lily of the valley. Let the bells be nearly all open. As they make no root in the sand that you forced them in, they do not suffer in the least from a change to the pan and you can select stems of equal growth. Fill the pan as thickly as you like.

Speaking of pans and pots, the ordinary pan is rather shallow for some of these things, valley for instance, and the ordinary pot is deep for its width and rather unsightly for the purpose for which these arrangements are often used, table decorations perhaps, so we use what may be called the half pot, but which we know as the azalea pot. Where you put four or five longiflorum lilies into a 10 or 12-inch azalea pot it is just the thing, while the ordinary pot would look unwieldy.

Lilies for Easter.

Now that I have mentioned this important plant we may as well finish all that can be said about it for Easter. If when you read these lines some of the largest buds are turning white, you are all right. When once the buds are white they will open in a cool, shady house and flowers that are open will last ten days in a cool, dark shed. The darkness is of importance. Plants that are later, say with buds from two to three inches long, will come along very fast now and be there in time if you give them 60 to 65 degrees at night.

The first year we grew the black-stemmed giganteum many came very dwarf, as they are again this year, but they were not a failure. You can take a big sharp knife (your wife's carving knife suits best) and slice down the ball of a plant grown in a 6-inch pot until it is only four inches square and then you can squeeze three of these plants into an 8-inch azalea pot, or five plants into a 12-inch, and so on. The plants will open every bud and be in appearance equal to one undisturbed. They have lost roots, lots of them, but the fresh cut roots take up enough moising or getting too dense, prune at the end of July. You will see better than just what is necessary to cut away. Evergreens, so-called, also want little pruning unless used for hedges, and this is better done in July.

The time to prune a hedge of a deciduous shrub will depend entirely on what the shrub is. If it is privet, then now is the time to prune and it should be pruned back to within five or six inches of where the growth started last spring. A chapter could be written on the mismanagement of these privet hedges. It is more often due to the impatience of the owner, who wants a fine hedge in about two years. The increase in its size must be slow and gradual. It should be broad at the base, narrowing to the top. It is more times seen the reverse and when that is the case there are only naked stems for a foot or two, as ornamental as a board fence!

The beautiful little Berberis Thunbergii, so hardy and neat, should be pruned now. It is not right to attempt to keep this plant as formal as a privet. Cutting back the strongest growths with a knife is all that should be done. The cydonia (Japanese quince) makes a most beautiful hedge. Don't touch it until it is out of flower; then prune. The African tamarix is also used for a hedge where formality is not wanted. It should not be touched in the spring until its innumerable little pink blossoms are gone; then cut hard back.

When to Prune.

Broadly speaking, nearly all shrubs can be classed into two groups as far as pruning is concerned; viz., those that set their flower buds in the fall and those that flower on the current or spring and summer growth. We will take the common lilac as an example of the first group. The lilac sets its flower buds the previous summer and fall and is ready to burst into bloom at Gen. Spring's summons. Now, to cut back severely the last summer's growth would result in your getting a strong growth but little flower. So all this class, if pruning is necessary at all, and it does amount to a necessity with some, should be pruned directly the bloom has dropped.

As an example of the other group, or those which should be pruned in early spring, we will take the popular hardy Hydrangea paniculata. If you left all the last year's wood you would get a growth from every eye, but it would be crowded and weak and the flowers would be small. By cutting last summer's growth back to, say, four or five eyes you would get plenty of strong growths and large flowers. There are also shrubs that, when well established, want to be left alone. Here are a few familiar shrubs and the time to prune them.

Prune after flowering: Pyrus Japonica, forsythia, tamarix, Prunus triloba, dwarf almond, Spiraea prunifolia, deutzia, lilac, hardy azaleas, staphylea.

A very good guide is that the early flowering shrubs should be pruned after flowering and the late flowering kinds before they start in the spring.

A PLEA FOR VARIETY.

We are in receipt of the following communication from a Philadelphia reader who addresses his letter "Dear REVIEW" and refers to himself as an amateur florist, which he certainly is not. He probably meant amateur contributor, but his ideas are worthy of consideration, and we take pleasure in printing the letter:

"I trust that it may not be thought conceited for me, an amateur florist, to give some ideas to professionals. I have learned much from you; the articles you print have helped me much in my little business, but to the point.

"The carnation from the buyers' point of view is losing its value. It was fashionable, it became popular and now it is getting out of date. Still the growers devote much space and time to its cultivation. The papers are full of pictures of new sorts and the best methods of raising them. The florists and growers appreciate their size and beauty, but the public does not. To them Lawson and our great Fiancee are the same, both pink carnations, nothing more.

"I arrange decorations. Recently when we were discussing flowers for a dinner table, the lady threw up her hands and exclaimed: 'Not carnations!' I would as soon give my guests plain boiled potatoes, as the carnations one sees everywhere."

"There is a great demand for flowers one does not see everywhere and has not seen for a number of years past at all the private and public entertainments. I have tried to get camellias and prim-roses enough to make up into many bouquets, without much success. In Paris I could have been supplied with any amount of them in their season. Stocks would come in nicely, but very few are to be had, also pelargoniums in the spring. London people make much use of these with very pretty results.

"I run two small greenhouses and have made a successful experiment in late planting of tuberous begonias, so as to have them in good bloom under glass in October, after all outdoors is frozen and before cyclamen, primroses, Lorraine, etc., are ready. The buying public does not care to have flowers like carnations that are on the market twelve months in the year. Violets have been overdone. I am sure the growers can think of some stock with which they can more profitably fill their houses in the future."

SEASONABLE NOTES.

With the advent of spring, when we may expect long periods of sunshine, we can indulge more freely in ventilation and as the spring growth has now made its appearance it is absolutely necessary to give air freely in order to keep the foliage from becoming soft and to encourage the setting of buds.

By judicious ventilation we may also in a great measure prevent the ravages of mildew, which from now on during the remainder of the season is one of our most persistent enemies and, as less firing will be required from day to day, our means of curtailing its inroads are lessened. Intelligent use of the ventilators will help us materially in our fight.

The essential elements in the soil being now partly exhausted, we must resort to some method of supplying food to our stock, as the heavy growths demand a constant supply in order to perfectly develop both foliage and bud. A light, rich mulch should now be applied, as this fills the double purpose of supplying food and protecting the tender feeding roots, which have approached the surface, from being injured by the intense sunshine.

When the mulching is partly exhausted liquid feeding should be applied, especially where the plants are strong and healthy, as they are fully capable of digesting this class of food, which is more immediate in its results than mulching. It has also the advantage that it can be applied to the crop at the proper time and at the required strength to suit the case.

As the weather gets warmer our old enemy, red spider, will begin to get busy if not looked after sharply, but as we can now use water more freely we can by the exercise of a little energy and careful observation keep them in check. Thrips and green fly will also multiply rapidly if left undisturbed for even a short period and it is well to have them in strict subjection before the warm weather really commences, when fumigation becomes more difficult and injurious to the plants.

As the busy season of Easter approaches, when work accumulates so rapidly and every hour is fully occupied, these duties must not be neglected, as we must remember that our customers will require their wants supplied after the hurry and bustle of Easter are past and that they will then be no less critical as to quality and it is a hard matter to keep the quality up to the standard after that period, even under the best of treatment.

Young grafted stock should be carefully looked after, so that no injury may happen to the union by the tying material becoming too tight and cutting into the bark, as this is liable to happen when growth is strong. It is also well to keep all suckers removed before they become strong, as they are much easier kept in check if taken at that stage and do less injury, both to stock and scion.

ROSES FOR NEXT SPRING SALES.

What is the cheapest method of propagating and wintering Crimson Rambler, Baby Rambler and bedding roses for spring sales 1906? J. P. K.

It's not quite clear to me whether you want these plants for forcing in spring of 1906 or only to sell to customers for their gardens. It is late now to propagate. Ramblers are propagated from the half-ripened wood in October and kept cool all winter. They also root freely in February from blind shoots of the plants you are forcing. These young plants, put in the open ground in May, will be strong plants in the fall. If for planting out the following spring they are better left in the open ground. They may kill down to within a few inches of the ground, but are none the worse for that, as you would cut them down when transplanting.

If you intend to force Ramblers next year, then buy some strong one-year-old plants at once and put them in 6-inch pots. Cut them low down, start cool and grow them under glass until August. By that time they should have made four or five canes, five or six feet long. These plants force with ease the following winter.

By bedding roses we must assume is meant the teas, hybrid teas and Bourbons. That great and splendid class of roses called hybrid remontant or hybrid perpetual are not really perpetual, although under good cultivation some varieties do send up a sprinkling of flowers throughout the fall. Our finest teas are also not satisfactory outdoors. While a few of the teas, all the hybrid teas and Bourbons are the roses for summer blooming, Maman Cochet and its white form are pure teas and great summer roses. President Carnot and La France are hybrid teas. Hermosa and Mrs. De-Graw are Bourbons. I have only selected these few as types of their class. They are propagated from September on until frost arrives, from the wood made during summer, just as you do the tea roses in winter. If old plants are started in February you can propagate from young growths as late as May. You doubtless know that tender, succulent growth of roses will not root and it must have attained a certain firmness.

Plants rooted in October, if wintered cool and shifted and started to grow in March, will make acceptable bedding roses in May, yet most people want a good-sized plant and if young plants are put into the open ground in May, lifted and potted in early November and wintered in a very cool house, or even in a cold frame, they will be fine plants for bedding in the following spring. The man who has this style of plants can always command a good price for them.

HARDY GARDEN ROSES.

[A paper by M. H. Walsh, read before the American Rose Society at Boston, March 24, 1905.]

A great deal has been written by eminent rosarians and poets often have sung the praises of the most beautiful of flowers, the queen of them all, the rose. This flower is pre-eminently entitled to this honor for the many purposes for which it is valued from the cradle to the grave.

It is cheering to note the awakening of a new and live interest which is being manifested by amateurs and others in the growing of hardy garden roses. The increased demand for these plants for the past five years is sufficient proof.

About twenty years ago the National Rose Society of England was organized, the aim and object of this society being to promote and encourage the culture of the rose and to disseminate practical information for the proper growth and cultivation of this flower. It is through the untiring efforts and the influence of this organization that the rose is so generally grown by the amateur and the cottager as well as by the wealthy class.

The American Rose Society is organized on practically the same principle, the aim and object being to promote a greater interest in the growing of the rose and to educate in its culture those who love the flower and desire to grow it.

The American Rose Society includes in its membership men, the greater part of whose lives have been devoted largely to the growing of roses, and who by their wide experience are well qualified to give the information so many people desire in relation to rose culture. The amateur rose growers especially are seeking and anxious to receive such directions.

There are several essentials in the growing of roses. The first is the soil; this would apply in a general way. A large number who buy roses know nothing about what soil is best suited for these plants. This I know from my experience with purchasers. While they are often familiar with the varieties, they admit they know nothing whatever about preparing the ground. Hundreds of these people would be willing to become members of the Rose Society, could they receive some practical cultural directions concerning rose growing.

It is surprising how many buy roses and continue to buy and replace them simply through lack of knowledge how to properly care for them. They buy through love of the flower for its own sake. Many know not whether they should be planted on the north side or in a southern exposure. They are not familiar with and know practically nothing about pruning and properly guarding against insect pests. In fact, the large majority of those who buy roses year after year have but little practical knowledge relating to the proper care and the attention these plants require for successful growth.

It seems to the writer that the Rose Society should give practical cultural directions and instructions to those seeking such, and begin and educate the masses who are interested in roses. This could be done by publishing a practical treatise on the rose for the amateur, or could be issued in the form of a bulletin to all members of the society.

When this became known I believe the membership would rapidly increase and the bulletin, if found desirable, could give information applicable to all points of this country. There are members well qualified in the different sections of the country to give the practical cultural directions treating on soil, situation, pruning, selection of varieties of hybrid teas, hybrid perpetuals, Japanese and their hybrids, climbing roses, Rambler roses and their various uses.

This matter wisely followed up would make the Rose Society the official organ, the recognized authority on all matters relating to the rose. At the present time the society may not be ready to take up this matter or approve of these suggestions, but I feel sure they will receive their earnest consideration.

The Carnation Society is prosperous and the grand results in the increasing popularity of this flower, the perfection of the blooms in color, size and texture are surprising and gratifying. The Chrysanthemum Society is prosperous and the wonderful advance in the development of this flower is marvelous. The peony has also a society and they are formulating plans for the classification and correct naming of the varieties. These societies are to be congratulated for the zeal and perseverance and for the grand and noble work they have done in their respective spheres.

The Rose Society is waking to a realization of its duties which is gratifying, and the officers of the society have worked zealously the last year, and are entitled to the thanks and hearty co-operation of all its members. Let us hope that the interest now being manifested will stimulate our rose growers to produce new and superior varieties of American origin and better adapted to our climate.

May the good work continue and the rose always hold the honor and title of queen of flowers and the garden!

CATTLEYA MOSSIAE.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph taken at the greenhouses of H. G. Selfridge, Lake Geneva, Wis., whose orchid grower, C. H. Gebhardt, supplies the following note on the plant and its culture:

"This is a very free flowering species from La Guayra. It blooms from March to the first part of summer.

The flowers are large, six inches across, three or four growing on one spike. We have many shades of colors, from pale pink to crimson and rose purple. We grow them in fern roots with a little moss and keep them in the cattleya house with the rest. We grow nearly all cattleyas in the Brazilian house. We supply them with plenty of heat and atmospheric moisture and not too much water at the roots when growing. We keep them syringed twice a day in bright weather. After growth is completed we allow them to rest and keep them rather dry, giving them just enough water to keep them from shriveling. Cattleyas require all the light possible, so we do not shade so heavily and give them plenty of ventilation in bright weather, but do not expose to draughts."

A FINE HYDRANGEA.

Just at this time, when growers are watching their Easter plants with solicitous eye, it is of interest to see to what the hydrangea attains in favored localities in England. The plant illustrated had 147 heads and the size is apparent in the picture. In Cornwall, Devon and Hastings the older plants often reach greater size but frequently the growths are permitted to be so crowded that the flower heads do not attain full development. Hydrangeas, especially the hortensis type, are great feeders. They should have a heavy, rich loam with good drainage, so that abundant water may be supplied while growing and flowering. H. paniculata is hardy, but H. hortensis will not stand many degrees of frost.

FRAME FOR VIOLETS.

I have a frame 6x90 along the south side of the rose house, heated by one run, flow and return, of 2-inch water pipes. Is this place good to grow violets? If so, kindly tell what soil is best, when to plant, what kind of plants and general treatment. Will want the frame for vegetable plants in March.

J. P. K.

I think you can grow violets in the frame; 40 to 45 degrees at night is high enough and if it dropped to freezing point they will not be ruined. Plant in a good, rather heavy loam. The ideal would be a sod laid up last fall, with a fifth or sixth of cow manure mixed with it and chopped up and well mixed this spring. Plant not later than June 15, a few weeks sooner if your frame is empty. Keep the red-spider away by daily syringing and the black fly destroyed or, better, prevented by tobacco dust. The situation south of a rose house will be a hot one and you should have the means of shading on all bright, sunny days. Nothing is better or quicker applied than a roll of cheese-cloth, but let it be at least a foot above the plants, so that there is a free and abundant circulation of air on the plants.

Put your glazed sash on the frame by the end of September. We have seen perfect novices succeed with violets wonderfully the first year or two. We have also, alas, seen veterans fail most wonderfully after years of experience. All about violets cannot be told in a few lines and it is well worth buying a book on them, written by a specialist. I meant to add, start with a young plant propagated this spring from a cutting, and we think there is no variety so good as the Imperial, an improvement on the beautiful Marie Louise. W. S.

FLORIST.....

WOES OF A RURAL RETAILER.

An article in last week's REVIEW moves my spirit to utterance. It, the above mentioned spirit, has been simmering for several weeks, or even months, and at last it must find a vent even like the giant geyser of the Yellowstone country.

First, to take things as they come, Phil's answer No. 36 in the Philadelphia notes. It's all right, of course it is, but what an awful lot of trouble this department store-street-fakir business does make for us poor small town retail strugglers, even if it does make a good outlet for the commission house surplus. Just look at it from our point of view a minute. Only a very, very few, comparatively, raise enough cut stock for our demand. We order from some wholesaler and pay 2, 2½, 3 or even 4 cents for carnations. To save our lives we can't get more than 75 cents per dozen, at the outside, no matter what size of flower or length of stem we offer; 50 cents is the average limit. And at that this is what we hear, generally over the 'phone:

"Fifty cents a dozen."

"Good gracious! You're awfully high!"

"No ma'am, That is very low for this time of year."

"Why, I was in such or such a city last week and they were selling at 35 cents."

"Our stock is very large and we guarantee it fresh. It will last much longer than the stock you saw at such low prices."

"Why they were immense, great, big things with great long stems."

"We cannot sell our stock at such prices." "Well, I'll take half a dozen at that price." (Emphasis on "that.")

Now we know the stuff that was offered at such a price might possibly last through dinner if you bought it late in the afternoon, hurried home, kept it in a cool place till ready to sit down to the table, and did not have so very much to eat so you could get through soon, but you might talk till you piled up overtime 'phone fees sky high and you could not convince the party that you were not practically "sand-bagging" them to the amount of the difference in price they claim.

Then there's another bewildering question: The small town producer with 1,000 or 1,500 feet of glass who does grow his own stock, carnations especially, such as they are! Flowers that take stretching to reach the 2-inch line on the gauge. Stems that wobble most helplessly if they reach over a foot in length. They also sell at from 25 to 35 cents per dozen. How they manage to make salt at that price, with fuel and labor where they are at present, is certainly too great a problem for this weak brain to solve. But that's not the question. You show carnations lapping the 3-inch line out of sight, stems eighteen to twenty inches, nice and stiff, with nice crisp foliage clear up.

"How much?"

"Fifty cents."

"Why so and so in Scrabbletown never asks more than 35 cents!"

That very stock probably cost you 3 cents, and you know "so and so's" stock won't touch it, but—what are you going to do about it, as the bandit said when he held a man up with his own pistol?

Won't some of the floral sages please give "balm of Gilead" or wise counsel of some sort as to a remedy, verbal or otherwise, for this truly vexing trouble (worse than Primula obconica poisoning for most of us). It really tempts to strong language, but—well, the Editor will know why that remedy is impossible here. F. E. C.

PIPING VIOLET HOUSES.

We have five houses each 17x100, detached, ridges eight feet high and side walls two and one-half feet. There is sixteen inches of glass in the south wall of each house; solid beds are used. The boiler has ample capacity, but can be set no deeper than two feet in the ground because of poor drainage. How should the houses be piped to maintain 40 degrees in zero weather? We have on hand a lot of 2-inch and 3-inch pipe which we would like to use, and we should prefer to have the water at 160 degrees at the boiler for ease of firing. W. C. P.

I take it that you wish to run your boiler on a low rather than a high heat. 160 rather than 180 degrees. That will, of course, require more piping in the houses to maintain the required temperature, but it may be more economical to install more pipe and pay less for firing. With the water in the boiler at 160 degrees each of the houses 17x100 will require 490 feet of radiation to maintain a temperature of 40 degrees. In order to provide heat for this area of pipe the risers through the houses should not be smaller than 2½ inches. Since you state that you have 3-inch pipe on hand this might be used for the risers or flow pipes. If 2-inch pipe is used in the returns, seven pipes will be needed the length of each house. This will provide a slight excess of radiation, but none too much to be within the safety limit.

In order to heat these houses the boiler should have a heating capacity of at least 4,000 feet of radiation. An expansion tank placed eight to ten feet above the highest point in the system and connected with the main return to the boiler by a ¾-inch pipe should give sufficient pressure for the system. The expansion tank itself should have at least forty gallons capacity and fifty gallons would be better. With the boiler so near the surface of the ground I think it would be wise to pipe the houses with the main flow pipe under the ridge and running to the most distant point in each house before dividing to supply the seven 2-inch returns.

If it is desirable to use 3-inch pipe in the returns four pipes only will be required. L. C. C.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

For several weeks past it has occurred that Tuesday was the dullest day of the period, the market being burdened with stock, with few buyers. Such was the case last week, with business showing a gradual improvement until Friday night saw many large, if cheap, orders going out, with the market well cleaned up on Saturday and encouragingly brisk on Monday. Tuesday again saw an absence of demand and the receipts exceedingly heavy. The thermometer registered 75 degrees and values were very unstable, a big lot of stock having to be carried over.

The principal change in market conditions during the past week has been in Beauties. The spring crop has come on very rapidly and there are now large supplies of long-stemmed, fancy stock which is good value at quoted rates, but which can be bought cheaply where a quantity can be used. It looks very much as if Beauties were going to command low prices for the next month, with a probability that Easter will see a large supply.

There is little apparent change in the rose market. There appear to be more Maids than Brides. Liberty is not in large supply and a considerable part of the receipts are short-stemmed. Meteor is seldom seen. Chatenay is of excellent quality. Uncle John is fine. The quality of teas in general is very high but a continuance of the warm weather will soon reduce their size. The carnation market is weak, with large receipts but fairly active business except on Tuesday. A low limit is set by what the special sale stores are willing to pay for whatever accumulation may be on hand Friday afternoon.

There is a good demand for single violets, although only moderate prices are realized. The New York stock still comes in heavily and sells cheaply. The outdoor bulbous stock is beginning to cut into sales of the greenhouse product. The shipments are now coming from as far northern points as Carbondale, Ill., and it looks as though local outdoor bulbous stock will be in earlier this year than ever before. Fancy tulips still sell fairly well, but the low grade moves slowly. Valley continues plentiful. Callas are a glut and many going to waste. Easter lilies are abundant, but many are small and poor. There are varying opinions as to what the Easter supply will be. Some report that their lilies will be early, and others say that they are not going to make it in time without hard forcing. It looks as though there would be plenty of lilies of low quality but none too many of good grade. Only four large lots are in sight but there are many smaller ones.

There continue to be large supplies of asparagus but smilax is becoming scarce. Common ferns are not keeping well and require a great deal of picking over. Wild smilax also is of inferior quality.

Florists' Club.

The Florists' Club's trade show was held on a very rainy day, which reduced the number of exhibitors and visitors, but both were satisfactory and a good many orders were placed. The display which attracted most attention was a vase of Lady Margaret carnation. The judges scored it ninety points and awarded a certificate. Weiland & Risch exhibited 100 Brides and 100 Maids, wonderful stock for this season. The grower is D. J. Murphy, a new man in these parts but evidently one who knows his business. John Breitmeyer's Sons sent La Detroit with five-foot stems and three vases of splendid antirrhinum, yellow, white and pink. The E. F. Winterson Co. showed a glass case of Easter chicks and ducks, ribbon, boxes and fern dishes, also vases and Boston ferns. The Garfield Park Flower Co. brought a fine lot of plants, including hydrangeas, lilies, primroses, a beautiful Prof. Wolters azalea, etc. Vaughan's Greenhouses had a fine table of plants, including Baby Rambler and Pink Rambler roses, rhododendrons, box trees, etc. H. N. Bruns had two finely decorated pans of good valley. J. W. Dudley & Son, Parkersburg, W. Va., sent three hydrangeas of just the size the average retailer likes and will doubtless profit by their enterprise. J. E. Haines, of Bethlehem, Pa., sent his red carnation. Everybody likes it but it had suffered somewhat on its long journey in a pasteboard box.

The Winandy Matter.

An agreement has been reached among the creditors of Michael Winandy whereby the assets have been turned over to three trustees, Peter Reinberg, E. C. Day, who was the receiver appointed by the court, and Carl Ickes, of the A. Dietsch Co. They have placed Jake Greiner, formerly at Reinberg's, in charge of the greenhouses and expect to be able to make some money out of them next season, although it will require that a considerable investment be made during the summer to put the place in shape. The receiver now has a claim on his own account, for several hundred dollars, the sum representing the difference between receipts and expenses since he took charge.

The trustees on Tuesday sold the Winandy wholesale store at 51 Wabash avenue to John Zeck and Matt Mann, who took possession at once and are doing a commission business under the name of Zeck & Mann. Mr. Zeck, who has been years in the business, with J. A. Budlong and later with E. C. Amling, is a hard worker and well equipped to make the business a success. Mr. Mann is a well known grower north of town.

The Moninger Fire.

At two o'clock last Thursday morning a watchman discovered fire on the second floor of the greenhouse material mill of the John C. Moninger Co. It looked as though the plant was to be wiped out right in the height of the firm's busiest season, but thanks to the good work of the fire department and the fact that they keep their mill very clean, the fire was put out with a loss of only $3,000 to $4,000, insured. Two or three valuable machines were destroyed but they were such as could be replaced without delay and the factory was running next day as usual.

More Carnations.

Jacob Philip, at Rogers Park, has six houses in lettuce and on Monday will begin the erection of six more houses, each 24x142 and will plant the whole place to carnations for next season. Peter Reinberg is supplying him with 65,000 cuttings of standard sorts. Mr. Philip is one of the well known growers in his vicinity and it is not unlikely that several of his neighbors will follow his lead, for lettuce prices have been low this season.

Various Notes.

T. D. Moscososotes is said to have given a bill of sale to his brother.

C. M. Dickinson has returned to his desk after an absence of seven weeks, spent in regaining his health in the south.

F. F. Benthley has returned from two weeks' trip to New Orleans, Memphis, Little Rock and St. Louis. He reports trade active at those points and everybody anticipating a good spring business.

M. F. Kyle has taken charge of the greenhouses at the Home of the Incurables.

Geo. Pieser has opened a flower store in the basement of 72 Randolph street.

Kennicott Bros. Co. continues to receive considerable quantities of purple lilac, which sells well.

All the greenhouse material men report this the busiest season to date, mostly work for the smaller growers through the middle west, but it will doubtless be cheering intelligence to the local wholesalers that much of it is rebuilding and not new glass.

The E. F. Winterson Co. has moved its office to the north side of the store and is now much more conveniently situated.

Carl Thomas, of the A. L. Randall Co., says he looks for a different market proposition next week, when the large number of spring openings will call for large lots of stock.

The Market.

On some days we have had a rather druggy market, but taken on the whole it has been very good for Lent. On March 25 something of a boom took place and hardly a flower remained in the ice-chests. Roses are coming more plentifully. Prices remain about the same. Some extra good hybrids are coming in. Too few of these are now grown as compared with a few years ago. Carnations have sold as high as $4 on some occasions. The price for good stock seems to be $1.50 to $3, poorer grades going lower. Violets are in lessening supply and improve somewhat in price. All good flowers bring 50 cents, extras going to 60 and 75 cents. Bulbous stock remains about the same, clearing out remarkably well. There is no particular change in lilies, callas, valley, sweet peas and green goods.

Florists' Club.

At the meeting on March 21, in spite of the snowy weather, sixty-five members were present and nine new members were elected during the evening. Kenneth Finlayson spoke of the way in which American carnation names were being changed in Europe and thought the club might take some action toward preventing it. J. W. Duncan reported that E. N. Peirce & Son would like the club to visit their establishment about three weeks before Easter. The matter was referred to the executive committee.

W. H. Elliott spoke at length on his recent West Indian trip, where he covered over 6,000 miles by water and a considerable distance on land. Bermuda, 800 miles from Boston, was first visited. Little patches of lilies were dotted all over the island. Stevens & Co., the biggest growers, produce 1,200,000 bulbs. They are growing stock now on St. David's Island, where they expect to be able to keep them clear of disease. A good deal of disease was noticed on the main island. Strawberries were ripe early in February and would continue to produce until May. The people of the island are very progressive.

In Porto Rico the vegetation in the mountains is most luxuriant, reminding him of a big show house, the variety of plants being immense. Two hundred acres of Sumatra tobacco grown under canvas by the American Tobacco Co. was an interesting sight. In Jamaica the Castleton Garden and Hope Garden at Kingston were remarkably fine. Araucaria excelsa eighty feet high was noted and cotton trees with a spread of over 250 feet. Santiago-de-Cuba was the hottest place visited, the temperature in the shade there being 93 degrees. He was disappointed with San Juan hill. For florists Havana seemed to offer a good field. Very poor roses were selling at 50 cents per dozen on the streets and wretched little pansies at 35 cents per bunch. Nassau was last visited and was a very interesting place.

Various Notes.

With the Carnation and Rose Societies both meeting here next spring Boston is getting its full quota of conventions. The peony people no doubt will want to meet with us in June, 1906, and rumor has it that the S. A. F. will be next in line.

The visiting members paid visits to

One of our out of town growers shipped a quantity of carnations to one of the markets on March 20. Five days later, with a brisk market, they were trotted out, $1 per hundred readily secured and no questions asked.

Florists' Review,

334 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

Messrs:--

Some weeks ago I wrote asking you to stop my advertisements, and saying that no answers to my advertisements of Dahlias and Daisies had been received, though a hundred to my advertisement for help. You replied that something must be the matter with the plant advertisements. There was: It was simply that they were put in too soon, rushing the season. No sooner had I taken them out than replies to them, and orders, came pouring in, and my stock was sold. The buying time had come around.

I realize now that my advertisements were in the minds of these people, who in their own time, when they wanted the goods, answered them.

I beg your pardon, if I gave the impression that I blamed the Review. It was the fault of too early advertising. By the way, the Review, which you have kindly sent me for some time, you have since this episode discontinued. I would not be without it. Brother Scott's articles are worth a good many times the price. Please enter me as regular subscriber for one year, and add the amount, $1.00, to my account. Kindly send me the three last numbers I have not had.

Yours truly,

I. Merwin Rayner.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

With the coming of spring showers, zephyrs and sunshine the market has begun to "sit up and take notice" and a spirit of optimism prevails which will continue right through the Easter celebration. Prices have undoubtedly touched bottom and if there is any immediate change it must be for the better. There is consolation in clearing the ice-boxes daily at some figure. The street merchants virtually monopolize the violet business. Roses are plentiful and of superb quality. Carnations must be first-class to bring satisfactory figures and the medium and low grades go at the buyers' offer.

Lilies have steadied in value and are beginning their march toward the Easter standard. Orders for the best stock in pots have been heavily booked at 12 cents a flower. This will probably be the top, but there is no longer any doubt that the best quality will maintain this quotation to the end. Bulbous stock has decreased in volume. Smilax still brings 15 cents for the highest grade. The plant delivery has already begun, judging by the retail windows. It looks as though it would be a continuous Easter in that respect from now until the day itself arrives.

At Rutherford.

A visit to the establishment of Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., is inspiring nowadays, so various and extensive are the interests of this enterprising firm. In the nursery department an immense force is already busy packing and shipping to all parts of the country. The plant tub factory is in full blast and the stock of roses, lilies, azaleas, lilacs, rhododendrons and other blooming plants for Easter seems unlimited. Bobbink & Atkins have just issued their new catalogue, a handsome book of over 100 pages and some idea of the progress of the house may be seen in the work, which is issued at a cost of 50 cents each.

Over the way, at the great establishment of the Julius Roehrs Co., the stock of Easter flowering plants is only limited by the capacity of the houses. It is all in fine condition and comprises many novelties and all the old standard sorts. There must be 20,000 pots of lilies on the way. The orchid department, under the management of Edward Roehrs, is growing. Another new house is to be erected at once for the overflow. The company was reorganized in February and under its present name will doubtless continue for a century. Julius Roehrs, Sr., is president, Julius Roehrs, Jr., treasurer, and Edward Roehrs, director.

Various Notes.

Prof. Daere, with Young & Nugent, demonstrates his skill by artistic window dressing daily. A dream in valley and Enchantress was his Saturday offering. There is a continual change worthy of Broadway here.

Among the visitors last week were H. Schroeter and Fred Breitmeyer, of Detroit, and G. Tidy, of Toronto.

The New York visitors to the rose show included W. F. Sheridan, F. H. Traendly, J. B. Nugent, A. J. Guttman and Harry May. They all report a delightful time.

Ford Bros. took possession of their new quarters Saturday and seem delighted with the change to Twenty-eighth street. They have one of the roomiest and best stores in New York for their wholesale business and their ice-box is about the size of a summer cottage. An immense cellar adds to their facilities. Electric lights, large office conveniences and splendid ventilation and natural light at the end of the store leave nothing to be desired. Their confreres welcome them to easy street.

Additional subscriptions from A. Miller, Moore, Hentz & Nash and the Beauty King to the outing athletic fund have arrived. Every member of the club will have a hand in making this year's outing a great success.

April 10 is Easter plant night at the club, a fine opportunity for the growers. There are no better plantmen in America than in and around New York.

Geo. Hildenbrand, salesman with John Young, has announced the advent of the youngest wholesaler on Twenty-eighth street, John Hildenbrand, Jr., a twelve-pounder, who arrived safely last week from the land of perpetual flowers.

The Parker-Bruen Mfg. Co., under new management, has opened an office at 1133 Broadway. The factory remains at Harrison, N. J., where wire supports for carnations and tomatoes, pot hangers, glazing tacks, and other novelties are manufactured. The works are now being enlarged and facilities for a much larger business established. A large demand for their patent tomato support is developing from the south at present.

That violet syndicate at Rhinebeck referred to in our last is a reality and six big houses go up this summer as a starter. These with the fifty smaller ones already contracted for make the outlook for the violet season of 1905-06 somewhat hazy.

John Scott, of Brooklyn, has purchased a fine home near his Flatbush greenhouses, where he will reside close to his Scottii factory, where Dame Nature is working overtime to be in readiness for the spring demand.

BOWLING.

In the issue of March 23 your New York correspondent says among other things that on a certain day the Madison bowling team would "take its medicine" from which we may infer that in the final match at that date between the New York Florists' Club and the Madison Florists' Club, the New Yorkers were destined to win without question. The "medicine" must have been a tonic, for Madison won and the muse of Alfred Austin has fled. The only song he can sing over the occasion is a funeral dirge, for even his loose change was confiscated on that "black Friday" night and to quote his own words, "All that is left is a memory of better days."

There was really no basis for supposing that New York had an easy thing, since Madison had won four out of the

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Conditions continue unfavorable in the cut flower market. Heavy production, combined with weak and irregular demand, make returns averaging anywhere near listed prices an impossibility. Good roses are cheap and so plentiful that the poorer grades have no show whatever. Carnations have suffered severely. Even job lot sales will not carry off the surplus. Valley is more plentiful and now in excess of the demand. Violets are selling pretty well at low prices, but warm weather is rapidly destroying the quality as well as diminishing the quantity. Bulbous stock can be had at buyers' figures. Only fancy tulips sell, while the daffodil market has been completely swamped by the arrival of southern blooms. The bright features on this dark scene are the arrival of Gen. Jacqueminot roses at Bernheimer's and the sharp advance in price of smilax. Hardy ferns and wild smilax are also in fair demand. Indications point to an improvement at the opening of the month. Hope we won't be fooled!

The Spring Show.

The spring exhibition of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society opened in Horticultural Hall, on Tuesday. It is a very fine display. The plants are well grown and in good variety. The cut flowers are of excellent quality. A pair of handsome Bougainvillea Sanderiana in W. K. Harris' best style grace the stairway. Below are some hydrangeas, extremely well done, above a pretty group of flowering plants, including snowballs in pots from the W. H. Moon Company. The center of the main hall is filled by a magnificent group of foliage and flowering plants, including some rare specimens from the commissioners of Fairmount park, who drew from their Horticultural Hall. This group was beautifully arranged by the superintendent, Xavier E. Schmidt. There are two tables of choice orchids, one from Julius Roehrs, of Rutherford, N. J., the other from Lager & Hurrell, of Summit, N. J.

Joseph Heacock, of Wyncote, sent a handsome group of well grown kentias in commercial sizes. The large private estates near this city sent many specimens, lilies, azaleas, cinerarias, primroses, palms, stove plants, geraniums, etc. John McCleary, gardener to Mrs. R. J. C. Walker, and William Robertson, gardener to John W. Pepper, being notable exhibitors. The display of bulbous flowers is a feature, the tulips in pans being a sight to warm the heart of a Holland traveler.

There are some nice pot roses, Killarney and the Baby Rambler being seen for the first time here. The feature of the carnation display is John E. Haines, a superb scarlet brought with other seedlings by the great grower and hybridizer, John E. Haines, of Bethlehem, Pa. There are many other fine blooms of standard sorts. W. & H. Mergenthaler have a vase of fancy Maids and Brides in Robert Jamison's happiest vein. Taken altogether the show merits Secretary Rust's brief comment of approval. It is good. Go up and see it.

Logan.

Hugh Graham is to be congratulated upon a large and varied assortment of Easter plants. He has 15,000 azaleas apparently skillfully timed and in fine condition. Nearly one half are Mme. Van der Cruyssen, the balance being chiefly Bernard Andre alba and Vervaneana, mostly in "sixes." There are, I think, 6,000 or 8,000 lilies, chiefly longiflorum of good height, varying in the number of buds. Two thousand Spiraea superba, a variety which Mr. Grosshans, who courteously showed me over the place, considers of great merit. Some of the foliage standing up among the flowers adds grace. A few of these plants were splendid specimens in "tens." The fancy hyacinths in three or four of the best sorts were still outside, with an additional tent covering to keep back their growth. There were some large Crimson and a few dwarf Baby Ramblers. The feature of the Easter roses was a house of vigorous Ulrich Brunners in boxes with good stems just showing buds. Among the carnations Gov. Lowndes seemed especially prolific. There were half a dozen plants of a good seedling white with large flowers and good stem.

Various Notes.

Joseph Heacock has a splendid lot of well grown kentias, his made-up plants being particularly fine.

The Leo Niessen Co. is handling as high as 2,000 bunches of pansies daily.

The United States Cut Flower Co., of Elmira, N. Y., is sending daily shipments of fine Beauties and other roses to Berger Bros.

The Andorra Nurseries have a very fine lot of pin oaks in all sizes.

M. Rice & Co. are offering special inducements to insure the moving of their Easter baskets before they go to their new quarters in June.

C. F. Edgar, late of this city, is now with the United States Cut Flower Co.

Paul Berkowitz says that his firm, Bayersdorfer & Co., is just as busy as busy can be.

Samuel S. Pennock is handling a nice assortment of orchids.

The leaders of the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. are out on the road preparing for Easter.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons have had some busy days lately at the Bellevue-Stratford. A dinner on Saturday at short notice for 100 covers was very elaborate. Another good-sized affair on the same day was for the Five O'clock Club.

Antoine Wintzer states that the Conard & Jones Co. benched twelve dormant grafted plants of Etoile de France in December last and from them he secured 250 cuttings, now growing nicely in 2½-inch pots. Another batch is just going into the sand. Mr. Wintzer believes this rose will bear watching as a forcer.

Answers to Correspondents.

Review readers are invited to send any questions relating to culture or marketing of plants and flowers in Philadelphia, to Phil in care of the leading seed or commission houses or the Flower Market. Each question will be submitted to a competent person and answered under number. Correct name and address must always accompany inquiry, but will not be published.

38.—Tell me what ails my carnations. Joost and Queen Louise stand up well on the plant but droop after cutting. Lillian Pond has weak stems and the flowers burst. They are planted in a solid bed. Would ground bone be of benefit?

It is probable that the carnations have been grown too warm and too wet. In that case grow them cooler and let them dry out a little, but do not go to extremes. Dust the soil lightly with air-slaked lime. Most soils are benefited by an application of pure bone. It might be well to apply the lime and get the soil in good condition before putting on the bone and mixed with or lightly covered by soil. The vast majority of carnations under glass are grown on benches. Lillian Pond has been giving trouble in a number of places.

39.—What causes yellow spots on my Easter lilies?

Possibly bad glass, in which case touch each blister with paint; but more likely the disease, for which no cure is known. Destroy the plants that are badly affected. Grow the others carefully.

BUFFALO.

Various Comment.

They are nearly all complaining of rather slow business. Violets have been sold very cheaply, but still the ladies did not wear them at the dog show last week, thinking that the two odors might cause some dangerous combination. Carnations are very plentiful and quality fine. From present appearance there will be an abundance of Easter stock, lilies especially, but I am going to get my Packard's chauffeur and have a look at all the boys within ten miles and then I can distribute authentic information. It is some years since we have had a more beautiful March and if the sun continues to beam on us as it has of late there will be lots of ingenuity needed to keep things back.

As an evidence of progress we notice young men coming to town to take positions in our leading stores. S. E. Holmes, for years with Robert Kift, of Philadelphia, is leading artist for Miss Rachel Rebstock, dear Rachel, whom everybody likes. Mr. H. is just the type of young man that our refined business demands, genteel in appearance, without being a fop and courteous and polite without being too obsequious and if he is minus the harsh western New York accent he is none the worse. If this is not a faithful pen picture of Mr. Holmes, it is about what a florists' clerk should be. A Mr. Johnson, of Rochester, has taken a position with S. A. Anderson.

William W. Wells, late with C. D. Zimmerman, has bought the business and stock of James Buxton, on Niagara street. Mr. Wells is a graduate of Mr. Carmody's of Posey county, Indiana.

We had a call recently from Walter Muston, of Toronto, and Mr. Jennings, manager of the flower department of the continentally known department house of Timothy Eaton. The immense dimensions of the flower department would dwarf into Liliputian size, with few exceptions, all or any of the flower stores of the continent. Just one item, it took twenty-five girls to wait on the flower counter last Saturday. Popular prices rule and ninety per cent of the buyers would not patronize a regular florists' store, but let us not sneer or get jealous of that. It spreads the desire and love and use of flowers and all connected with the business must be benefited by this wide distribution of our products. Flowers are a pure luxury at first, but they become a necessity and the masses of our people will have to travel upward a long way before the love of flowers and plants is as universal as it is in some countries of Europe. We do not expect to live to see showers of violets drop from the ceiling on the banquet table as they did when Nero gave his voluptuous feasts, but we do observe a continuous increase in the use of flowers among a class of people who twenty years ago considered them beyond their reach.

Who should walk in but James Hartshorne, of Joliet, on his way back from Boston and Philadelphia. Never saw James look better. There is a healthy Cardinal color on his cheeks, a Fiancee glance from his eye and a Lady Bountiful smile diffusing his whole make-up. Can't see any Harlowarden about him, he is too "sawed off" to resemble that great crimson.

On March 21 the B. F. C. held its annual meeting and election of officers. Louis H. Neubeck was elected president, Charles Guenther vice-president, W. Peck secretary, Emile Brucker financial secretary and Charles H. Keitsch treasurer. Messrs. George Urban, Jr., W. F. Kasting and W. Scott, executive committee. After business about forty florists climbed the stairs to one of the spacious halls of Mr. Kasting's emporium. Roses decorated the tables and instrumental music stimulated the appetite. There were several happy and pleasant talks, all rather above the average of other years. An amusing incident was Mr. Slattery accusing W. A. Adams of having made a floral dog for his firm's window and running short of flowers cut out one leg instead of dispensing with the tail. Mr. Adams defended himself in gallant style and said it was a bull dog and the loss of a leg in a fight was not an unusual incident. Other addresses were on more weighty subjects, but only of local interest. Never have we had a brighter, more energetic or business-like man to lead us to usefulness than Louis Neubeck.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. W. Kirkpatrick, McKinney, Tex.; Vice-Pres., C. L. Watrous, Des Moines; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 29th annual convention will be held at West Baden, Ind., June, 1906.

WE now have a parcels-post arrangement with Belgium.

THE season promises to be a short and desperately busy one for the nurserymen.

LOUIS H. FRESSE, Coatsburg, Ill., will remove his nursery business to Quincy, Ill.

THE J. B. Hutchison nursery, at Litchfield, Ill., has been established forty years.

THE increase in wealth in the middle west is bringing eastern landscape architects a great many orders from that region.

A GREAT many florists are beginning to find out how well a business in shrubs and small trees fits in with other planting work.

THE Clinton Falls Nursery Co., Owatonna, Minn., has secured a big planting contract at Frankfort, South Dakota, for A. C. Johnson.

AT Minneapolis the park department is doing considerable planting this spring, but much of the stock is coming from the department nursery.

SEVERAL nurseries in the latitude of Long Island are low bidders for northern planting contracts, because they can be executed at the close of the local season.

THROUGH the middle west a great deal of ornamental stock will be planted this spring, most of it on small orders, but calling for material of good quality and size.

W. F. HEIKES is developing a big business at Biloxi, Miss., the branch of the Huntsville Wholesale Nursery, where conditions are peculiarly favorable for roses, pecans, etc.

THE extent of the business in strawberry plants now done by some nurseries is something surprising. The Harrison & Sons nursery, at Berlin, Md., handles such sorts as Bubach, Gandy, Mitchell's Early and Parsons in half-million lots and more and has a list of some fifty sorts.

CONGRESS has passed a law entitled "An act to prohibit importation or interstate transportation of insect pests, and the use of the United States mails for that purpose." Any one who shall knowingly cause to be so transported any insect harmful to plant life shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not less than five years. Specimens for scientific purposes are excepted under regulations yet to be announced.

SHRUBS FROM JAPAN.

[An extract from a paper by Joseph Meehan, read under the general heading, "Our Horticultural Indebtedness to Japan," before the Germantown Horticultural Society, March 13, 1905.]

The list of shrubs which Japan has sent us is a very large one, and, in fact, it is to their introduction that we are indebted for much of the praise travelers bestow on the appearance of our grounds in the spring of the year. The well-known Golden Bell forsythia; the Weigelia rosea, many of the spiræas, and the exochorda, are all near neighbors in that part of the world.

Then think of the beauty and usefulness of the Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora; the Japanese snowball, Viburnum plicatum; the Berberis Thunbergii, the Cercis Japonica and the Lespedeza Sieboldi, all now among our common shrubs. And there may be added the Kerria Japonica, the Hamamelis Japonica, many hypericums, the Tamarix Japonica and the Rhodotypos Kerrioides.

The hardy orange, Citrus trifoliata, which is exciting so much attention as the probable forerunner of a race of hardy oranges, is from Japan. This is hardy as far north as New York. It fruits freely, but the oranges are too bitter to be eaten.

You all know the value of the privet

we now use so freely for hedging. It, too, is Japanese, the name Californian being given it because it found its way east by way of California. There is another privet from Japan, called Japonicum, a true evergreen, and hardy about Philadelphia.

We must not forget the roses from Japan. The list is a long one, but standing out prominently are the Rosa rugosa and the Rosa multiflora, and the many valuable hybrids raised from them.

Styrax Japonica is a large shrub, almost a small tree, which bears pretty clusters of white flowers in spring. There are many styraxes native here, but none of them is the equal of Japonica.

Xanthoceras sorbifolia is a Chinese shrub, but I am tempted to include it among the rest of the shrubs, it is such a lovely thing when in bloom. The flowers are white, with red streaks at the base, very large, and are produced in early spring. It is not yet as well known as it should be.

Seed Trade News.

Pres., C. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 23rd annual meeting will be held on the St. Lawrence, June, 1906.

H. L. MUSSER, of Johnson & Musser Seed Co., Los Angeles, has had a bad month with liver trouble but is again on deck.

THE seed business in all its branches is very active for this date. It should mean a good total at the end of the season.

"BUSINESS is picking up and we are getting quite busy," is the way an optimistic seedsman reports conditions in his territory.

THE weather at Chicago the past week has been from twelve to twenty degrees above normal. Counter trade is becoming active.

At the beginning of March there was general alarm at the prolonged drought in Great Britain but the last week has brought deluges of rain.

THE skirmishers who trade in sundry lines properly belonging to the seed trade and who have offices only in their hats find it hard to pull anything out of it this year.

THE U. S. Department of Agriculture has issued as Bulletin No. 51, Bureau of Plant Industry, a compilation of the legal weights of seeds so far as established, with the seedsmen's customary weights.

ONION seed is still in sharp demand. There are not enough of the Globe varieties easily available for rush orders where they are most needed. It is said, however, that there are still good quantities at out-of-the-way locations.

THE small dealers throughout the country report one of the best seasons they have ever had. This condition of things is encouraging more and more of the general merchants of the country towns to put in a full line of seeds.

Nor much change in the onion set situation since last week. An effort to clean up at several of the jobbing centers has lowered the price somewhat, but a sharp advance is expected again when trade at the more northern sections gets into full swing.

THE unusual warmth of the weather of the past week throughout the central west has pushed trade almost beyond the capacity of the seed houses in that section to care for it and the consequent letters of complaint for slowness in filling orders begin to arrive.

THE Johnson & Musser Seed Co., publishes periodically and mails free to customers and prospective buyers, a four page paper called "The Market Gardener" containing cultural matter suited to conditions in Southern California and little that looks like advertising.

O. M. BALL, of the Texas Experiment Station, says that he has never been able to discover that alfalfa seed was willfully adulterated but that nevertheless many of the samples sent him contain weed seeds, sometimes as many as twenty to the ounce being the Russian thistle.

SEED PACKING.

Referring to the note recently reprinted in the REVIEW, wherein Wm.
Watson, of Kew, said that: "For seeds generally I know of nothing better than paper packets or calico bags; and the more moisture there is in the seeds themselves when thus packed the better.
Hermetically sealed tins or bottles should never be used," J. W. T. Duvel, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture writes:

Carefully-conducted experiments have given results which are diametrically opposed to those set forth by Mr.
Watson. By far the vast majority of seeds retain their vitality the better the more thoroughly they are dried. Seeds put up in paper packets or cloth bags may remain germinable for a number of years if kept in a dry climate; on the other hand, seeds put up in the same manner, and sent to places having warm, moist climates, deteriorate very rapidly.
But in all cases, excepting the special kinds of seeds which lose their vitality on becoming dry, the best results are obtained when seeds are carefully dried and packed in hermetically sealed containers. When prepared in this manner the seeds must be dried at a temperature slightly higher than any degree of heat to which the sealed containers will be subjected. Seeds prepared in this way will remain viable in any climate. This applies particularly to agricultural and garden seeds of the temperate regions.
Many seedsmen now use the hermetically sealed containers for the transportation of seeds, especially those which are sent to tropical and subtropical countries.

The following data, taken from a long series of experiments, will show the advisability of carefully drying seeds and packing in air-tight containers to guard against the entrance of any moisture:

Cabbage and onion seed stored at Mobile, Alabama, for 131 days, from December 20, 1901, to April 30, 1902, in paper packages and in sealed bottles respectively, showed the following germination: Cabbage from the envelope, 60 per cent; from the bottle, 84 per cent; onion seed from the envelope, 19.5 per cent; from the bottle, 86 per cent.
Unpublished data are as follows:

Onion seeds from paper packages, after being stored one year in Kingston, Jamaica, germinated only four per cent, while seed from sealed bottles germinated 87 per cent. The same from Puerto Principe, Cuba, gave 0 per cent and 82 per cent respectively. Lettuce seed stored one year in Manila, Philippine Islands, germinated 0 per cent and 95 per cent respectively; Bridgetown, Barbados, 0 per cent and 94 per cent respectively from the envelopes and bottles.
The greatest factor in causing the loss of vitality in seeds of the field or garden is moisture.

SCAB ON BEETS.

Can you tell me the cause of, and remedy for, scab on table beets? On some of my soil they are almost all scabby, somewhat similar to scab on potatoes, but raised up more, like rough warts. The soil that produces the scab is quite rich and loamy and the most of it received a liberal application of lime four or five years ago, the balance of it having received a fair dose of wood ashes about eight years ago. The soil that produces clean beets is a very heavy and probably acid soil, made stiffer by irrigating celery, as the latter is the principal crop I raise on it. The scab cannot be caused by manure, unless the acid in the heavy soil kills the scab, as I manure almost all my soil every year. While I think it is no richer, I could raise better beets on the light soil, were it not for the scab, which renders them unsalable. The scab is worse on the lime-treated than on the soil treated with wood ashes. Most crops do well on all of my soil.

S. P. S.

Scab in beets is sometimes caused by corrosive or irritant substances in the soil, but most generally the trouble is caused by a fungus. Some claim it is the same fungus which causes scab on potatoes. Of this I am not certain, but the scabs on potatoes and beets certainly look very much alike. There is no cure for it, as far as I know. The only thing to do is to avoid planting in affected soil; that is, in soil where the germs of scab fungus are present, but instead grow some crop in this soil on which the fungus will have no effect. And in the course of a year or two the germs will die out on account of having nothing to work on. Also avoid leaving beet tops on the ground to rot or be turned under. A great many fungus diseases are originated on decayed vegetable matter.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The flood certainly had a depressing effect on business the past week and as a result the wholesalers were loaded up. There was considerable complaint and stock of all kinds sold very cheap. Owing to the warm rains we have been having lilacs and other early shrubbery is coming out in leaf and we fear the results of the later frosts if we do not soon have cooler weather.

Various Notes.

Blind Brothers have been particularly unfortunate in losing horses this winter. They lost the third one Saturday, a fine young driving horse, valued at $400.

Mrs. E. A. Williams was partially flooded out last week, which caused considerable inconvenience as she had quite a busy week, with a number of small social affairs.

Remember the next meeting of the club, April 4. The subject for discussion will be Easter novelties. We expect to see something in plants which will be interesting.

The Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co. has a 400-foot house of Kaiserins which look very promising. They are also cutting very fine Maids and Brides at present.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. was among the flood victims, and the boys have been spending all their spare time working a new pump. They finished late Saturday.

Thos. M. Ulam filed a petition in bankruptcy in the United States District Court last week. He gives his liabilities at $10,235 and his assets at $4,458.35.

There is much speculating among the trade as to what they will have for Easter. The plants intended for Easter are all coming into bloom, bulbous stock will all be gone and it is hardly likely violets will be much good.

Supt. Geo. Burke and his assistant, John Jones, are actively preparing for the spring flower show at the Phipps conservatory, Schenley park, which will be thrown open April 9, with about 20,000 blooming bulbs, hyacinths, narcissi, lilies, etc. This will be replenished from time to time until after Easter.

The Market.

Despite numerous handicaps, trade the past week was reported as prospering a little in the cut flower line, but not as much as in the planting line. With this kind of work the greenhouse men have more than they can attend to at the present time. There is a good deal of speculation among the store men as to Easter supply in both cut and plant stock. The weather here is clear and warm and is forcing the blooms along too rapidly to suit the growers. From the report of some who have visited most of the large growers there will be plenty of Harrisii, callas, and other bulbous stock, but as Easter is very late this year it is hard to tell just how things will be three weeks from now.

At the wholesale houses stock is decidedly more plentiful than the demand calls for. As a consequence the fakir and the down town stores that buy cheap in large lots are decidedly better off than the west end florists who have little transient trade and are, of course, not buying an oversupply. Prices are still very low and only the very choice stock is being disposed of, while common stock has to be dumped. Beauties have weakened. Extra select are down to $3 per dozen. Other roses are plentiful. White has the call.

The supply of carnations is heavy. Light colors sell better than the dark. Fancies are down to $2.50 per hundred. After the morning sales there is a great accumulation of surplus stock to pack away. All bulbous stock is in heavy supply, especially Harrisii and callas, also tulips, Dutch hyacinths and Von Sions. Valley is fine, but too much of it is in the market. Violets are becoming small and off color. The wholesalers are cleaning them out every morning at the rate of 15 and 20 cents per hundred in 5,000 lots. Light colored sweet peas are selling fairly well. Good smilax is down to 12½ cents per string. All other greens remain the same as last quoted. I hope for a more encouraging market report in the next issue.

Various Notes.

F. F. Benthey, senior member of the Benthey-Coatsworth Co., Chicago, was a visitor the past week and made the rounds of the trade in company with Frank M. Ellis.

John J. Burke, at Gould and Finney avenues, has sold out to W. H. Miller, who will continue the business. Mr. Miller has had no experience in the cut flower trade.

Geo. Angermuller, for many years bookkeeper for C. A. Kuehn, will open a wholesale commission house at 1324 Pine street. The place will open for business April 1. The location is half way between Ellis and Berning, in the wholesale district.

The Simmons Hardware Co. has opened its retail seed department for the sale of all kinds of garden seeds.

J. H. Billington, at 5413 Easton avenue, has advertised his place for sale. Domestic troubles have caused Mr. Billington to take this step. He has been offered a good government position at Washington, D. C.

Green & Gorley, on Cass avenue, report a big trade in funeral work the past week.

is very quiet, but plenty of outdoor work to keep all hands busy for the next six weeks.

State Vice-President Frank Filmore of the S. A. F., is working overtime for new members to join the society and attend the meeting at Washington next August.

C. Young & Sons Co. reports heavy shipping orders for plants and seeds.

The committee which has charge of the fall flower show reports that the preliminary list will be out by next week, ready to mail to all growers. The ball proposition is still a thorn in their path.

The Koenig Floral Co. and Fred Meinhardt are very busy with cemetery work. The fine weather of the past week was a great help to them in preparing the grounds for early planting.

Geo. M. Kessler, director of restoration of Forest park, has a big force of men working on the grounds. The fine weather is a great help.

CARNATIONS

We offer first-class stock of the finest varieties.

Strong Rooted Cuttings

Variegated Lawson This variety which we are introducing this season we are sure will prove to be the very best variegated sort. Pure ivory white with delicate carmine pencillings. Mr. W. N. Craig, an authority on everything pertaining to horticulture, says that he knows that this variety will out-bloom the favorite, Mrs. M. A. Patten three to one. It has the Lawson habit and stem, and is bound to give satisfaction. $12 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Red Lawson A bright red sport of Lawson that is bound to be popular, and will be grown where Lawson is popular. $10.00 per 100; $75 per 1000.

Cardinal Bright cardinal, or crimson-scarlet. Won first prize for best 100 scarlet, first prize for best 50 carnations any color, first prize for best 50 scarlet seedlings, Chicago. $12.00 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Fiancee The queen of pink carnations; in a class by itself. Magnificent flowers, strictly fancy in every respect. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

White Lawson We consider this variety, which we introduced last season, the most profitable white carnation ever sent out. We think it will outbloom any other white two to one. It has given great satisfaction. When the flowers are left on the plants until fully developed they are much larger than Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson. We believe this will occupy among white carnations the same place that Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson does among pink carnations. Remember that we are headquarters for it. Splendid stock ready for immediate delivery. $7.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

Fred Burki Recommended as an extra free-blooming white variety and a claimant for popular favor. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Lady Bountiful A magnificent white of last season's introduction. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Daheim Dark crimson. Grand stiff stem. Calyx never bursts. Free and abundant bloomer, developing very quickly. We consider this the best all-round crimson carnation. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Mrs. M. A. Patten This grand variegated carnation has given splendid satisfaction. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Enchantress Freest blooming, bringing highest market prices. In great demand. $4.00 per 100; $30.00 per 1000.

Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

Prosperity A magnificent fancy carnation. $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

We are now prepared to book orders for 1906 for the Coming Scarlet Victory. This is a real bread and butter variety. An early, free and abundant bloomer, with good stem; a magnificent keeper and shipper; flowers of the largest size, commanding the very highest price. This is going to be a money-maker. Orders will be filled in rotation, as received. Delivery beginning December next. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Breitmeyer's Building.

Shortly after Easter John Breitmeyer's Sons will remove their retail store from the well-known stand at Gratiot and Miami avenues. They will go a few doors down the street for the summer, and the old building will be torn down and replaced by an eight-story steel structure in which the Breitmeyers will occupy the corner store and have the most up-to-date establishment of its kind in the country.

The old store has a history. It is a frame structure and was on the outskirts of town when erected. The lot, 50x100, cost the man who built the house the sum of $400. This was in 1844. The frame of the house is oak, and it has stood for several remodelings. John Breitmeyer bought the property in 1887 for $30,000.

Frank Beard.

Frank Beard, of the firm of Beard Bros., who died March 20, following an operation for appendicitis, was one of the most popular members of the Detroit Florists' Club, which was largely represented at his funeral. Mr. Beard was a resident of Woodmere since childhood and always took an active interest in the affairs of the village, having been a member of the first council. He served on the school board for seventeen years and enjoyed a large circle of friends. He was forty-three years of age and leaves a widow and three children, besides several brothers and sisters.

Frank H. Beard, to whom death came in his forty-third year of life, was beloved by all who knew him, for his nature was a genial, loving and truthful one. He was always a willing worker in any work connected with the entertainment of visiting florists to our city. A wise counselor in any business in which he was interested. Mr. Beard was elected director of the school district in which he was educated for the fourth term last fall. He will be greatly missed in the meetings of the Detroit Florists' Club, who attended the funeral in a body and acted as escort. He leaves a widow, two boys and one girl. KAG.

TRANSPLANTING HARDY PALMS.

The transplanting of hardy palms from the open ground into tubs or for replanting in the soil in some other locality, is a proposition that appears to be not well understood by many of our growers and not at all by the public. One of our most valuable and beautiful trees, the California fan palm, which we are accustomed to transplant even when from ten to fifteen feet high, is, unless conditions are favorable, not an easy subject to handle.

This is the best season of the entire year to transplant anything in the palm line. I have found November, December and January to be the most difficult months to make a success in lifting palms. To begin with, in the central and northern portions of this coast the palm has a distinct resting season, which is during the months I have named, and they do not make any growth, practically, during those months. Consequently if they are taken from the ground and "balled" and replanted they will not make any effort to send out new roots until the early spring. In the meanwhile the foliage generally begins to wither and, although the plant probably will not die, it always takes several years before it again becomes salable.

There is very little trouble in transplanting in March or April, as the plants are then engaged in making new roots and it is surprising how quickly they take hold after they have been shifted. It makes little difference whether a plant is only three feet high or whether it is ten feet; the same rule applies. Of course I do not refer to plants that are grown in pots or boxes, as they can be handled safely at any time, but in our larger nurseries the majority of hardy palms are field-grown and I have seen many noble specimens destroyed because they were dug up at the wrong time. Frosty weather to a considerable extent also retards their recovery and too much moisture will act the same way.

I have referred principally to the various kinds of braheas, phoenix and erytheas, as they are the most beautiful of our hardy palms. All the varieties of chamærops are extremely easy to transplant and it can be done with perfect safety at any time; in fact, I consider them the only palms whose growth after transplanting can be guaranteed. With the other kinds, I have mentioned it is well to tie up the leaves completely for a period of a month if there is any danger of their not taking hold immediately after planting, and if the leaves persist in drying up it is well to cut them off back to the stump, which will probably make a new set of leaves in a few months. There should, however, be no danger in handling palms of any size from the open ground during this month, as the time of year I have found to be more important than any other item in digging them. The whole proposition is to transplant them just when they are commencing to make their new growth and roots in the early spring and before the weather becomes too warm. G.

PORTLAND, ORE.

Business Good.

We are passing through a most prosperous season. For two months business has kept up at a steady gait and all signs indicate that it will continue so. February was an exceptionally good month and showed a substantial increase over the same month a year ago. First of all we have been blessed with perfect weather, plenty of sunshine, and gentle spring emerged from its winter quarters six weeks ahead of scheduled time. The cut flower market is well supplied with the best and it is only the most inferior stock which falls by the wayside. The fine, long-stemmed roses now being offered by the local growers, we venture to say, cannot be beaten anywhere. Carnations are improving in quality and there are none too many of them. The warm spell proved too much for violets and they are suffering from quick consumption. Outdoor-grown bulbous stock has been in oversupply and another week will see its finish.

Various Notes.

At this writing gardening and spring planting is in full operation. The lawn mower is much in evidence and early shrubbery is in full bloom. A civic improvement league formed here three months ago is doing good work. Every inducement is offered all classes to help make Portland worthy of its name, "the rose city." The florists and seedsmen gave liberally toward this enterprise, their donations of plants and seeds being distributed among the school children. Premiums of a general character are offered as an incentive for excellence in this cause.

It is always refreshing to meet our eastern friends. Mr. Fotheringham was here two weeks ago, introducing all the latest varieties of carnations. And then came the portly Arnold Ringier, who arrived in time to help us celebrate St. Patrick's day. Both gentlemen report business good. While here Mr. Ringier was taken for a Russian naval officer by the lady guests at the Portland Hotel, and one of the numerous courtesies extended him was an automobile ride out to the Lewis and Clark fair grounds.

SEATTLE, WASH.

After being five years out of the business H. B. Buddenborg has arranged to enter it again. He has just organized and incorporated the Seattle Greenhouse Co., the stock of which is held by George H. Randall and himself. The company now has under construction two houses each 20x100 and expects to build six more. Carnations, roses and chrysanthemums will be grown for wholesaling.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We are in the midst of Lent and business is only fair. I have made an effort to find out from several of our leading retailers, whether trade is as good with them now as it was a year ago and am able to report that the balance has been in favor of this year thus far; we have had better weather and flowers have been more plentiful and this, coupled with the fact that there is now a good steady demand for all classes of good stock, shows that everything is in a healthy condition. Roses are not very plentiful and fancy stock is in good demand. Carnations have lowered a little in price but they are selling well. Lilac, although not as abundant as in former years, sells well and at good figures. Violets are practically over, as well as narcissi and daffodils. Fruit blossoms are being brought into town in large quantities and the florists are selling more of them than they usually do. Wild flowers of some sorts are much in evidence, but they are hardly at their best. Greens and grasses of all kinds are moving well and make up the bulk of the goods handled by many of the smaller dealers.

The Market.

The usual Lenten season begins to have effect among the growers as well as dealers. With weather like June, all kinds of blooming plants are coming in at once, thus causing a glut in the market. Large quantities find their way to the dump. People are making preparations for planting out bedding stock. Roses are getting smaller and prices are dropping. Extra fine teas are bringing from 8 to 10 cents, ordinary stock from 2 to 6 cents.

Carnations are bringing from $1 to $2 per hundred, violets from $1 to $1.50 per thousand, lilies 8 to 10 cents, peas 25 cents per bunch, mignonette $1 per hundred, tulips and jonquils 75 cents to $1.50 per hundred. Southern daffodils are now coming in large quantities and sell at from 25 to 75 cents per hundred.

Various Notes.

Among the retailers up town George Cook says dinner work dropped a little, but he has considerable funeral work to keep him busy.

Mr. Kimmell, who for a long time was with Mr. Cook and very popular among the craft, is about to open a store on the corner of Fourteenth and Massachusetts avenue, a fine location and a handsome store, and no doubt after a life experience in the business he will make a success.

Geo. Shaffer seems to be always busy. His store is always packed with stock and he keeps his force hustling.

Mayberry & Hoover, at the popular Fourteenth street store, claim Lent "cuts no ice" with them. They did two large store decorations last week. One store alone used fifty dozen palms, besides many blooming plants.

Chauncey Brooks makes funeral work his specialty and his force is always kept busy.

Z. D. Blackistone reports plenty of weddings and dinners for the last two weeks. He says Lent does not make much difference.

The bowling team is beginning to practice for the coming convention. There will be something doing, so says Capt. Ernest, if he can only keep his men in line. Mr. Cauly is getting ready to organize the ladies' team and wants the assistance of several young good looking men to aid him.

ADVERTISERS AND ADVERTISING.

Why in Sam Hill don't your advertisers keep their advertising up to date, or, in other words, if they are sold out of stock, why don't they cut out their advertising until they are again in a position to supply goods? During the past week I sent away orders, in every case accompanied by cash in payment for different articles advertised in your columns and out of six orders in no less than four cases the money was returned with regrets that stock was sold out.

Now, Mr. Editor, you perhaps can be congratulated, since it shows that the REVIEW certainly sells the plants but how about the man who wants to buy and the man who has to return the money because he cannot supply them? A man who sends an advertisement to run for a certain length of time and finds himself sold out after one or two insertions should certainly spend 2 cents in notifying you to hold out his advertisement until he was again in a condition to fill orders. He would save money on the deal and his prospective customers would save the annoyance of having to hunt elsewhere.

The florist has the reputation of being the poorest business man going, and cases like this seem to prove it. When the hardware man is sold out on stoves he will advertise a cut in wire nails. When the dry goods merchant finds his stocks running low in shirt waists, he calls special attention to his latest thing in petticoats, but the florist drifts along in the same old way whether he is sold out on Enchantress cuttings or no.

When I have anything to sell commend me to the REVIEW but in the meantime I hope my brother florists will take these remarks to heart. CITIZEN FIXIT.

[The publisher agrees most heartily with the above. When you are sold out, by all means stop the advertisement promptly. Don't neglect it. It impairs the value of your own next advertisement and of all other advertising to let the dead offer stand. And just a word on another point. If you cannot ship the goods the day the order is received, by all means send a postal card stating when you will ship. You will find that buyers will appreciate it.]

WILLIAMSVILLE, N. Y.

C. B. Shisler has plans out for the erection of another propagating house this season. He reports the call for geranium cuttings ahead of supply and is compelled to increase his capacity to accommodate his fast growing trade in this line. Harrisii lilies here are almost a total failure, but a nice batch of longiflorums are just right for Easter.

Byrne Bros.' new place looks well considering the late date at which their houses were completed. Carnations here are a feature as well as a general line of Easter stock, etc., for their Buffalo store.

TORONTO.

The weather during the past week has been ideal and spring stock is rushing ahead. Many of the growers are wondering whether they are going to have any bulbous stock left by Easter. Easter lilies are coming in very plentifully at present but we anticipate no shortage in them for Easter. Roses and carnations are abundant and the prices quoted in quantities certainly bear this statement out.

Grobba & Wandrey are sending in some very fine double tulips. Their Murillo are at present the finest seen this season.

John Cotterill has some very fine La Reine, stems and blooms are all that could be desired. D. J.

LOCKPORT, N. Y.

F. G. Lewis' place looks very good. He reports Lawson not quite equal to last year, but his stock would be a credit to any place. Enchantress is quite extensively grown and is satisfactory. Mr. Lewis seems to be well blessed with sports. Enchantress has sported in three colors. He is sending out a red sport from Lawson, which is fine, but the wonder of the place is another red sport from Lawson, which in color promises to be far ahead of anything in red. He intends giving up his decorative trade and will devote all his space to carnations. Trade here has been very good all winter, but since Lent began has quieted a bit.

THE CARNATION MEASURE.

A couple of weeks ago the REVIEW published a note on a pocket measure for carnation blooms got out by the Kroeschell Bros. Co., 51 Erie street, Chicago, stating that the Kroeschell Co. would send one to anyone who sent a 2-cent stamp to pay the postage. Immediately requests from REVIEW readers began to come in on every mail, requests from New England, from Long Island, from Texas and from Denver. And what surprised Mr. Kroeschell was that by far the greater number of requests came from the extreme east. Mr. Kroeschell had fallen into the error, not uncommon, perhaps, of considering the REVIEW as a Chicago paper; it is National in all its features.

SCALE ON PALM.

I enclose a palm leaf and would like to know the name of and remedy for the scale with which it is infested.

S. J. P.

The scale insect on the palm leaflet forwarded by S. J. P. appears to be a lecanium, though I do not know what particular species it is. It is probable that the question of identity could be settled by the entomologist at your state agricultural college.

A careful sponging with solution of tobacco soap, whale oil soap or fir-tree oil would be the safest method of treatment, though it is quite probable that one application would not kill all the insects, there being a great number of minute young insects that are only visible with the aid of a microscope of moderate power, in addition to those of full growth that are readily seen with the naked eye. W. H. TAPLIN.

DEUTZIA AND SPIRAEA.

When may Deutzia gracilis and Spiraea Van Houttei be brought into bloom if we bring them in now from open ground in central Illinois and keep in a night temperature of 50 to 55 degrees? C. M. B.

Before these lines can be read by the inquirer it will be too late to give advice about Easter, because they should have at least four weeks in the temperature quoted, from a dormant state, and the spiraea will be better with five weeks. We infer that C. M. B. intends digging these shrubs from the open ground. They will doubtless flower, but not as satisfactorily as would plants prepared for forcing. Lilac, spiraea, viburnum, pyrus, deutzia and other hardy shrubs should be grown in pots the previous summer. W. S.

DENVER, COLO.—C. F. Maler has decided to erect four greenhouses 14x100, using the style of connected houses put up by the King Construction Co., North Tonawanda, N. Y., where he obtained his material.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

With the beautiful spring weather business continues good. There are quantities of all kinds of stock coming in and all orders can be well filled. Roses are most plentiful, especially Maids. Other varieties are also somewhat in excess of the demand. American Beauties are more in evidence than they have been for a long time. Some of the blooms show the effects of the bright sunshine. Carnations are not quite so plentiful but the supply is sufficiently large to keep the price down. The quality of the stock is very good.

Bulbous stock is also in abundance and sells fairly well but at low figures. Lilies of all kinds are especially hard to move. Good tulips go best. The supply of violets is fast ebbing; single ones are about out of the market but some good doubles are still to be had.

Various Notes.

Easter is fast approaching and will be upon us before we know it if we don't look out. Prospects are unusually bright for a good lot of flowers. From present indications outdoor flowers will be over, especially if the present weather holds out. Some of our growers will have to look sharp or their lilies and bulbous stock will arrive too soon. The only possible shortage may be carnations. Roses will be first-class. Beauties especially ought to make a fine crop by then.

A party of from ten to fifteen florists of this city intend to leave Wednesday for a trip to New Castle, Ind., to view the many large establishments there. Some of them intend to make side trips to other Indiana cities, but the majority will return home the same day.

Visitors: Mr. McGregor, of Springfield and Mr. Fahncourt, of Philadelphia.

Here are three good carnations. FLAMBEAU, a most satisfactory scarlet; INDIANA MARKET, a free blooming white, and BEATRICE, the freest blooming and most profitable light pink on the market. These three are not giant, fancy, shy-blooming exhibition varieties, but are every-day bread and butter sorts and are just what you should have. Price: $10.00 100; $80.00 1000.
